We need Christ just as much in our bright, prosperous, exalted hours as in the days of darkness, adversity, and depression. We are quite in danger of thinking that religion is only for sick-rooms and funerals, and for times of great sorrow and trial—a lamp to shine at night, a staff to help when the road is rough, a friendly hand to hold us up when we are stumbling. This is not true. Jesus went to the marriage feast as well as to the home of sorrow. His religion is just as much for our days of grief. There are just as many stars in the sky at noon as at midnight, although we can not see them in the sun's glare. And there are just as many comforts, promises, divine encouragements and blessings above us when we are in the noons of our human gladness and earthly success, as when we are in our nights of pain and shadow. We may not see them in the brightness about us, but they are there, and their benedictions fall upon us as perpetually, in a gentle rain of grace.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

God himself is knocking for entrance through our best thought, our finest feelings, our highest faith, our loftiest endeavor, promising to our quickened receptivity a power and joy immeasurable. To let Christ in upon your life means release from the brutal conceptions, rescue from base passions, the crushing of the tyrant selfishness; it means an immigration of God's thoughts and love, an importation of the eternal purity and joy. An open mind here is a free harbor to the fleets that sail in upon the soul of the divine strength and pity. Resistance here is to place under restriction the infinite love; it is to proclaim a quarantine against God.—Rev. G. A. Gordon.

We never need anybody to comfort us concerning our own failings; we can do that ourselves.

When Paul was working as a journeyman tent-maker—had a piece of leather across the palm of his hand with which to push his twine-sewing needle—he was serving the Master as faithfully as when he was causing Felix to tremble. It is even probable that in some such retirement he thought out his Epistle to the Romans, or some other of his works, and thus made a tent for an Arab and an immortal book for mankind at the same time. There is many a humble life, unknown much beyond the limits of a home, toiling amid domestic cares, which all unconsciously is writing a living epistle which will be read longer and with higher profit and pleasure than the finest production that came from the pen of Paul.—Interior.

The great motive forces of the world are its beliefs. To do the works of God we must begin with believing, and that will lead to the right acts. Faith, as James Freeman Clarke well says, is the mighty steam-engine in the basement, which supplies the power for all the machinery in the upper stories. The world gets its life, not out of the bread that perisheth, but from the interconrse it has with the unseen and the eternal. The whole shape of its civilizations is determined by the beliefs about God which underlie them. As Vico says, a people's idea of the divine supplies both the motive and the goal of its development. —President Robert Ellis Thompson, in S. S. Times.

When trouble comes, it does no good to whine about it. The thing to do is to face it and bear it. Many persons waste their capacity for honest endurance by indulging in useless and idle regrets. We do not mean to say that a Christian should ever take up an attitude of hard and stoical indifference toward calamitous occurrences. It must be left to heathen and infidels to do that. But those who believe in the good providence of God should accept in the spirit of filial submission whatever dispensations he may see fit either to send or to suffer to come. — Nashville Advocate.

Gladstone, being asked what he regarded as the brightest hope for the future, replied: "I should say a maintenance of faith in the Invisible. This is the great hope of the future, the mainstay of civilization. And by that I mean a living faith in a personal God. I do not hold with a 'stream of tendency.' After sixty years of public life, I hold more strongly than ever this conviction, deepened and strengthened by long experience, of the reality and the nearness and personality of God."—Herald and Presbyter.

The world expects, and has a right to expect from Christian people, the fruits of holiness. Bad as some men may be, they respect a genuine Christian, and are not slow to detect any evidence of weakness and inconsistency upon the part of those who profess to be the disciples of Christ. Live so that you may be a credible and convincing witness of the power of godliness.—Baltimore Advocate.

When a critic insists that nothing can claim exemption from criticism he either loses sight of himself or sets himself down at zero. We have never yet known a critic who was willing to be criticised.

It is easy to drift with the multitude. It is quieting to dwell among shadows. It costs effort to think, to act upon principle, and to diffuse light and knowledge.—Zion's Herald.

The W. F. M. S., of the M. E. Church, South, opened its seventeenth annual meeting at Meridian, May 10; Mrs. Bishop Wightman, president, presiding. Rev. R. S. Woodward, pastor of Central Church, very tenderly and appropriately extended greetings, which was also voiced by the beautiful preparations and warm-hearted hospitalities bespoken, and afterwards fully realized. Miss Sallie Smylie gave warm, earnest welcome to the "Queen City of the East," in behalf of the Meridian Auxiliaries. Fittingly and eloquently did Mrs. S. E. Dean, North Mississippi, and Mrs. A. F. Watkins, Mississippi Conference, welcome the Board in behalf of their respective Conferences. Mrs. R. W. McDonnell, of Macon, Ga., gave a happy response, followed by Mrs. Wightman, who complimented Mississippi because she had the first chartered college for females, and because she had established qualified suffrage, while her sister States are troubled over the problem. There were about one hundred persons in attendance, including the thirty-six delegates who responded to their names. Central Church Auxiliary, and the presidents of the other Meridian societies of all denominations, entertained in the parlors, and the Auxiliary of E. M. F. College served refreshments at the impressive and enjoyable reception at Mr. B. F. Ormond's, where were gathered representatives of the South, the East, the West; from China, Japan, Brazil, and Mexico. Mrs. Wightman, in her own happy way, began her splendid address with the words of the boy Christ, "I must be about my Father's business."

HOME WORK.

The home work is represented by 34 Conference societies, 2,184 Auxiliaries, 39,569 members, 1,227 young people's and children's societies, 29,990 members, 34 Conference secretaries, 270 district secretaries. There are 1,229 life members, 131 honorary life members, 8 honorary life patrons, 38 scholarships supported, 12,000 subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate, 900 subscribers to Little Worker, 556,000 new leaflets published last year, comprising 2,318,000 pages of varied missionary literature.

Miss Gibson strongly favored the recommendation adopted of obtaining the service of organizers as far as possible.

The president introduced, as living epistles, Dr. Morrison, secretary of the Parent Board; Miss Haygood, of China; Miss Bruce, of Brazil; Mr. and Mrs. Waters (nee Lula Lipscomb), of Japan, and the ministers present. All, in representing the different fields of labor, proved conclusively that this is the opportune time for large reinforcements, and projecting new work as soon as possible. The Board resolved to enter the inviting and valuable field of Japan at the earliest possible date. Mrs. Trueheart urged that Brazil had the most urgent demands upon the treasury. Dr. Morrison's lecture on Mexico was edifying, and gave valuable information and encouragement.

Appropriations: China $19,310; Mexico, $35,770; Brazil, $17,905; Indian Territory, $4,250; printing, contingencies, etc., $6,000; total, $83,325. Ten thousand mite boxes called for for use this year. Amount contributed during the fiscal year for the foreign fields, $63,951.98; amount contributed to Scarritt Bible and Training-school, $6,396.91; total, $70,348.89.

OUR MISSIONARIES AND FOREIGN WORK.

Of the 38 missionaries supported by the W. F. M. S. of the M. E. Church, South, 15 are working in China (8 married women have charge of work also), 14 in Mexico, 8 in Brazil, and 1 in the Indian Mission. The society supports 1 medical missionary, 109 teachers and helpers, 12 boarding-schools, 40 day-schools, 1 hospital, 11 Bible women; women and children under instruction, 4,379. Ten missionaries have been accepted during the year, as follows: Dr. Anne Walter, from Mississippi, who has been serving in Dr. Polk's place in the hospital, now accepted as a missionary; an assistant is desired. Accepted by local Board, now in China, Miss Coffey, who sailed in March, 1895. Miss Hardynia Norvell, from Alabama, is in Mexico. The three for Brazil—Miss M. M. Umberger, Holston Conference; Miss Willie Bowman, St. Louis; Miss E. Zu Perkinson, Missouri—to go in June. Those recommended for Mexico to go as soon as sufficient funds are received: Miss Hattie Carson, South Georgia Conference; Miss Ida May Worth, St. Louis; Miss Viola Blackburn, North Mississippi Conference. Amount of Conference pledges for outgoing missionaries, $3,850, and Wightman special, $2,000, to assist the five who will soon graduate at the training-school. The three who go to Brazil are provided for in the appropriations for Brazil.

NEW WORK.

In Mexico, in the beautiful city of Guadalajaro, another center of work has been opened, and a successful year is passed. Petropolis was the former home of the Emperor Dom Pedro. For beauty of location, high up among the mountains, healthful climate and pure water, it can not be surpassed. Mr. Tucker was thanked for disposing of the $25,000 property in Rio and investing in Petropolis. A picture of the beautiful building is in the May number of the Woman's Missionary Advocate. It will accommodate one hundred boarders besides the teachers. He said, "After the school is fairly started it will be self-supporting."

The anniversary sermon was excellent, and eloquently preached by Bishop Galloway on Sunday to a vast audience from Ezekiel, "And everything shall live whither the river floweth." The Board resolved that they hear with pleasure that he is to bring out the interesting letters of his travels in book form.

The next meeting will be held in Washington City, D. C., in 1896.

MRS. E. D. JONES.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society will convene in Crystal Springs, June 14 to 17, inclusive. We want every auxiliary in the Conference represented by a delegate, and every charge where no auxiliary exists will be welcome if represented by pastor or member. Come and get a fresh inspiration to work. We will have Miss Bruce and Miss Anna Barnes, and hope to have a most interesting and profitable meeting. Reduced rates have been secured on Illinois Central railroad, with all its branches, and hope to secure it on all roads. One fare coming, third rate returning. Please send names as soon as possible to Miss M. R. Barrington, secretary.

Louisiana Conference W. F. M. S.

"Now ye are the body of Christ." "For the body is not one member, but many." "And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it, or whether one member be honored all the members rejoice with it.

The church is the body, and all the organizations representing efforts for the upbuilding and extension of the spiritual church are but members of the great body designated by "ye."

It has been suggested that the Epworth League is taking such a firm hold on the great body of the membership, especially the young people, as will soon render the W. F. M. S. hardly a necessity. This thought must have originated either with those who are in their hearts antagonistic to woman's work, or else with those lukewarm women who are ever hunting excuses for their indifference. If this be true, however, then the honest workers of W. F. M. S. will rejoice in the expediency which annuls their organization for the best good of the whole—but is this really the case? Let us look at the subject, under divine guidance.

"Those members of the body which seem to be more feeble are necessary." "And those members which we think to be less honorable, upon these we bestow more abundant honor." The young children who, for sixteen years, have been undergoing the training of juvenile mission work have outgrown the infant class, and yet have probably not reached the maturity which makes them feel at home in the adult society. The Epworth League is an open door for these young soldiers of the cross. All spiritual growth leads directly into the missionary line, and this providential movement will develop a generation of true workers, at home and abroad, such as the church has never known. After a decade or two these same workers will outgrow the young people's special class, and then they will ascend, or at least retire into systematic faithful members of W. F. M. S., giving place to another army of growing juveniles.

The Epworth League is really but the development of the original plan of W. B. M., which embraced in its methods what was called the Young People's Missionary Society.

The phenomenal growth of the child is due to the fact that the new name is more acceptable to the great body of the church, thereby enlisting the tenderest ministry of the most efficient helpers. We care naught for the name, so that our Master be exalted. There is no need to decry one member for the honor of another.

The W. F. M. S., under Providence, began the good work, and under the same guiding hand the adult societies will not cease to be a safe harbor for the honorably discharged veterans of Epworth League when the ever-upward spiritual growth of womanhood is realized.

The Adult and Juvenile Missionary Societies are but the two ends of the chain, which are beautifully joined together by the Epworth League. The perfect whole requires perfection in every part, and woe to the member which says to another, "I have no need of thee."

God bless the noble young Leaguers; they are the hope of the church, and the glorious hope, for the whole body is revivified from the warm, rich blood which they are sending to the very extremities of the "dry bones."

And may our God continue to bless the W. F. M. S., which is still as great a necessity in divine economy as it has ever been. Under this banner the women of the church have already accomplished great things, and splendid work will remain for them to do as long as there are women to be saved and children to be trained. Woman's work is among the secret, quiet springs of life at the fountain-head.

Nurture the Juvenile Societies, co-operate with the Epworth Leagues, keep the Adult Society thoroughly alive, and, as a whole body, the church will be equipped for the best work all along the line. The work is all for the Master, and all the members blended—every member having care one for another—the fulfillment of prophesy will come in one generation. "I will pour out my spirit on all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy." There is no room for occasion for schism when the work is God-given—holy and acceptable.

We are all honored in being thought worthy to carry the news of salvation to those who still set in darkness. Let us rally, my sisters, to our assigned post in the W. F. M. S.

FROM THE WORK.

STATEMENT CONCERNING TROUBLE AT TANGIPAHOA, LA.

Feeling that it is a duty that I owe to the church, to the preachers, to Bro. Smylie, and to truth and virtue, I make this statement.

Bro. Smylie's character is at stake as a Christian minister. A careful investigation has been made, evidence has been weighed and sifted on each side, and I want to say that it is a clear case of "blackmail." Sanders confesses him of writing a letter of a criminating nature to his wife. At the time said letter was dated, Bro. Smylie was not acquainted with his (Sander's) wife. Fact is, Sanders is an unprincipled fellow, and wants to procure a divorce from his wife, who is a good Christian woman, and he used Bro. Smylie as an innocent means by which he could accuse her in order to accomplish this end. Mrs. Sanders' testimony concerning Bro. Smylie is that, 'She has only been acquainted with him but a short time, but finds him to be a perfect Christian gentleman in every respect. That she and her children esteem him as a Christian brother and pastor." She brands her husband's false accusation and outrageous attack on Bro. Smylie's life as malicious and unprovoked.

We were conducting a revival meeting at Tangipahoa; Bro. Smylie was doing the preaching. On Sunday night last, as he, with his wife's sister, Miss Kiblinger, on his arm, were leaving the tabernacle, some one in the dark struck him on the head with a loaded cane, stunning him. He thought his sister was murdered. A perfect "mob" were all around them, yelling, 'Kill him!" Some one in the mob struck at him again and knocked the leader of the crowd in the head, and Bro. Smylie picked up his sister and ran back into the tabernacle, with the assassins all around him crying for his blood, with shotguns and pistols. The good Lord has a hedge around his children and protected them in the face of such fearful odds.

The whole country is indignant over this shameful affair. We were in a fair way to have a glorious meeting. The mayor, backed up by all the citizens of Tangipahoa and vicinity, told us if we would carry on the meeting, that they would protect us at the risk of their lives. Bro. Smylie ran the meeting two days after this awful tragedy happened, and services were guarded by armed men. The house in which he and his family were stopping had to be guarded all night, as some one threw a brick through the window. On account of the high state of excitement we thought best to close for the present. There has been a certain element in this section that has domineered and defied decency and law and everything else that has been for the betterment of society; but I think for once they went too far and have gotten their head into the lion's mouth. The good citizens held an indignation meeting and denounced the perpetrators of this outrage, not only as an attempt upon the life of an innocent minister of Christ, but a shame upon the whole community. They expressed their belief in the perfect innocence of Bro. Smyle of any wrong, pledging him their cooperation in bringing the guilty to punishment. This is the first indignation meeting ever held in this long-suffering community and means something.

What are we coming to? Will we have to close up our churches and quit uncovering sin? or continue to declare the whole counsel of God and be subjected to mob violence? We want to say that the perpetrators of this dastardly outrage do not represent the better class of people through this country. And the people generally deplore this sad occurrence. The guilty will be punished as the law directs and the innocent will be vindicated. Pray for us in this terrible trial.

GOSPEL MISSION.

The above is the name of a new mission recently opened in the city. At present it has but one hall or regular place of meeting, located in the Third District, 810 Danphine street, near Elmyra. Being on the Rampart and Danphine electric street car line, it is easy of access from all parts of the city.

The holiness people believing in a present free and full salvation from all sin, for all men, provided in the atonement of Jesus Christ by his death and suffering on the cross, and seeing the alarming wickedness of the non-church-going, unchurched masses, and seeing the indifference of many professed Christians in the evangelical churches in practical efforts to reach out a helping hand to these perishing thousands at our very doors; these considerations led those connected with the holiness movement to resolve to do what they could for the evangelization of the city.

During Dr. W. B. Godbey's meeting last Fall a proposition was made to purchase and equip a tent to be used for gospel meetings in the several districts of the city and at other points adjacent, as deemed advisable. The services of Rev. D. C. Rawls were engaged as manager. In a short time funds were secured, the tent purchased and equipped. Early in March it was pitched on McCarthy Square, in the Third District. The meeting continued for about four weeks with gratifying results. Gospel truth was preached and songs of praise sung; many heard the Word, felt and owned its power, and entered upon a new life.

To conserve and promote this work in this needy district the friends of the enterprise, led by Dr. R. L. Schroeder, rented Thoman's Hall, 810 Danphine street. April 6 services were opened by the undersigned and held daily at 7:30 P. M. The attendance and interest increased from the beginning to the close. Such was the sentiment among the friends of the enterprise that arrangements were made to continue the mission indefinitely, with stated services at 7:30 P. M., on Sunday and Thursday of each week. Many heard the Word with evident interest and some accepted Christ as a personal Savior. A number of the United States soldiers from the Barracks were regular in their attendance, and some of these professed faith in the Lord Jesus. Before, I am informed, they had no religious services at the Barracks; now they have an organization of the Y. M. C. A., with regular weekly services. The object of the Gospel Mission is not to hinder, but help all existing church and missionary organizations. The Spirit of the Lord is moving in the hearts of the Christian people of the city to do something to save the non-church-going multitudes. Now is the time for an onward movement. "To-day is the day of salvation."

CHILDREN'S DAY AT BETHANY.

The second Sabbath in May, 1895, was a royal day at Bethany Church, Ebenezer circuit. People came in crowds until our handsome little church was filled. The good women had decorated the church beautifully. Our beloved superintendent, Bro. Morris, called off the programme, and, as the little ones came forward, they spoke with beaming countenances. The recitations were all appropriate and interestingly delivered. Not one failure. Miss Tennie Morris, of eleven summers, is our organist. We had splendid music. Our good pastor, Bro. A. W. Langley, who is one among the best men I ever knew, was on the programme for an address. He only made a few remarks, and called forward Bro. M. S. Williams, of the North Georgia Conference. His talk was good from beginning to end. We have a good Sunday-school. Our church is growing spiritually. I think we have one of the sweetest little country churches I have ever seen, and the best neighborhood. This is Bro. Langley's fourth year, and, of course, the Bishop will send him somewhere else. We are pained to lose him and his good wife and precious children.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT PREACHERS' MEETING.

The Spring session of the Corinth District Preachers' Meeting met in the Methodist Church at Blue Springs, Miss., May 8 and 9, 1895; Rev. H. R. Tucker, P. E., in the chair. Eight of the pastors of the district, one local preacher and several laymen were present. The session was very harmonious and full of interest. The discussions were practically suggestive and helpful. The interest was good, and never abated, on the part of preachers nor laymen, during the entire session. The preaching was done by Revs. G. W. Gordon, T. L. Foster, and W. W. Williams, which was scriptural and edifying. The services were seasons of joy and refreshing from the presence of the Lord. Our presiding elder and all the pastors present expressed hopefulness of a successful year. The session closed by the preachers giving each other their hands in covenant that they would pray for each other's success, and for the entire district, each Sunday morning before entering upon the labors of the day. The next session meets at Baldwyn.

H. M. YOUNG, Sec.

Rev. W. M. Williams, Decatur, Miss., May 21: "This is our third year on this, the Decatur charge. Notwithstanding our late start, on account of bad weather in the beginning of the year (during which time we were at our appointment every Sunday, but the people missed several), we are moving along by the help of the Master as well as on any previous year—perhaps better. Our people are helpful, co-operative, spiritual. Our people handle very little money. Country produce is legal tender. We was considerably at a loss to know how to raise our collections; but, by the direction of the Holy Spirit and the suggestion of a good Baptist sister, we were given a successful plan, which was this: The sisters were to give all the eggs laid on Sunday for five succeeding Sundays; the brethren to give corn, or peas, or money. This for the Conference claimants. Result: Every church paid more than its assessment except one, and that would have done it if we had not stopped them just as we reached the required amount. We have our receipt for two dollars more than our assessment for the work. The ladies have missionary hens, and are making their arrangements to pay that debt. We have put over one hundred dollars' worth of improvements on the parsonage this year, and we are still at work. We have never asked these people directly for any collection but what we got in full. Sometimes a steward or committee-man fails. At Coushatta our good ladies are collecting something every month for missions. We write this that it may encourage others to try to raise money from their people who have no money. God gives us success if we try in his name."

Rev. J. C. Mimms, P. C., Arcola, Miss., May 15: "The first Sunday in this month was a high day in Arcola. Dr. Black, editor of the ADVOCATE, preached, at eleven o'clock, a powerful sermon to a crowded house on the "Immortality of the Soul." This sermon was preached by special request. He held his audience spellbound for one hour and forty minutes. At the close he dedicated our new and elegant church. He also gave us a splendid sermon at night. Bro. Lagrone, of Senatobia, came to our assistance on Monday, and for eight days and nights he gave us the pure gospel with power and demonstration of the Spirit. Three were added to the church on profession of faith. We are on the upgrade. More in the Sunday-school than we have members of the church. Good prayer meeting and W. M. Society. We paid last year for all purposes nearly fifty dollars per member, and have paid to date this year fifteen dollars per member. Have thirteen Methodist families, and in these families thirty religious papers, of which thirteen are CHRISTIAN ADVOCATES. The Lord is blessing our labors. Pray for us."

A VERY REMARKABLE OFFER!

A $40 Sewing Machine for $20, and the N. O. Advocate Thrown In!

This may seem surprising, but we mean what we say. The machine which we handle is "The Favorite High Arm Singer," the manufacturer's catalogue price of which is $40.

This machine is manufactured by an old and reliable company, who guarantee the machine for ten years.

OUR OFFER.

To anyone, not now a subscriber to this paper, who will send us $20, we will send the machine and the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE one year. To old subscribers we make the following offer: Pay your subscription to June, '96, and send us $18 additional, and we will send you the machine.

We allow purchaser to test the machine for ten days. If at the end of ten days you are not satisfied, you have only to drop us a postal card, and your money will be refunded. Can anything be fairer than that? Remember that offers like this are not made every day, and that delays are dangerous.

TO AGENTS:

We will send this machine free to any preacher or other person who will send us twenty-five new subscribers with the cash—$50. Address REV. W. C. BLACK,

An Antidote to Consumption.

Jenner builded wiser than he knew when he discovered the vaccine cure for small-pox. His system has been applied to other diseases. Pasteur applied it successfully to rabies. Then Bering and Roux revolutionized the therapeutics of diphtheria with it. Now comes Dr. Paul Paquin, of St. Louis, with the announcement that by the same system he has robbed that most dreaded of all human maladies, consumption, of all its terrors. Dr. Paquin is a native of Canada, and is only about thirty-five years of age. He was for seven years a member of the faculty of the University of Missouri. His first application of the remedy was to himself. Having become the victim of pulmonary consumption, he was sent abroad for his health, so the papers say, at the expense of the State. He spent a whole year in Paris studying with painstaking care the methods employed by Pasteur in treating rabies. Believing that consumption could be cured by the application of the same principle, he applied it to himself, and wrought an absolute cure. Last November he began experimenting upon sixty-odd consumptives in St. Louis—about half of them in the hospitals. Many of these patients were in the last stages of the disease, and all of them were so far gone that their death should have occurred, according to professional expectation, before this time. Yet up to this date not a single one has died. Some have gone to business, proclaiming themselves entirely cured. Others are marvelously improved in every respect. Public confidence in the remedy is so great that he has been tendered a capital of two hundred thousand dollars with which to establish a sanitarium. The St. Louis Medical Society has appointed three of its members as a committee to investigate the results of his treatment and report. The Doctor claims that only about five of the sixty patients will die, these cases being not only far advaned, but seriously complicated. The rest he says will get well. If Paquin's remedy will do what he claims that it will, his name will go down to remote posterity as one of the greatest benefactors of the human race. The fact that Koch's remedy failed is no proof that this will fail also. The public await the tidings from St. Louis with eager interest.

Brigadier-Gen. C. J. Cozens, of the Salvation Army, has written a letter to Bro. E. A. Vail, of this city, in which he states it as a probability that the Salvation Army will commence operations in this city in the near future.

About the Epworth League.

The secretary's report of the Mississippi Epworth League Conference, at Grenada, will be found on our first page. We are sure it will be read with intense interest. Besides this official report, we are in receipt of some additional notes which we can not make room for in this issue. We make, however, a few brief extracts:

"Rev. J. S. Oakley, one of the speakers of the Conference, and Rev. T. B. Clifford, secretary of the Conference, are both Englishmen. Bro. Oakley was born about forty miles from Epworth, the birth-place of Wesley, and Bro. Clifford was born forty miles from Oxford University, where the revival movement began, and where Wesley and his small band were first called Methodists." * * *

"Henceforth life-size pictures of Bishop C. B. Galloway and Dr. S. A. Steele will hang in the building where our Conference is held and will decorate our car to Chattanooga and occupy a prominent place at our headquarters there."

In addition to the secretary's report of the Conference, we wish to call the attention of all pastors to the notice of the secretary with regard to the Minutes. It is important that every pastor give the secretary the information he desires at as early a date as possible. Let there be no delay.

We are glad to be able to present to our readers in this issue the excellent paper of Dr. Shoaff, of the Alabama Conference, concerning League work. St. Francis Street Church, Mobile, of which Dr. Shoaff is pastor, has one of the most successful Leagues we know of. We believe that Dr. Shoaff's paper will be helpful to many of our pastors and League workers.

No more important matter can engage the attention of pastors than this Epworth League movement. One of the great needs of the church is to get its young people thoroughly enlisted in church work. This the League movement, properly directed, will do. Devotional meetings conducted by and for the young can not fail to give prodigious help at a point where help is sadly needed. Benevolent work—a thing hitherto too much neglected in our church—is provided for in the Constitution of the League; and, although there are many localities where there is little need for this sort of work, there are others where the need is great. We firmly believe that the Epworth League is destined to play an important part in the development of the rich resources of our church along this line. Under judicious management the League will become an important factor in various activities connected with missionary and church extension enterprises.

The social feature of League work is worthy of careful thought on the part of every pastor. Man is a social being, and needs to be dealt with as such. It is through the social nature that our young people are most frequently led away from their allegiance to Christ. Just here the League should prove of incalculable service to the church. A well-conducted League makes provision for the cultivation of sociability. It has meetings at which conversation during part of the time is the order of the day. People are expected to get acquainted with each other; and facilities for making them acquainted are furnished in the shape of committees whose business it is to introduce everybody to everybody. A meeting of this sort, with a part of the time given to music and recitations, affords to the young life of the church entertainment that is elevating and refining. Give our young people entertainment of this sort, and they will not be half so easily led off into associations and amusements that are hurtful.

An ideal League also gives healthful direction to the mental activities of the young. Literature of a trashy or inferior sort is substituted by that which deals with the history, doctrines and polity of the church. Let this feature of League work be emphasized, and the next generation of Methodists will be able to give a reason for the faith that is in them. That is one of our needs at the present time. Too many of our members are bound to the church only by an ancestral tie; they are Methodists because their parents were. Too many have no intelligent appreciation of the difference between Methodism and other forms of religious faith.

The Epworth League.

BY REV. J. W. SHOAFF, D. D., OF THE ALABAMA CONFERENCE.

The Epworth League contemplates three things in its work, viz.: the highest type of spirituality, the highest type of social development, and the highest type of intellectual development; and these three are one. The highest type of practical piety not only has its devotional side, but it also has its social side and its intellectual sides.

The Literary Department of the Epworth League is not likely to be overestimated. In our humble judgment, it is one of the strongest levers that can be used for uplifting the young life of the church. This end will be attained in no small degree by the study of the distinctive doctrines of Methodism. At this point we have not been without fault. In too many instances we have allowed our young people to grow up without grounding them in the reasons for the hope that is in them. Home training is frequently neglected, and the result is, many of our people are children in understanding when they should be men. There is another reason for this neglect. The age in which we live is an age of books and periodicals, many of which are charged with thrilling story and brilliant romance. Before we know it young life is eaten up with a vapid sentimentalism, which leaves but little margin for the development of a well-rounded Christian character. There is nothing that would tend so much to counteract the evil tendency to which we have referred as the study of Methodist doctrine, and also of our peculiar polity. The study of the one would result in a Christian growth, which comes from the understanding of the truth as well as from the reception of grace into the heart and life. The study of the other would result in loyal, broad-minded churchmanship. A thorough acquaintance with the polity and usages of Methodism is an inspiration in the life of any young Methodist. Due attention should be given to Methodist history. One has well said that, "Methodism has a history as thrilling as the siege of Troy, as significant as the history of England when she was cradled, and as thrilling as the history of America where she has registered her greatest triumphs. If her heroes have not been heeded by a Carlisle, and if an Emerson has not given them a place in the frescoed galleries of representative men, the Angel of Providence has assigned them a place in the gallery of the ages, with the patriarchs, prophets and apostles of the Lamb." The literature for the study of the subject is ample and abundant. To go no further, McTyeire's History of Methodism ought to have a place in the library of every Epworth League in the connection. All who are marshalled under the banner of the Epworth League should give themselves to the reading of Christian biography. Outside of the study of the Word of God, there is nothing that tends so much to broaden the intellect and arouse the best and highest emotions of the soul as the study of Methodist biography. What young lady can be brought into personal communion with the character of such a queenly woman as Lady Huntingdon without feeling the glow of that which is akin to angelic inspiration? If the rising generation of Methodism would hold converse with the Wesleys, commune with the spirit of a Bramwell, enter into companionship with an Asbury, and catch the spirit that descends like a benediction from the sainted Marvin, the future of Methodism would, in our judgment, become more illustrious than her proud, heroic past.

There are other lines of study in addition to those we have named. But the great practical question is, How can we impel our young people to enthusiasm in this work? Plans similar to those followed by the modern Chautauqua and normal training-schools may be of use in many parts of our territory. There are several points here, however, that ought to be guarded. Rigid methods of study, if unduly insisted upon, may tend to drive away the very element we would seek to benefit. No League should force its members to study. The work should be purely voluntary. This will be apt to insure enthusiasm, and enthusiasm is contagious. Again, the League should so conduct its work as to keep it from degenerating into a select reading club. Nothing will actually kill enthusiasm in work more surely than "a dry-as-dust" reading club. The reading of the members should be done away from the literary meetings. The regular meetings should be wide awake and full of life, and so full of life as to command the interest of the church and outside public. The young people should not feel that a literary meeting of the League is a dry ordeal, but an occasion of profound interest. I have found from my own experience as a pastor that a well-arranged programme has been of great value, not only to the League itself, but that it has also proved most efficient in impressing the life of the League upon the community at large. Essays, readings and exalting songs, these may be used with reference to the entertainment as well as the instruction of an audience.

The following was a programme prepared by the Literary Committee of St. Francis Street Epworth League, viz.: "Moses, the Man of God." "Moses in the Ark." "His Choice." "His Woing." "His Call." "The Passage of the Red Sea." "Moses on Mount Pisgah." "The Transfiguration." This programme was made up of some of the finest selections in the language and interspersed with music of a very high order. With such methods as these latent talent will be developed, and the young people will be furnished with that which satisfies the instincts of young life. If an occasion is properly magnified, young life will be apt to climb to the summit which rises before it. If skill is needed in directing a devotional service of the League, no less skill is needed in directing the literary work of this providential institution of the church.

Much more might be written than we have written. In every department of our League work we should try to fill our young people with sunshine and let them feel that the church of the living God is the dearest, sweetest place on earth.

Bishop Hargrove declares utter dislike for that religion which parades itself. "I want to see the time when a man will tell what he has done for others and not for himself. I don't see in the Bible much of what Christ enjoyed, but what he did for others." He went about doing good.

BOOKS.

SOUTHERN LITERATURE: From 1579 to 1895. A Comprehensive Review, with Copious Extracts and Criticisms. For the use of schools and the general reader, containing an Appendix, with a Full List of Southern Authors. By Louise Manly. Richmond, Va.: B. F. Johnson Publishing Co.

The above is the long title of an excellent little work in many respects. It is designed to fill a long-felt want, but does not come fully up to our expectations. Some of the most widely-known Southern authors are not mentioned, save in the appendix. Among those unnoticed are Drs. Broadus, Abbey and Hoge. Mrs. Walworth, one of the most prolific of the modern writers, is barely mentioned. There are several other minor objections, which we might notice. But the author has undertaken a difficult work, and, considering its magnitude, and the fact that she is a pioneer in this field, the book is remarkably free from errors. It is nicely arranged for class use, and should be freely used in the schools and colleges of the South. We are glad there is a growing disposition to reverence and respect the work of our own people. The time when no one was looked upon as educated who had not been North—and no Southern girl or youth was esteemed brainy enough to teach the children of our homes—has, we fondly hope, passed away with all other relics of barbarism and ignorance. Let the young children be taught that their fathers did no wrong when they went with their States and left the Union. We hope Miss Manly will bring out another and larger edition of her book—one suitable for the library, and as a work of reference. J. C. B.

THE SUNDAY-SCHOOL: Its Origin, History, Organization, Methods of Teaching, Government, Statistics, etc. By W. G. E. Cunnyngham, D. D. 16 mo. 118 pages. Revised Edition. 1895. Price, 50 cents. Southern Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn.

This neat little volume from the pen of Dr. Cunnyngham, eighteen years Sunday-school Editor of our church, is an enlargement and revision of a previous work upon this subject. We find this to be a very creditable, as well as readable, account of the Sunday-school movement. The author brings to light the striking fact that during the ages of apostasy, familiarly known as "the dark ages," the religious instruction of children was almost entirely neglected. He also shows that Methodism is closely connected historically with the rise and progress of the Sunday-school, and quotes Leckey as saying that "the Wesleyans appear to have preached specially to children."

All interested in Sunday-school work, whether they be pastors, teachers, parents, or pupils, will be greatly profited by reading this book, which contains much of wholesome instruction and helpful suggestion. If persons indifferent to the religious training of children could be induced to read it, many of them would be aroused to the importance of such work.

NOTES.

Rev. Dr. Wm. H. Whitsitt has been elected to the presidency of the Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., to succeed Dr. J. A. Broadus.

The St. Louis has this note: "Mrs. Nathan Scarritt has been elected by the Literary Societies of Harrell International Institute to deliver their annual address."—Alabama Advocate.

An attempt is now being made to enforce the Sunday law in this city, it having been a dead letter for many years. This attempt will, of course, be vigorously opposed by the liquor ring and its kin. What the result will be we are not prepared to say.

We are indebted to Barbee & Smith for a copy of the Minutes of the Annual Conferences for the year 1894. This is a publication which should lie upon the table of every Southern Methodist preacher. One who has never owned a copy does not realize how many questions it will answer for him from time to time. The price is only fifty cents.

Dr. H. C. Morrison will preach the commencement sermon at Emory and Henry College; Rev. S. D. Long, the Y. M. C. A. sermon, and Rev. Geo. R. Stuart will deliver the alumni address.

Commencement exercises of Virginia College, Roanoke, Virginia, will occur as follows: May 31, School of Elocution, at 8 P. M. Saturday, June 1, Art Reception. Sunday, June 2, Commencement Sermon by Dr. S. A. Steele, of Nashville, Tenn. Monday, June 3, Annual Concert at 8 P. M., Closing Commencement Exercises, Awarding Diplomas, Conferring Degrees, etc.

Monteagle always gets up a good programme. This year she seems to have surpassed her previous record. The Monteagle Assembly opens July 4 and closes Aug. 28. Among those who will occupy the platform we note the following celebrities: Dr. M. C. Peters, New York; T. D. Talmage, Dr. W. D. Kirkland, Bishops Hendrix and Galloway, Dr. A. Coke Smith, Dr. J. D. Hammond, Dr. W. R. Lambuth.

According to the plain teaching of the New Testament Christianity is a mission religion, the church is a missionary institute, and every individual believer, old or young, male or female, learned or ignorant, rich or poor, is a member of this institute, and bound to subserve its interests, by pen, or voice, or purse, or example, or by all combined. When Christians universally or even generally awake to this truth and its practical consequences, the Lord's treasury will overflow.—Mid-Continent.

Dr. J. W. Lee, author of books of great popularity and a great preacher, says: "It is my honest opinion that everyone of us pastors should take a Sunday at each one of our churches to present the claims of our paper. We preach on missions and church extension and education, and I verily believe we ought to give one Sunday a year to the Conference organ. After preaching upon the subject, we should take a collection not in money, but in subscribers to the paper. Believing this I am going to practice the same in my church."—St. Louis Advocate.

The Alabama Chautauqua begins July 2 and closes July 28. It has a fine programme, numbering among its speakers the following distinguished personages: Dr. A. B. Jones, Dr. J. B. Hawthorne, Dr. J. C. Morris, Dr. J. J. Tigert, T. D. Talmage, S. P. Jones, Dr. W. B. Palmore, Dr. J. O. Keener. It does not confine itself, however, to celebrities, as is evidenced by the fact that the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is booked for two lectures and a sermon. The Alabama Chautauqua is located at Talladega. Reduced railroad rates will be given on the various lines of railroad.

The Romish priests continue to impose on their ignorant and credulous people in the matter of holy shrines and sacred relics. Another pilgrimage is being planned to Lourdes, under the lead of the "Fathers of Mercy." Indeed, it is said that such pilgrimages are to become annual institutions. The Pope encourages them, and the priests are glad to carry them through. It is a burning shame that those poor people are thus misled. These shrines and their reputed miracles are arrant frauds. The people should be delivered from such delusions, instead of encouraged in them.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Dr. Buckley says he is familiar with the Book of Mormon, a copy of which he received in Utah in 1871, from one of the three presidents, and carefully read. He has purchased all the other Mormon books and tracts, and read those. He is also familiar with everything that Madame Blavatsky has ever published. After having followed the controversies between Judge, Mrs. Besant Olcott, and the rest, he affirms that "Mormonism, theologically and doctrinally considered, is less irrational and more coherent than theosophy and that the plates that Joe Smith produced are not so great a tax on credulity as the yarns spun by Madame Blavatsky and the alleged communications from mahatmas received by Judge ——— which Mrs. Besant says he got up himself."

***

The General Assembly of the Southern Presbyterian Church, at its recent session in Dallas, Texas, provided for the organization of a young people's society similar to our Epworth Leagues. The Southern Baptist Convention, in its session at Washington, had the same question before it, and decided against the measure. This does not mean, however, that there will be no young people's societies in the Baptist Church. Each local Baptist Church, being an independent organization, has the very largest liberty in such matters, and, so far as our observation goes, every live Baptist Church in the cities and larger towns has such an organization; and, to our certain knowledge, these young people's societies are in some instances a tower of strength to our sister church.

THE HOLMAN BIBLE FOR $1.65 OR $1.35.

We are now prepared to make to our subscribers the very best offer that has ever been made by anybody in the way of a premium Bible. The same Bible which we have been offering for $1.85 we now offer for $1.65 or $1.35, just as the purchaser may prefer. We are enabled to do this by purchasing in large quantities. At first we bought cautiously, not knowing what the demand would be. Now, we know that there is no danger of getting overstocked. Unlike some Methodist publishers, who have made a profit of hundreds of dollars on this Bible, thus helping them to float their cheap papers, we give our subscribers the benefit of the reduction. This Bible has all the helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself, wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of Bible names.

For twenty-five cents additional we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N.B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible at $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers. Address,

"Gilderoy and the Second Blessing."

DISSENTING APPROBATION.

Bro. "Gilderoy" has "hit the nail on the head," and is now driving away as I have been trying to drive for twelve or fifteen years past.

"Gilderoy" has laid a fine foundation—broad, deep and strong. Let him build on it, and we will have a harmony of the "standards." Only this: Depravity, "root of bitterness"—not sin. The term "original sin" is orthodox, but is misleading. We are wont to attach guilt to sin, but not so to depravity. This is the ignis fatuus which Ralston followed in his "Bible Truth," to the vagnest heresy of modern times, viz.: the guilt of infants. Depravity is the source of our temptations. If depravity was out of the way, temptations would strike us as they do the Almighty. (Psa. lxxviii, 18; James i, 13.) J. A. PARKER.

A Vote of Thanks.

I desire to offer a vote of thanks to "Gilderoy," for his timely article ("Some Points of Methodist Doctrines") in the ADVOCATE of this week. His reasoning is sound, sensible and incontrovertible. We, who are to "grow in grace and in knowledge," need to have the right kind of food dealt out to us by those who would perfect us in true holiness.

has discovered no new thing. In Sec. V., Chap. VI., and in Chap. XIII. of the Confession of Faith of the Presbyterian Churches in and of the United States of America, and otherwise known as the Westminster Confession of Faith, he will find the same dogmas set forth which, in his letter in the ADVOCATE, of May 23, he attributes to Wesley, Fletcher and others.

In answer to many enquiries made and to be made, I answer:

1. The railroad fare to Chattanooga will be one fare for the round trip. If any cut is made on this rate, I'll let you know through the papers. Watch the papers. Your railroad agent can tell you what the fare is from your place to Chattanooga.

2. No special train has been arranged for yet. We may be able to do so. Will let you know through the papers. Watch the papers.

3. Board and lodging will cost in private families $1 to $1.25 per day; in hotels, $2.50 to $3 per day. We have arranged for Mississippians to be in the same neighborhood, forming a sort of Mississippi colony. I want every Mississippian to know every other Mississippian before we leave Chattanooga; hence

4. Mississippi Headquarters will be a central place near the tent where you can get a drink of ice water, write a letter to your sweetheart and meet somebody from Mississippi.

5. If you want to know anything about the Conference, write to Headquarters Local Committee, Room 53, Times Building, Chattanooga, Tenn.

6. Go. Don't miss this opportunity of seeing the greatest religious assembly ever held in the South. It will give you an uplift that will do you good all your days. You shall meet there only live, progressive spirits whose touch will give snap and energy. The "poke-easies" will not be there. They have not heard that there is to be an International Conference of the Epworth League. Some do not know yet what an Epworth League is.

7. Get a Souvenir Program, only 25 cents. Get it and study it well before you get to Chattanooga. You will not have time after you get there. Watch the papers. J. A. RANDOLPH,

The Mississippi State Epworth League Conference.

DEAR BROTHER: We will print and distribute the maximum number of copies of the Minutes of our first State Conference of Epworth Leagues which we can get distributed to advantage. We should be glad to put a copy in the hands of every Methodist family in the State. We plan to distribute through the pastors, and will send you as many copies as you will agree to distribute without cost to you; and as it will be a very handsome production, we do not wish to throw away a single copy. We want to know at once how many copies you can use to advantage in your charge. Please inform me as soon as possible how many you will distribute. Yours in the work,

Notice.

The Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference convenes in Columbus, Miss., June 22-26. This promises to be an unusually interesting session. A full attendance is desired. Let each auxiliary, adult and juvenile, send a delegate. Rev. B. W. Waters will preach the annual sermon; his wife, Lula Lipscomb Waters, will be present. Misses Haygood and Bruce are also expected. Let all who purpose attending forward their names immediately to Mrs. Gid D. Harris, Columbus. Be sure to obtain from the ticket agent a certificate that you paid full fare going. This insures you a return ticket at one cent per mile.

Just at this time it will be sent free if you write a postal mentioning the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. This book has been tried by ourselves, and is one of the very best of its kind. Besides containing over 400 receipts for all kinds of pastry and home cookery, there are many hints for the table and kitchen, showing how to set a table, how to enter the dining room, etc.; a hundred and one hints in every branch of the culinary art. Cookery of the very finest and richest, as well as of the most economical and home like, is provided for. Remember "Table and Kitchen" will be sent, postage prepaid, to any lady sending her address (name, town and State) plainly given. A copy in German or Scandinavian will be sent if desired. Postal card is as good as letter. Address Price Baking Powder Co., Chicago, Ill.

A Correction.

MR. EDITOR: I see there is a mistake in the Conference Minutes with regard to my Children's Day money for last year. We raised more money in that way than any other work in the Conference. We raised $47.75, and it was properly applied. But I see it is in the wrong column in the Minutes. It is reported as having been raised in the Sunday-school for missions, which was not the case, and there was not a dollar of it used for missions or for any other purpose but for what it was raised. Just how the mistake occurred I do not know. By referring to my Conference report book, I find it properly reported there: For Children's Day, $47.75. So I went to here and now assure all concerned that every dollar of it went as the Discipline directs.

And now I want to report a delightful Children's Day at Oak Ridge, last Sunday. We had a very large crowd, splendid order, and the program carried out almost perfectly. The children and others taking part in the program certainly did their best, and all enjoyed it very much. The collection amounted to something over $14; and last, but not least, we had a bountiful dinner of the very best the country affords, and you may be sure we did our duty there also. May the good Lord bless all the Sabbath-school workers! A. D. MILLER.

Kosciusko District Conference.

The District Conference of the Kosciusko district, North Mississippi Conference, will convene in Lexington, Miss., July 4, at 9 A. M. The first day will be devoted to the Sunday-school work, a programme for which we will furnish you soon. All superintendents of Sunday-schools in the district are urged to be present and take a part in the discussion of the subjects. Rev. J. A. Leach will preach the sermon on Tuesday, at 11 A. M. Rev. W. C. Lester will preach at eleven A. M., Friday. Recording stewards will have their books there for examination by the committee. The following are the Committees of Examination:

For License to Preach—T. Cameron, D. C. Foust, A. W. Langley.

For Recommendation for Admission into the Conference—W. C. Lester, J. A. Leach, T. G. Freeman.

For Deacon's and Elder's Orders—J. D. Newson, W. D. McCullough, R. P. Goar.

We invite you most cordially, Mr. Editor, to come up, and be with us at the Conference. We insure you a pleasant time and plenty of work, and, we hope, some subscribers to the ADVOCATE. So we hope you will come.

Missionary Week.

To the Ministers of the Mississippi Conference—

DEAR BRETHREN: "Do-without Week" was not generally observed among us on account of bad weather, and the officers of your Conference Board of Missions have designated the second week in June, beginning Monday, the tenth, to be observed by those who have not already had a missionary week in their churches. The secretary of our Conference Board, in a stirring letter some weeks ago, called attention to this matter, and made an appeal for the general observance of this week. May we not rely upon the loyalty and missionary zeal of all our pastors in this matter? Let service be held each evening of the week for the dissemination of missionary intelligence, and the development of a missionary spirit among our people; let special prayer be made for our mission fields and missionaries; let it be a week of self-denial and liberal giving; and let the week terminate with a missionary sermon on Sunday, the seventeenth. This will quicken the spiritual life of the church as well as swell our missionary contributions. "The sound of a going" is heard "in the tops of the mulberry trees," and it is the time for us to "bestir" ourselves.

W. B. LEWIS,
Pres. Conf. Board of Missions.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-fourth Annual Camp Meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 10, next, and continue for eight or ten days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the Camp Meeting to begin their journey on July 1, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 1 to 27, inclusive. All trains to stop at Camp Ground station from July 8 to 29, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The Camp Ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet, and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush at the opening of the Camp Meeting, should address communications to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, Mobile, Ala. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, chairman, New Orleans, La.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the Camp Meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. No gate fee will be exacted on the Sunday of the Camp Meeting. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to visit the Camp Meeting.

"CAVE SPRING, GA., May 21, 1894.

"My baby was a living skeleton. The doctors said he was dying of Marasmus, Indigestion, etc. The various foods I tried seemed to keep him alive, but did not strengthen or fatten him. At thirteen months old he weighed exactly what he did at birth—seven pounds. I began using "SCOTT'S EMULSION," sometimes putting a few drops in his bottle, then again feeding it with a spoon: then again by the absorption method of rubbing it into his body. The effect was marvelous. Baby began to stouten and fatten, and became a beautiful dimpled boy, a wonder to all. SCOTT'S EMULSION supplied the one thing needful.

"MRS. KENNON WILLIAMS."

is especially useful for sickly, delicate children when their other food fails to nourish them. It supplies in a concentrated, easily digestible form, just the nourishment they need to build them up and give them health and strength. It is Cod-liver Oil made palatable and easy to assimilate, combined with the Hypophosphites, both of which are most remarkable nutrients.

HOME CIRCLE.

YOU NEVER CAN TELL.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

You never can tell when you send a word—
Like an arrow shot from a bow
By an archer blind - be it cruel or kind,
Just where it will chance to go,
It may pierce the breast of your dearest friend
Tipped with its poison or balm;
To a stranger's heart in life's great mart
It may carry its pain or its calm.

You never can tell when you do an act
Just what the result may be;
But with every deed you are sowing a seed,
Though its harvest you may not see.
Each kindly act is an acorn dropped
In God's productive soil;
Though you may not know, yet the tree shall grow
And shelter the brows that toil.

You never can tell what your thoughts will do
In bringing you hate or love;
For thoughts are things, and their airy wings
Are swifter than carrier doves.
They follow the law of the universe—
Each thing must create its kind;
And they speed o'er the track to bring you back
Whatever went out from your mind.

The Duty of Cheer.

A happier world is always a better world; and if it be the true man's duty to make the world better, so far as in him lies, there rests upon him an obligation to promote the happiness of the world also.

This he can do only if he be happy himself. You might as well expect a snowball to warm a room as an unhappy man to cheer others. Happiness, then, is really a personal and Christian duty—first, to be happy oneself, and then to make others happy.

Let us see how this sunshine of cheer makes the world better, and by humanizing it helps to Christianize it.

No one can be happy who is not in a thoroughly good physical condition. So the first step of the cheer-maker is to establish good health, in himself, and in others.

Some writers claim that, if only the race were filled with euphoria—that grand sense of perfect physical well being—there would be no need of religion, for we should all be saints! Perhaps this is going too far; but, at all events, we know that good health promotes morality. So by making men happier through making them healthier, the missionary of cheer is surely bettering the morals of the world.

Again, happiness is impossible without a clear conscience. The cheer-maker must wash this window of the soul, and make it clear as crystal, before the inward eye can look out upon a world sparkling with sunshine. Let the outward circumstance be what it may, no soul can be happy which is not at peace within. So the man who brings joy into the world, brings cleansing for the inner life, brings spiritual adjustment and harmony with truth and right.

Once more, no one can be happy who is not a giver and transmitter of happiness. A lonely happy man never was. Even the motes dance together in the sunshine. You must share your joy, in order that you may keep it. So the apostle of cheer is always preaching those great Christian virtues of unselfishness and brotherhood. He is the most effective of all teachers of the Golden Rule, for when people learn that doing unto others as they would have others do unto them is the very coin that buys the greatest measure of personal blessedness, they will do good by the operation of a natural and inevitable law.

Here, then, are three very vital ways by which you may better the world by such an agreeable method as happiness. But your happiness, and the happiness you advocate, must be genuine. No mere wild roystering and outward show of mirth shall count for deep Christian happiness. There is a sting in every seeming joy which is not clean and sweet and peaceful. The revel and the carouse are not genuine pleasures. They make a show of mirth—that is all. Afterward their fruit is ashes on the tongue. But the healthful, blameless, joy-giving joy—that is one of God's ministers. And you, if you believe and accept the duty of cheer, are helping the world heavenward.—Herald.

Bible Study in Colleges.

While there is much discussion over the use of the Bible in public schools, there is good ground to believe that even in institutions that are free to use the Scriptures their study occupies too secondary a place. One thing is certain. The great majority of our educated young people are not as familiar with the Bible as they ought to be. And because of this ignorance they are more liable to be led away by any new plausible speculations. Speaking of this ignorance, in Harper's, Charles Dudley Warner says: "This ignorance is disclosed not in attempted religious instruction, but in the study of the ordinary branches of a literary education in our universities and colleges. The pupils are entirely unable to understand a great mass of allusions in the masterpieces of English poetry and prose. Some of these pupils are victims of the idea that the Bible should not be read by the young, for fear that they will be prejudiced in a religious way before their minds are mature enough to select a religion for themselves. Now, wholly apart from its religious or its ethical value, the Bible is the one Book that no intelligent person who wishes to come into contact with the world of thought and to share the ideas of the great minds of the Christian era can afford to be ignorant of. All modern literature and all art are permeated with it. There is scarcely a great work in the language that can be fully understood and enjoyed without this knowledge, so full is it of allusions and illustrations from the Bible. This is true of fiction, of poetry, of economic and of philosophic works, and also of the scientific and even agnostic treatises."—Exchange.

Soul Food.

Some Christians die of starvation. They surfeit the inner man with stimulants of all sorts—with spiced books of fiction, with "light reading" which is mere sillabub. Many swallow little else than their daily newspaper. The moral faculties become debilitated on this flimsy diet. Now, all the athletic Christians, all those who can carry heavy loads, do thorough work, and stand a long pull, are hungry feeders on God's Book. Nothing will impart sinew and muscle to your piety like the thorough study and digestion of your Bible. A good sermon must be digested, or it will be of little use to you; daily bread of the Bible must go through the same process in order that it may be assimilated and taken into your spiritual fiber. "Thy words were found, and I did eat them, and they were the joy of mine heart," said the old-time saint. One strong Bible text lodged in the memory, and turned over and well digested will be breakfast for your soul, and in the strength of it you may go through the whole day. A soldier is never in so good a trim for battle as after a sound sleep and a square morning meal; it is not easy to fight or to march on an empty stomach. In like manner, every servant of Jesus Christ may recruit his or her spiritual strength by reading Christ's words and thinking about them, by meditation, by prayer and soul converse with God. I have always observed that the light readers and light thinkers make light Christians, and those who neglect their Bibles and closets soon dwindle into dwarfs. Having no depth of root, their religion withers away.—Selected.

Too Much Pressure.

Horace Bushnell, near the close of his days, said to a young friend: "If I had my life to live over again, there is one thing I would not do—I would not push." The saintly and venerable Fenelon wrote: "Let the waters flow on in their course. Let men be men; that is to say, be vain, inconsistent, unjust, false and presumptuous. You can not help it. Accustom yourself to unreasonableness and injustice. Remain at peace in the presence of God. Be satisfied with doing with calmness what depends on yourself, and let the rest be as if it were not."

Such sayings are far from being adapted to all, but they contain a truth which some people would do well to heed. There is such a thing as pushing far too hard against doors which Providence has closed for our good. There is such a thing as working beyond our strength, burning out the candle at both ends, and dying prematurely with only half our life-work accomplished.

Some good people there are who should learn to wait on Providence patiently, careful to keep exact step with God, and ready on many occasions to say, as Jesus did, "My time is not yet come." We shall accomplish more in the end if we are chiefly solicitous to get into exact line with the perfect will of God instead of putting forward so prominently our own personal wills. Many lives would be improved if there was more floating and less fighting. It is not the how much, but the how that God looks at mainly.—Zion's Herald.

For the Advocate.

IN MEMORIAM.

BY MRS. L. CRARY SADLER.

[S. F. Crary, D. D., editor of the California Christian Advocate for the last fifteen years, died at his home in San Francisco, Cal., of la grippe, March 16, 1895, aged seventy-six. After the last General Conference of the M. E. Church in '92 (of which body he had been a member since 1856) he was partially paralyzed, and, as his pastor said at the funeral service, "His right forgot its editorial cunning;" but he was wonderfully blessed during all that time by the constant presence of God, even to the close of his beautiful and useful life. Among his last utterances were: "God is good, yes—oh! yes, yes." "It don't make any difference so we walk with God—yes, walk with God." "O I love to think of the goodness of God."]

Oh! brother mine, why should I mourn and weep,
Because thou first hast "fallen on sleep;"
Thy work is done, thy warfare all is o'er,
And thou hast reached the "far off" shore—
That oft thine eye of faith hadst seen,
With all its glint and golden sheen.
The King in all his beauty—thou
Hast now beheld, and on thy brow,
Methinks, I see the blessed calm and smile,
That erst illum'd thy face the while
Thou still wert with us in the days of old,
As now thou walk'st the streets of gold
With God, in white. Oh say can aught
Of grief or pain come with this thought?
Thou didst not live unto thyself,
Thou didst not live for fame or pelf,
Unto thyself thou didst not die,
For thou wert Christ's. Then why should I
Still mourn for thee? Thou art not dead,
But only walking with thy God instead.
And he will comfort all the hearts that ache,
And "oh, what difference does it make,
Just so we walk with God?" "Yes, yes,
Our God is good," and we will bless
His name, howe'er we feel bereft,
"Oh, yes! Oh, yes!" His goodness is our stay,
And we will "walk with God" in that eternal day.
Till then, Pacific's waves with music of the Pine,

Pearl River, La., April 5, 1895.

Written.

"Don't write there," said a father to his son, who was writing with a diamond on his window.

"Why not?"

"Because you can't rub it out. Did it ever occur to you, my child, that you are daily writing that which you can't rub out? You made a cruel speech to your mother the other day. It wrote itself on her loving heart, and gave her great pain. It is there now, and hurts her every time she thinks of it. You can't rub it out. You whispered a wicked thought one day in the ear of your play-mate. It wrote itself on his mind, and led him to do a wicked act. It is there now; you can't rub it out. All your thoughts, all your words, all your acts are written in the book of God, and you can't rub them out. What you write on the minds of others will stay there, but what is written in God's book may and can be blotted out. You can't rub it out, but the precious blood of Jesus can blot it out if you are sorry and ask him. Go, then, my child, and ask Jesus to blot out the bad things you have written in the book of God."—Selected.

An Important Experiment.

The National Temperance Hospital, located at 1619 Diversey avenue, Chicago, was organized under the State law of Illinois, March 27, 1884. Its object is the practical demonstration of temperance principles in the administration of the medicine and the inculcation of temperance truths in medical education. Eminent physicians are on the staff, and every effort will be made to have this hospital rank with the very best, and even to emulate the great London Temperance Hospital. There is a training-school for nurses with a very able superintendent at its head. The hospital doors are open for the reception of patients without regard to age, sex, or nationality. Persons from nineteen States, and representing thirteen nationalities, entered last year. The management is vested in a board of thirty trustees. While we believe this work to be only in its infancy, we will have reason to rejoice at the progress it is making. During the Summer of 1894 a claim was made that alcohol was necessary as a solvent for medicines, and to prepare the field for operations in capital surgical cases. A letter was authorized by the Board of Trustees of the hospital, and addressed to a number of surgeons and physicians of high repute in the city of Chicago, asking whether they considered it necessary, and what they use as antiseptics. They received a large number of replies, of which I will give a few: Dr. S. prepares medicine without alcohol; does not use it as a preserving agent, having found it not necessary. Dr. E. is unalterably opposed to the use of alcohol; can cover the field pretty well without it. Dr. B. sees no great need of alcohol in surgery. Dr. M. never uses any of the preparations of alcohol as an antiseptic, rarely ever prescribes a tincture, the tablet form is much more valuable and certain. Dr. T. does not use alcohol. The patient can not get any toxic or medicinal effect from alcohol. Dr. Sarah Hackett Stevenson, president of the hospital staff, does not think it necessary to use alcohol. Tablet trituates are better than tinctures. We can furnish many more such strong testimonies if space be allowed. We want co-operation in this line of work by Christian people.—Northwestern Advocate.

There are only two ways in which you can improve your health, be careful of your diet and sleep well.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

CREAM TOMATO SOUP.—Steam, or stew slowly, half a pound of corn beef and a little bit of butter over a slow fire for an hour or two. Then add twelve ripe tomatoes. Stew the whole for an hour, and then pass through the sieve into pan again; add a little pepper and salt, boil for ten minutes, and thicken with a generous tablespoon of butter in which has been stirred a dessert of flour. Pour into tureen with one cup of cream or milk, and serve at once.—International Cook Book.

Delicious cheese sandwiches may be made by cooking in a double boiler half a pound of grated cheese with half a cup of cream or milk, a tiny pinch of mustard and a little salt; thicken with a teaspoonful of flour; when thoroughly cooked and just before removing from the fire add a well-beaten egg. Have ready some thinly-toasted bread or some crackers, and spread while hot. The crackers should be of a sort that will split. These sandwiches must, of course, be eaten while hot; they make a very dainty relish for luncheon or tea.—Ladies' Home Journal.

Potato croquettes make a pretty dish to serve with cold meat of any sort. They are made from finely-mashed potato whipped with the yolks of eggs until very light, then seasoned with pepper, salt, a little onion juice, some finely-chopped parsley and further moistened with a little cream. When thoroughly mixed heat in a double boiler, and when cool enough to handle form into croquettes, dip in egg yolk and cracker crumbs and drop into boiling lard. When brown, remove with a skimmer, place for a moment on a sheet of brown paper, and then remove to a hot platter; garnish with parsley and serve.—Ladies' Home Journal.

NEWMAN—JUNIUS EASTHAM NEWMAN was the son of Isaac and Mary Newman. He was born in Mt. Pleasant, Mason county, W. Va., 1819; was licensed to preach in 1843. In the year of 1845 he came to Alabama, and was admitted to the Alabama Conference in the fall of the same year, being a member of the class with Bishop McTyeire. He faithfully and acceptably served the several charges to which he was assigned for more than twenty years the last four as presiding elder of the Macon district.

In 1867 he went out to Brazil, where he labored among English-speaking people, preaching wherever opportunity offered. The M. E. Church, South, in Brazil was organized by him in 1869, near Ste. Barbara, Sao Paulo. It was composed of eight persons, all Americans. His one great desire was that the church would send out young men to learn the language of the people and labor among the natives. He did not cease to make this appeal, but year after year called for help until it was answered in the person of J. J. Ransom, of Tennessee Conference, in 1876. From this small beginning has sprung up our great mission work in Brazil. My father was naturally of a buoyant, hopeful disposition, and when his plans failed he took up the burden again and worked on just as cheerfully as before always trusting in the final triumph of the gospel. God spared him long enough to see some of the fruits of his sowing: the establishment of Methodism in Brazil.

In 1886 his health failed. The many years' continuous residence in the tropics, and the great burden, in regard to the work, which he bore, brought on nervous prostration. He returned to the United States in the Fall of 1886, and the change of climate was beneficial. We hoped for his complete restoration, but the Lord willed it otherwise. The last few months of his life he was a great, but patient, sufferer. He quietly passed to the home above at three A. M., Sunday, the twelfth. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Simpson, at his home, near Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., on Monday afternoon.

He was twice married, his first wife being Mary Phillips, of Marion, Ala. The second was to Mrs. L. E. Barr, a daughter of Rev. Wilson Daniel, a Baptist minister of Alabama.

MARY P. CARR.

Meridian, Miss.

WALTERS—MARGARET ANN WALTERS was born in South Carolina, 1819, and departed this life May 11, 1895. She was married to Richard Walters, 1836.

As a wife she was true and affectionate. As a mother she was devoted and tender. During her last illness she suffered the most intense, excruciating pain for more than a week; yet in the intervals of these severe paroxysms she would speak of her faith in Christ, and say she was not afraid to die, and often exulted in the love of God and the hope of a better world beyond the river. She was ready to go.

May God bless and sustain the sorrowing ones, and bring them at last to meet their loved one in the home of the blest, where parting will never come again!

H. S. JOHNS, P. C.

WILLIAMS—J. H. WILLIAMS was born in Leake county, Miss., October, 1844, and died in Durant, Miss., April 19, 1895. On Dec. 28, 1865, he was married to Miss A. C. Hines, of Attala county. He was converted early in life and became a member of the M. E. Church, South—familiar with her doctrines and loyal to the faith which he professed.

By nature he was endowed with noble qualities of mind and heart. "He was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith." The sphere in which he wrought most conspicuously for God was in the Sabbath-school. By nature and by grace he was well equipped for this work. He loved it.

He came to Durant about seven years ago. Soon afterward he was called to the superintendency of the Methodist Sabbath-school. The condition of the school to-day attests the wisdom of the choice. He loved children, and knew how to sympathize with parents. His responsive nature had been chastened and purified by the fires of affliction. To him were born four children, three of whom crossed the river before him. His body sleeps beside them in the cemetery at Kosciusko.

He was a man of magnanimous spirit. Settled in his own convictions, he could afford to hold the opinions of others in charitable estimation. He loved all true Christians, of whatever creed. He was unselfish; he could not ignore the wants of a fellow-creature. This virtue he practiced to his own serious hurt. May the good Lord send us more such men!

J. T. MURRAH.

BRYANT—Sister MATTIE BRYANT (aged sixteen), daughter of Dr. Henry Bryant, has been a consistent member of our church for three years. Removing from Ringgold, she brought her certificate of church membership with her and placed it in the church at East Point.

For some time past she has been an invalid. Consumption marked her for its victim, and her sun went down ere it had reached its meridian height. But she was ready, and its setting was but its earlier rising in the realms of eternity, there to bask forever in the sunlight of God's love. I was with her a few days before her death. To listen to her comforting assurances that "all was well," was but to strengthen the faith and confirm the hope in those assembled around her. Before taking my departure I read Psalms xxiii, commenting upon it at large, and received the promise from her to cleave to Christ as a shepherd.

Together with the family we mingled our voices in prayer in behalf of the sufferer, and also for sustaining grace to be showered upon her loved ones.

A few days later her remains passed by the parsonage, during my absence from home. Her mother told wife to tell me her darling passed away, saying, "The Lord is my shepherd."

Mourn not for her, loved ones. "The Lord doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men." "Those beckoning hands" are but calling, in unspoken language, to that home where loved ones meet to part no more.

H. W. WALLACE.

CLARK—Mrs. LAURA ERLINE CLARK, daughter of Dr. A. H. and W. E. Thomas, was born in Chickasaw county, State of Mississippi, April 9, 1863, and died at Mabee, Miss., April 26, 1895. She was converted and joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1879. She was married to Mr. J. E. Clark, Feb. 27, 1889. This union was blessed with three children, two daughters and one son. Her husband died Dec. 10, 1893. Her bright little boy, only eighteen months old, died soon after.

She was a dutiful daughter, an affectionate sister, a devoted wife, a fond mother, a true friend and a faithful member of her church. Her life was a blessing to the town in which she lived. Modest by nature, firm in her adherence to what she believed right, and so, blending the Christian graces in her life, she became an acknowledged model for the young ladies of the town in which she lived. She was unanimously elected teacher of a large Bible class in Sunday-school, which position she held at the time of her death. In her sickness of eight weeks all the attention that love could bestow was given her by her brothers and sister. She said that she wanted to live, that she might raise her two little daughters, one five, the other three years of age, but that she was ready to die and resigned to her Master's will. May God watch over her little ones, and pour the oil of consolation in the sad hearts of her brothers and sister!

P. E. DUNCAN.

HERRING—Died at the home of her sister, Mrs. Hooker, in Beauregard, Miss., April 25, 1895, Mrs. M. A. HERRING, wife of T. A. Herring. Sister Herring was born Nov. 26, 1851. She spent most of her life in Copiah county, at Beauregard. She became a follower of Christ early in life, and had matured into a beautiful Christian character. Her life was one of self-sacrifice, gentleness, submission to the will of God, maintaining a faith in her Savior that kept her in adversity and prosperity.

She was twice married; on May 19, 1869, to J. J. James, who died Oct. 6, 1883; on Feb. 16, 1893, to T. A. Herring, who is left, with several children and many relatives and friends, to mourn their great loss.

Her death was triumphant, being perfectly resigned and anxious to go to meet her Savior. She left a parting exhortation, which will, no doubt, lead her children and loved ones to the cross. The God of all grace sanctify this sorrow to their good. Her pastor,

W. T. GRIFFIN.

GODFREY—The following resolutions were adopted by the Pleasant Ridge Sunday-school, near Bradley, Miss., on Sunday, May 5, 1895:

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God, the ruler and Dispenser of all human events, to enter our community and body of Sunday-school workers, and on the seventeenth day of April, 1895, remove from our midst and association by death our esteemed friend and brother, Dr. E. H. GODFREY, in the forty-first year of his age. Beneath the surface of this statement lies the sorrow of every member of this Sunday-school. Two years ago this Sunday-school was organized, and Dr. Godfrey was elected teacher of the advanced class. As a teacher, he was scarcely less to be admired than as a man. He was well versed in the Bible, and had the gift of teaching. His place as teacher was rarely ever vacant, unless providentially kept away. He was a good scholar, a constant student, and he possessed those qualities of head and heart which wear and grow brighter at every contact. No one ever became acquainted with him that did not love him. As a physician, he was prompt and kind; as a son, he was obedient; as a brother, husband and father, he was kind and loving; as a citizen, he stood in the front ranks; and as a neighbor, he was like the good Samaritan, ever ready to help. This Sunday-school deeply sympathize with the grief-stricken mother, wife, children, relatives and friends in this, their sore bereavement, and in the sincerity of our souls commend them to the care and keeping of that God whom Dr. Godfrey so dearly loved, "the only true and living God."

Resolved, That in the death of our brother and friend this Sunday-school has lost a most useful member, and his class a most faithful co-worker and instructor.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the Minutes of this Sunday-school, and published in the East Mississippi Times, CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, and Baptist Record, and also a copy sent to the bereaved family. Respectfully submitted.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

This Bible, which we offer to our readers, is the very best Bible on the market. We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

Hon. Walter Q Gresham, Secretary of State, Cleveland's Cabinet, died on May 28. Pneumonia, superinduced by pleurisy, was the cause of death.

Seventy-one candidates for the Naval Academy at Annapolis have passed the examinations, and none so far have failed physically, which is unusual.

The local police force kept a strict watch during Saturday night and all day Sunday for Sunday law violators, and quite a number were arrested throughout the city.

The National Temperance Union, just organized in Chicago, is composed of men and women who believe that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union has outlived its usefulness and is impracticable in its operations.

Mr. John A. Morris died at his Texas ranch on May 26. He has done a great deal to improve this city, and some of its finest business structures and an important public institution, the Morris Baths, are due to his enterprise and beneficence.

At a meeting of the local Police Board, last week, Mr. Bloomfield, the newly appointed commissioner, introduced a resolution "that all offenders against the Sunday law shall be arrested and imprisoned in accordance with law, and not simply reported." It was passed.

A public appeal to the people of Louisiana and New Orleans has been issued by the "Woman's Auxiliary to the Antitoxin Commission." The task which the women of New Orleans have taken upon themselves of raising the further $15,000 necessary to the establishment of a plant for the manufacture of antitoxin has begun in earnest.

Chicago is going to house cleaning with the proverbial energy of a new broom. The mayor has stirred up the chief of police, and stringent orders have been issued to pull all the gambling games, wherever and whenever found, to raid the dives, to nab the saloon keepers that fail to close at sharp 12 Saturday nights, to close the "massage parlors," and generally to clean out all vice and iniqnity.

The fifth Convention of the United Confederate Veterans, which was held in Houston, Texas, last week, adjourned on May 24. The meeting has been one of the largest in the history of the organization and a most harmonious one. The reunion has given impetus to the movement to raise the necessary funds for the Jefferson Davis monument in Richmond. The camps of the association promised sums ranging from $100 to $1,000, and to secure whatever amounts they could by earnest endeavor. Ten thousand dollars was promised by less than one-fifth of the camps, and the $1,000 cash was raised in twenty minutes during the Thursday session. The corner-stone is to be laid next Spring in Richmond, where the reunion will be held.

FOREIGN.

England now gets 86 per cent. of her tea from India and Ceylon. It was only 3 per cent. in 1864. It is much stronger than Chinese tea.

It is reported that Russia, France and Germany propose to pay the indemnity which Japan may demand for evacuating the Lao Tung peninsula.

The majority of the advisers of the Sultan have counseled him to agree to the propositions of the powers regarding reforms in Armenia.

A committee of the British House of Commons has decided that a peer of the realm can not be a member of that House. The decision is in the case of Lord Selborne, who succeeded to the peerage while a member of the Commons.

Formosa has declared its independence. The population will fight the Japanese, and will not submit to the orders of the imperial government. It has declared itself a republic, the flag being a yellow dragon on a blue ground. The governor, Shang Ting Sung, is made president, and has notified the foreign representatives.

An imperial proclamation has been issued in China, announcing the ratification of the treaty of peace between China and Japan. It is declared that the government deeply pondered the advice which has been offered it to continue the war rather than surrender, but the crisis demands a decision, as no victory has been obtained on sea or land owing to the incompetency of the leaders who had only been able to recruit the rabble.

Gen. Wolseley is doing all in his power to promote temperance in the British army. His experience in Egypt, India and South Africa has proved to his satisfaction that total abstainers from intoxicants can endure far more hardship than those who are in the habit of drinking even in moderate quantities.

Although the outbreak in Cuba appears to be progressing with varying success, it now seems certain that the struggle will be a long and determined one. Numerical strength and equipment lie on the side of the government, but the insurgents have the advantage in a knowledge of the country and in local sympathy.

WESLEY AND PERFECTION.

The following communication from Rev. John Wesley was originally published in No. 1519, Vol. XX., of Lloyd's Evening Post, London, April 3, 1767, on page 4. A copy of this issue of the Post is to be found in the library of DePauw University. The letter is as follows. X

March 26, 1767.

To the Editor of Lloyd's Evening Post—

SIR: Many times the publisher of the Christian Magazine has attacked me without fear or wit. And hereby he has convinced his impartial readers of one thing at least, that (as the vulgar say) "his fingers itch to be at me;" that he has a passionate desire to measure swords with me. But I have other work upon my hands; I can employ the short remainder of my life to better purpose.

The occasion of his late attack is this: Five or six and thirty years ago I much admired the character of a perfect Christian drawn by Clemens Alexandrinus. Five or six and twenty years ago a thought came into my mind of drawing such a character myself, only in a more scriptural manner, and mostly in the very words of Scripture. This I entitled the "Character of a Methodist," believing that curiosity would incite more persons to read it, and also that some prejudice might thereby be removed from candid men. But that none might imagine I intended a panegyric either upon myself or my friends, I guarded against this in the very title page, saying both in the name of myself and them, "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect." To the same effect I speak in the conclusion: "These are the principles and practices of our sect; these are the marks of a true Methodist" (that is a true Christian, as I immediately after explained myself). "By these alone do those who are in derision, so called, desire to be distinguished from other men." (Page 11.) "By these marks do we labor to distinguish ourselves from those whose minds or lives are not according to the gospel of Christ." (Page 12.)

Upon this Rusticulus, or Dr. Dodd, says: "A Methodist, according to Mr. Wesley, is one who is perfect, and sinneth not in thought, word or deed."

Sir, have me excused. This is not according to Mr. Wesley. I have told all the world I am not perfect; and yet you allow me to be a Methodist. I tell you flat, I have not attained the character I draw. Will you pin it upon me in spite of my teeth?

"But Mr. Wesley says, the other Methodists have." I say no such thing. What I say, after having given a scriptural account of a perfect Christian, is this: "By these marks the Methodists desire to be distinguished from other men; by these we labor to distinguish ourselves." And do not yourself desire and labor after the very same thing?

But you insist, "Mr. Wesley affirms the Methodists—that is, all Methodists—to be perfectly holy and righteous." When do I affirm this? Not in the tract before us. In the front of this I affirm just the contrary; and that I affirm it anywhere else is more than I know. Be pleased, sir, to point out the place; till this is done, all you add (bitterly enough) is mere brutum fulmen. And the Methodists, so called, may still "declare (without any impeachment of their sincerity) that they do not come to the holy table trusting in their own righteousness, but in God's manifold and great mercies." I am, sir, Yours, etc.,

JOHN WESLEY.

Thin or gray hair and bald heads, so displeasing to many people as marks of age, may be averted for a long time by using Hall's Hair Renewer.

It is important to think right, more important to feel right, still more important to do right, but to be right is most important of all.—Abbott.

All the Clothes,

all at once, makes too much of a wash, perhaps. Use Pearline, and it's easy to do a few at a time. Lots of women do this. They take the napkins, towels, handkerchiefs, hosiery, etc., each day as they are cast aside.

Soak them in Pearline and water, boil them a few minutes, rinse out—and there they are, perfectly clean.

No bother, no rubbing. When the regular wash-day comes, there isn't much left to do. Why isn't this just as well as to keep everything and wash in one day? 419

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE EXCELLENCY OF WISDOM.

(Job xxviii, 12-28.)

Solomon chose wisdom rather than power and wealth. Wisdom is fairer than beauty. If all human excellencies are formed into a bouquet, wisdom is the central flower. Do not agree with Wordsworth who, in "The Oak and the Broom," declares:

"He is of the wisest man
Who is not wise at all."

Wisdom has both, a literal and an idiomatic meaning.

1. The literal meaning. By literal meaning we have reference to the definitions of linguists, etc.

(1) It is not understanding. This is mere cognition, the operation of acumen. Man may be intellectually brilliant, sharp, keen, smart, without being wise.

(2) It is not knowledge. This is accumulation of acquired information. The mind a reservoir of literary facts—an encyclopedia of scholastic data.

(3) Wisdom is practical application of understanding and knowledge, experimental use of same. When the former is retained under a bushel, the possessor is not wise. Wisdom requires employment of a candlestick. Coleridge calls it common sense in an uncommon degree.

2. The idiomatic meaning of wisdom has reference to a man's religion. Thus: "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." Reversely stated: "The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God." The last verse of our lesson given this meaning fully.

(1) It is the fear of the Lord. Yes, perfect love casteth out fear, but not the fear of God, not filial fear. Fear to offend God, incur his displeasure. Fear lest we forfeit his love.

(2) It is to depart from evil. Evil, emanating from hell and leading thither. Total abstinence from same. Depart from evil, as emigrant departs from scenes of childhood, ne'er to return.

3. In our lesson Job computes the great value of wisdom.

(1) More valuable than coral and pearls, than topaz, onyx and sapphire. Valuable? Without it sublunar life will prove a failure, and celestial life impossible.

(2) That it is not purchasable. Is not in the market. It is not found on the counters of venders. Silver and gold can not buy it. Said the wise shepherd of the distressed Abbey of St. Gall to his employer:

"I acquired as my birthright, of vaine untold,

(3) St. James assures that God gives wisdom to the devout petitioner. Christ is the quintessence of wisdom. When he, the hope of glory, lives in us, wisdom will characterize everything we say and do.

Deafness Can Not Be Cured

by local applications, as they can not reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound, or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result; and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Wyclif in Conflict with the Papacy.

BY SCOTT F. HERSHEY, PH.D.

III.

The great English nation has had a fic experience with the Roman acy. Its black art of evil diplo- y began early and lasted long. e has done much to destroy the of English history; still, the h is accessible to the diligent stu- t, and it should be told to each ris- generation.

was in this extremity that a man, ready by God, was ready to step It was John Wyclif. At four ent periods—though somewhat fowing—he stands out with re- able power. One was when the ament was swept with the storm between King Edward and the Wyclif went up from Oxford to that famous Parliament. The power met in this Parliament its defeat in any Parliamentary body. controversy which worked another in Wyclif's life was that which rned the separation of Church ate. This move was inaugurated Wyclif. He saw the corruption of Church and the peril of the State, growing out of an entangling . Such a union of these two high orities, with the head of both rest- ing in the hand of one man, seemed to Wyclif to be a great evil. From every point he argues against the church possessing any property, except what was necessary to carry on the work for which it existed. The abuses which had grown up on account of the property possessions of the monks greatly aided him. He soon had a terrific storm upon him. It culminated in a council at St. Paul's, in London, which became so turbulent the presiding Bishop had to dissolve it. Wyclif won the day. Disestablishment began, and has gone forward until the opinion generally prevails in Protestant Churches that the affairs of Church and those of the State should be wholly separated.

A third great accomplishment in his busy life of toil was his circulation of the Scriptures. He laid in this the foundation for great things. He taught devout young men how to go about the country and show the people the Holy Scriptures. They traveled about from village to village, and house to house; and in the open doors, on street corners, and by the wayside, they read the Bible, and instructed in religion and morals. The whole country was leavened; vast multitudes were converted. It was a primitive sort of itinerancy which, over four hundred years later, was taken up by the Methodists, and developed into that wonderfully popular and successful pastoral itinerancy which has been such a power in modern evangelism. But one of the most eminent deeds ever carried out by a Christian scholar was performed by Wyclif when he translated the Bible into the common tongue of the people. This was the most important step up to that date in the English Reformation, and, indeed, in the progress of English liberties. The Bible came to be the foundation of the common law, and was inwrought into English thought. Sir Matthew Hale, in an important decision of the Supreme Court of England, decided that Christianity was a part of the common law of the land. Milton may not be charged with extravagance when he says: "Had it not been for Wyclif, neither the Bohemian Huss, and Jerome, nor the name of Luther, or of Calvin, had ever been known."

The Bible has been the headlight of English civilization, and yet this is the Book which the Roman Papacy has so strongly and constantly pursued and destroyed. Rome can not, she dare not, tolerate the Scriptures in the hands of all the people. The constant Bible reader soon puts the authority of the Bible above that of the Pope, and that settles the Papacy.

In these recent years the Roman Church has shown the old-time opposition to the Bible in the vernacular. In France, in 1887, La Sarre, by consent of the Pope, published a French translation of the Gospels. It reached a hundred thousand copies in a year. The people read it, were in danger, and in just a year and fifteen days the same Pope issued his orders to stop the publication and circulation, and turn all copies over to the church authorities to be destroyed. I have his orders before me as I write. It was obeyed. On the walls of a South American town, last year, was posted a notice from the priest, saying that "liberty of worship did not exist in that country." Such is Rome!

Boston, Mass.

Some Points of Methodist Doctrine.

My old books teach me that original sin, or natural depravity, is in no way affected or changed by regeneration. I am sure this statement will surprise some of my younger brethren; but this is true. I saw this in my books when I was a beardless boy. The old authors were clear in their thinking. They did not get tangled up and mix things. Regeneration is new life in Christ begotten in us by the Holy Ghost. It is a new man in the old man; the spirit of life in Christ given to make us free from the law of sin and death. The spirit and power of this new life in Christ impels us to put off the old man, to crucify him, and to come to perfect manhood, to maturity in the Christian life. It will take the average man half a day's hard thinking to get this idea of regeneration firmly fixed in his mind. The end of this new life is Christian perfection. The tendency, the bent, the inclination of it is to this attainment. Sanctification is cleansing, setting apart, giving this new life wholly and unreservedly to God. This is the work of the Holy Ghost. No part of the process of salvation from sin, from prevenient grace to its final consummation, can be carried on without the Spirit. It is all the work of the Spirit—conviction, repentance, faith, regeneration, and entire sanctification. All that is good in us comes from outside of us, from above. The old books are a unit on this point. Pelagius was charged with holding that the power of turning to God was innate in man. This all our old men oppose.

Sanctification has to do with cleansing from sin. It is perfectly distinct from regeneration, and has its own peculiar office in the work of grace. It is a distinct and separate work, in no way like regeneration, not an addition to it, and in no correct sense a "second blessing." My old books guard me against using the term "second blessing." It tends to confuse the mind about things that are separate and perfectly distinct. It mixes in thought the ideas of regeneration and sanctification. By comparison, it tends to minify one and magnify the other. This may be seen in this way: Conviction, first blessing; repentance, second blessing; faith, third blessing; regeneration, fourth blessing; sanctification, fifth blessing. All these are wrought in us by the self-same Spirit, and the purpose of each is to lead to the next, and so sanctification is in all of them. This order may help us in our thinking, but it is unknown in God's Word, and it is foreign to the mind of the sanctifying Spirit. Each and all of these are free gifts, and each is given, or imparted, to us by the Spirit just as soon as we are ready for it, and each comes instantaneously. No matter how long we are in getting ready for each, it is given by the Spirit at once. He does not tarry, does not delay.

My books tell me sanctification is the death, or destruction, of self, and that self is the spirit of original sin. This being dead, sin is dead, and my life is hid with Christ in God. If the spirit of sin is dead, the body of sin is dead also. I have no will, no bent, no purpose, no inclination but to please God in everything. However, just here all my books remind me that I am not free from the consequences of original sin, and never will be while I live. My ignorance and my many infirmities demand constant humility, watchfulness and prayer. They urge me to pray daily and earnestly for the forgiveness of sin, and to watch more closely in this state than in any other in the whole process of salvation from sin.

With my whole heart and soul I have sought to know, from my Bible and from my books, exactly what was meant by being sanctified wholly, or entirely. More or less earnestly, and more or less steadily, I have sought this blessing since about the fifteenth day of February, 1847, the date of my conversion, when the gift of new life was imparted by the Holy Ghost.

The best I can make of it is, that entire sanctification is supreme love for God and perfect love for man enthroned in the heart, mind, and soul; governing, controlling, and guiding all our thoughts, words, and actions towards both God and man. I am sure I have not missed the spirit of holiness, however far I may have missed the proper expression in defining it.

All my old books, without a single exception, guard me against professing sanctification, against claiming that I am sanctified. There is profound wisdom in this word of caution. These old men were deeply versed in human nature. They knew how readily pride would creep in, even at the door of religious attainments. In this way self, the soul of original sin, would stealthily slip back on the throne of the heart.

Instead of professing sanctification, claiming it as a personal possession, my old books urge me to speak of it as an "aspiration," a thing I am aiming at and seeking after. They would have me make it the vanishing point, the ideal, the goal of my life. There is a very profound philosophy in this suggestion. It is more—it is a sound philosophy in whatever light we view it, theologically or psychologically. A high and holy aspiration is the order of God, and it is a constant stimulus to the human mind. It is not so much what we have attained, as what we are reaching out after, that does us most good. The mark of the prize is ever before us. This idea of sanctification as an aspiration, more than an attainment, a present possession, is deeply inwrought into the very fiber of our Methodism.

I was deeply impressed with this thought in November, 1860, when I stood before Bishop Pierce in the Methodist Church in Aberdeen, Miss., to be admitted into full connection; and I am more and more impressed with the idea of sanctification as an aspiration as the same scene is enacted year after year. "Are you going on to perfection? Do you expect to be made perfect in love in this life? Are you groaning after it?" This is a very high and a holy ambition. These questions are in exact harmony with the teaching of all my old books. It is the public profession of a holy aspiration, and not the announcement of an attainment or a present possession. I answered those questions affirmatively then, and silently and earnestly I answer them affirmatively yet. This is my aspiration. This is Methodism, Methodist doctrine, and Methodist teaching in all her standards, as I read and understand them.

Woe betide the day, if it ever comes, when these solemn questions concerning a holy aspiration are changed to a public profession of sanctification! Just think of it! "Are you perfect? Have you been perfected in love in this life? Are you rejoicing over it and publishing it?" When this comes, if it ever does, then presumption and fanaticism will go arm in arm. The claim of inspiration and superiority, lordship over God's heritage, will come in, and the vineyard of the Lord will be laid waste.

These are some of the points of Methodist doctrine I get out of my old books. I believe there is not one single item named here that I can not verify by one, or more, or all of my books. I have read these books again and again, and I have marked them and pondered their utterances in my heart, and I have prayed over them.

I have nothing new on original sin, depravity, regeneration, sanctification, and the witness of the Spirit. It is all old. I got it out of my books.

Now and then some one springs up crying: "Eureka! Eureka! I have found it; have found something new." I go back to my old books and find it is an old error that was knocked in the head and killed dead five hundred years ago. "Winds of doctrine"—specially when they are mainly wind—do not drive me away easily.

"An Interrogation Point Interrogated."

In the ADVOCATE, of May 30, is a paragraph under the caption, "An Interrogation Point Interrogated," and signed by Rev. W. Winans Drake. I will review the matter with a view of setting it in the proper light.

1. A meeting was held in McCarthy Square, by Rev. D. C. Rawls, under the auspices of the Louisiana Holiness Association, as I was then informed, and the information has since been confirmed.

2. I was, by note, requested to announce that the meeting would be held, the time and place being stated.

3. I was not approached by anyone connected with the meeting other than the above note, which I found in the Bible on the pulpit board Sunday morning, March 3.

4. The person whose name was appended to that note was at church and shook hands with me before service that Sunday morning, and yet did not mention the note or the meeting to me.

5. I was not invited to take any part in the meeting by anyone connected with the movement until March 18.

6. The first thing that was said to me by anyone connected with the meeting was said by Bro. D. C. Rawls when he said, "I am going to take some members into the church down at the tent, and if you want them, I will send them to you."

7. I replied that, in my judgment, Bro. Rawls had no right to receive members into the church within the bounds of my charge; that he had no church to receive them into; also, that I wanted all that belonged to my charge, and would receive the applicants myself if he would give me the names, that I might see them.

8. Bro. Rawls invited me to a conference with himself that evening at 5 P. M.

9. I replied that I had an engagement at that hour, and asked that the hour be made earlier.

10. Bro. Rawls explained that he had an appointment with an applicant for church membership at that hour, and could not change it.

11. I then replied that, if possible, I would be at the place at 5 P. M. sharp, but would be able to spend only a few minutes with him at most.

12. I appeared at the place at the time appointed, and remained a few minutes—at least five. When I entered the car, going to my other appointment, it was eight minutes after five, and Bro. Rawls had not yet arrived.

13. I have been thus exact, for it has been alleged that I refused to accept the invitation of Bro. Rawls, and that I did not go to the place at the time appointed, and that I did not want his converts.

14. Bro. Rawls did not speak to me concerning the matter again, notwithstanding I left a request that he call on me in my study any time between nine and twelve o'clock of the following morning.

15 I consider McCarthy Square in my charge. There is a mission Sunday-school, under the control of the Moreau Quarterly Conference, not one hundred yards from where the tent was pitched.

16 I consider that the power which appoints a man to a charge appoints a charge to the man, and hence any person or organization which opens work within the bounds of that charge, without first consulting the man in charge, or the powers which put the man in charge, has, by that very act, declared himself independent of the man in charge.

17. To co-operate with such a person or organization, under such circumstances, is virtually to surrender, for the time being, the direction of the affairs of the charge, in part or whole, to irresponsible parties.

18. I can not underwrite for those who do not ask my advice, who do not even mention their plans and purposes to me, who do not recognize my official existence until such time as it may serve their purpose.

19 This attitude was not assumed for personal considerations, but because there is a principle involved.

Bro. Drake asks, "How could these people (the converts) find the way into the churches?" A sufficient answer to this question is another: "What were Bro. Rawls and his helpers—one of whom was an official in the Methodist Church—there for, if they could not point out the way?—if they could not lead them to the churches?—if they would not bring them to the churches?—if they would not hand the names of the converts and applicants to the preacher, that he might hunt them up and bring them?" Converts and applications for church membership there were. I asked Bro. Rawls for the names of those who wanted to join Moreau Church. So far I have received none. Why are the pastors blamed with a want of interest, and charged with not encouraging the converts, when the management had already made arrangements to conserve the fruits of the meeting independently of the pastors? I, at least, have my hands full without putting myself at the beck of self-appointed directors.

In the Living Present.

Lippincott's Magazine, for June, contains an excellent article on the "Tyranny of the Pictorial." 'Tis sadly expressive. Yes; many dread of being caricatured in some scurrilous sheet. The author speaks of papers abounding in pictorial as Cheap John literary masqueraders. Specially female portraits of possible and impossible attitude and appearance, depreciatory to the fair sex, were met everywhere, even in advertisements. Says that if the illustration is expressive, the matter illustrated is not read; if bad, said matter is ranked with the illustration.

Ah, yes; it makes a difference whose ox has been gored in formulating opinions. The Supreme Court, having declared the Income Tax unconstitutional, many who never paid a copper in the way of taxes are violent in denouncing said decision. Class legislation and impoverishment of the opulent are tenets of socialism.

Next to the Suez, the Baltic Canal will prove most epochal to the world's trade. It unites the Baltic to the North Sea. It is sixty miles long, with sufficient depth for the largest vessels. It cost half a million dollar less than had been estimated and appropriated by the German government. The opening ceremonies on the seventeenth of June will be a grand naval exhibition. Our government will be represented by three men-of-war.

The eighth centennial of the first crusade was celebrated last week at Clermont, France. It was at the place that Pope Urban II. made the historical appeal which induced Christendom to wrest the Holy Sepulcher from the possession of the infidel. The crusades have caused much misery. The benefit the microscope fails to discover. True, they added to the strength of Popery; but that has been disastrous to mankind. Jesus dwells in heaven. Actually, Jerusalem is no more to us than Mecca.

Cardinal Gibbons, now in Rome, possibly kissing Pope Leo's toe, is reputed to be a man of fine common sense. At any rate, he is a practical and industrious writer. In the North American Review he insists that the spiritual leaders of Zion must study men no less than books. Rehash of contents of musty books had robbed the pulpit of its potency. To be successful, the speaker must be in "touch" with his hearers.

The Lutheran Observer holds that many church troubles are generated by "Thus saith the church." If in place of church the name of the Lord were substituted, much contention would cease.

If envy were a fever, would not our Board of Health declare the malady epidemic?

The New York Christian Advocate intimates that Dr. E. E. Hoss will probably accompany Bishop Hendrix on his episcopal tour to China and Japan. Hope the doctor will go. He will not be in danger of being lost on the way, as seems to have been the case with Dr. W. W. Wadsworth, the traveling companion of Bishop Galloway.

Sexuality in Fiction.

We have more than once directed attention to the fact that several of the most popular novels of the day have as a distinguishing feature illicit relations between the sexes. An English critic says: "Be the prominent people in this new fiction young or old, married or unmarried, voluptuaries or ascetics, the sexual passion provides the main-spring of their action, and within its range lies their whole gamut of emotion." How far their popularity is due to this cause, it is not for us to say. But beyond all question, to familiarize the minds of the young with characters and conduct in fiction that we would deem questionable in actual life can not be wholesome. We are not pleading for the exclusion of love between men and women in fiction—that must always be a powerful element—but against exalting mere animal passion, as if it was the supreme thing.—Guardian.

A Baptist pastor of a congregation secured a goodly number of new subscribers for his church paper, the Standard, by the following happy method: "I took a new turn on my church and woke up these new subscriptions. At the close of the sermon I said: 'See here, brethren, I want you to employ an assistant pastor; I can't do all the work on this field. I have my mind on a "silent one" you can get cheap—a grand, good preacher, too. He will preach you fifty-two sermons a year, and deliver full as many lectures; Then he will keep you posted on the movements of all our churches, give you all important news, discuss the Sunday-school lesson, talk to the Young People's Union, and help them on their topics. He is very prompt, never misses an appointment, comes rain or shine. Cheap, did I say? Yes, amazing cheap! . . . Here I will show you the preacher' (drawing a copy of the Standard from under the pulpit); 'this is the fellow. See, he is pure and clean inside and out, and a Baptist of the first water.' At first they looked dazed, stumped, but soon a smile took the place of confusion."

WELL SIENT.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

We sit down at set of sun
And count the things that we have done,
And counting, find
One self-denying act, one word
That eased the heart of him who heard;
One glance most kind,
That fell like sunshine where it went,
Then we may count the day well spent.

REJOINDER NO 4.

In Bro. H.'s reply to my criticisms he seems to base his charge that Methodists reject the authority of Christ, in the third place, on the fact that we are not Congregational in our ecclesiastical government. He thinks this is sufficient to justify any amount of opposition, and that we ought to know at once, without argument to prove it, that we are an abomination to God. He says: "If you do not stand self-convicted, . . . I almost despair of being sufficiently explicit this time to open your long blinded eyes." Perhaps this accounts, in part, for the weakness of his effort. His desire to open "long-blinded eyes" is seen in the following bit of enlightening twaddle: "After solemnly vowing in the presence of Almighty God that you would 'obey your chief ministers and those unto whom is committed the government over you,' all of which is diametrically opposed to God's Word, you ask with assumed innocence and apparent astonishment, 'Now, what is there wrong in this?' Indeed, what is there wrong in this? Go, ask Simon Magus to teach you moral sensibilities. What is wrong? It is a flagrant violation of the very Bible you profess to teach." "Assumed innocence and apparent astonishment."

After this exhibition of his superior capacity to instruct the ignorant, Bro. H. speaks as follows: "In the hope that your attention may be thereby arrested, I quote you two or three of many Scriptures." Then follow 1 Sam. xv, 15; Mark vii, 7; Matt. xx, 25, 26. Then, fearing that my attention has not been "thereby arrested," he adds Matt. xxiii, 8-10, and asks: 'Do you perceive that these Scriptures forbid your ecclesiastical hierarchy?' I must confess that, not having attended Bro. H.'s school of Simon Magus, I do not perceive in these passages the lesson that Bro. H. imagines they contain. Only two of them have even an apparent application to the question he is trying to handle. I shall notice the last quoted first. Matt. xxiii, 8-10 is as follows: 'But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ." What pertinency there is in this passage to Bro. H.'s contention it is impossible to see. It might be quoted effectively against Roman Catholics, who regard the Pope as the vicegerent of Christ, but not a shadow of such a thing was ever thought of by Methodists. When quoted in opposition to Methodism, there is exhibited profound ignorance of the truth, or a hateful spirit of unholy sectarian zeal. The Savior here simply warns against a danger that actually occurred in the church at Corinth, and was rebuked by St. Paul. The members of that church elevated Paul and Apollos and Cephas to the same rank with Christ. "Now this I say, that everyone of you saith, I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas; and I of Christ." (1 Cor. i, 12.) Bro. H. would make the impression that we do the same thing, but he is as far from the truth here as in his other numerous misrepresentations of Methodism. We have Bishops, elders and deacons in our ministry, but one is our "Master, even Christ."

As an illustration of Bro. H.'s mental obtuseness and innocence of historical knowledge, hear him as he gravely propounds the following: "Are your Bishops God's vicegerents on earth? If you claim that, have the courage to say so plainly." This question implies that in his mind there was a little doubt. I think it is the first of his evil imaginations about which he has ever entertained any doubt at all; and while he is in a state of amiable docility, I hasten to inform him that our Bishops are not "God's vicegerents on earth." Such a thought never entered anyone's mind except through the channel of a depraved heart, or a deluded and perverted imagination.

Bro. H.'s next passage is as follows: "Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister; and whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant." (Matt. xx, 25-27.) What is there here antagonistic to Methodism? Christ does not say that there should not be divers orders of ministers in the church, but that they should not usurp authority, and exercise a domineering spirit over one another. He was not giving directions as to the form of church government, but was pointing out the spirit in which it was to be administered. He simply wished to rebuke and check the spirit of unholy ambition which was manifesting itself among the disciples.

To test the utter unreasonableness of the interpretation placed upon this language by Bro. H., bear in mind two facts:

1. It makes the Savior condemn an order of things already existing by divine authority. Among the Jews were Levites under the priests, and over these was the high priest. If the Savior had meant to be understood as Bro. H. construes his language, he would hardly have gone to the Gentile world for an illustration when one that was perfectly familiar to the disciples was so near at hand.

2. It puts Christ himself in the attitude of having disregarded his own teaching. In Eph. iv, 11, it is expressly said that "he"—Christ—"gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers." These were not all equal in authority and assigned to the same duties. In I. Cor. xii, 28, we read: 'And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues." This being the case, the absurdity of quoting Matt. xx, 25-27, in opposition to Methodism, is manifest to all. Bro. H. says, "You must be a logician, since you criticise my logic." My, my! Is that stuff called logic?

Having become exceedingly worried by his fruitless efforts to meet the arguments adduced from the New Testament in justification of our "theory of Bishops," Bro. H. impatiently vociferates as follows: "It comes with poor grace from a people who have so utterly disregarded the Bible to be pleading it as authority in anything. You persistently refuse to obey the plain commands of the Bible, and you just so persistently do what it forbids, and then try to plead its authority. Beautiful spectacle of consistency you present indeed!" He would be delighted if we would forsake the Bible and plead something else as authority. But since it is in perfect harmony with our 'theory of Bishops," it will be good authority with us for some time to come. Bro. H. further says: 'Peter exhorted the elders not to be lords over God's heritage, . . . and I have been trying in an humble way to help Peter along."

If he could find some support for the Baptist theory of local church government, to the exclusion of all other systems of ecclesiastical administration, he thinks it would "help Peter along" very greatly. Pure Congregationalism is the delight of his heart.

First. Spiritual regeneration is a work wrought by the Holy Spirit that reaches and renews all the faculties and powers of the human soul. Hence it is called in Scripture a new birth by which we are born into a new kingdom, and into the family of God. It is further described as a renewal of the mind" (Rom. xii, 2), and again as the "washing of regeneration" (Titus iii, 5). It is said in other places that this work (the work of regeneration) makes us "new creatures in Christ Jesus;" restamps us in the image of God, in which our first parents were created. It is susceptible of proof that in extent it is all-pervasive, and in thoroughness a radical cure. No one of the spiritually diseased faculties or exercises of the soul escapes the healing touch of the Holy Ghost. The conditions of growth are contained in this first blessing. If development is not arrested by voluntary sin, it will result in Christian maturity. The grace received in regeneration, if retained and improved, secures us against the danger of sin.

Secondly. It follows from the foregoing well-established proposition that regeneration cancels the guilt, and delivers from the bondage of inherited, or original, as well as personal sin, and hence that a second, or subsequent work of grace, distinct in kind from the first, except to those who fall into sin, is unnecessary. And, further, that the grace of reclamation, which many need after conversion, is the same in kind and, perhaps, in degree also, that was received in regeneration; and hence to dignify this reclaiming grace by a name that makes it distinct from and superior to regenerating grace is unphilosophical and contrary to fact.

Thirdly. It is manifest that the second blessing, as taught by its advocates, depends for its very existence upon what has been called the "residue theory of sin," or sin in believers. Regeneration, as explained by these brethren, leaves unsubdued inherited depravity to make necessary a subsequent work of grace called the second blessing, holiness, perfection, etc.

The first proposition proves that sin of all kinds is subdued in regeneration; hence there is no residue to be subdued afterwards. But in addition to, and in confirmation of that proposition, I wish to call attention to the fact that sin is not an entity that can be seen and handled, but that it consists in a wrong exercise of the powers of the soul. And in so far as inherited sin is concerned (if it is proper to call it sin) it consists in a depraved condition of the soul that naturally inclines us to employ these faculties of mind and soul in opposition to God's will. This inclination to moral evil entailed upon us by the sin of our progenitors is the primal source and cause of all sin; yet our second-blessing brethren are bound in consistency to maintain that this fountain of moral pollution is not reached in the work of regeneration. They say it is only personal sins that are reached and subdued in the work of regeneration. By personal sins they mean sins committed after coming to years of accountability. How the effect (personal sin) can cease while the cause (inherited depravity) continues to operate remains to be explained. How a fountain can cease to flow by efforts to dry up the stream a hundred yards below its source we can not see. If inherited sin consists in a tendency of the will to sinful choices, and of the affections and desires towards things forbidden, and of the passions and appetites towards unlawful gratifications—if, I say, these tendencies constitute inherited depravity (and that they do is not in dispute)—I want to know what regeneration does, if it does not convert these tendencies. How does one become "a new creature in Christ Jesus," how "renewed in the spirit of his mind," how made holy in the "image of God," if his will, affections and appetites remain unchanged in their tendencies? Upon what part of our complex nature does the Holy Spirit operate in the work of regeneration, if the will, the affections, and the passions and appetites are excluded? Will our brethren concerned specify what department—whether volitional, intellectual or emotional—is impressed and changed, in the work of regeneration?

The gospel, as a remedial agency, extends its healing power to every part of the diseased system. It does not confine its efficacy to personal sins, but to sin of every kind and degree. If the objections above suggested against the "residue theory" can be satisfactorily explained, surely some one of its advocates ought to do it.

D. G. W. ELLIS.

The Baptism of Fire.

To rightly understand the meaning of this expression is not only a privilege, but the duty of every possessor of God's Word. And the fact that men of different ages, and under differing influences, have placed conflicting constructions upon its meaning is no reason why we should not seek, and find just what is meant by the words: 'He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire." The fallacy of connecting the fire of this verse with the "unquenchable fire" of the next verse is so completely revealed by the act of the baptism itself as to require no further thought.

The administration of the Holy Trinity over man is divided into three distinct periods. During the first of these there is but little seen or heard, save that which reveals the personality and awful majesty of God the Father. This period was finished in the flood which swept the family of sinful man from the face of the earth, save "eight souls." Then came the second period in which there was nothing seen or heard but the mercy and the saving power of the Son. And this period was finished in the blood of the atonement and the hope of the resurrection. Then what of the third period? Ignorant of its blessings, the followers of our Lord did not want to give up the second, that they might receive it. Listen to his answer to their clinging spirits, which so consolingly touched him on every side: "I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever." What does he mean by "another Comforter?" One who should take his place with them and for them.

The words our Lord uses expresses just that thought. Wesley says: "The Greek word signifies also an advocate, instructor, or encourager. Another—For Christ himself was one." Clark says: "The word signifies not only a Comforter, but also an advocate, a defender of a cause, a counsellor, patron, mediator. Christ is thus termed (I. John ii, 1), where the common translation renders the word, 'advocate.'" There is no importance attached to the oft-repeated statement and the attempted arguments to prove that the Holy Spirit has always been in the world, because no one denies that fact. But to assume that he was in the world from the beginning, in that relation to man spoken of by our Lord on this occasion, is without authority of the Word of God.

Then what was it our Lord commanded the church to wait for in Jerusalem, and that he called "the promise of my Father?" Only for the visible administration of the Holy Spirit, as he had promised in John xiv, 16. As Mr. Calvin says: "As long as he walked on earth, he appeared openly as their guardian; now he preserves us by his Spirit. He calls the Spirit another in view of the distinction which we observe in the blessings proceeding from each. Is was the appropriate work of Christ by expiating the sins of the world to appease the anger of God, to redeem men from death, to obtain righteousness and life. It is the office of the Spirit to make us partakers of Christ himself, as well as all his blessings."

And the ushering in of this third administration was to be with great manifestations of glory and of power, as had been that of the first and of the second. For this manifestation of leadership the church was to properly wait before moving out under the commission of her Great Head. But what was the significance of this baptism of fire? Only a miraculous manifestation of the personality and of the divine power of him under whom the church was to work thenceforward, as is most clearly revealed in Acts ii, 1-12. If this baptism of fire had been an experience that remained in the church for all time we would have no need for colleges, missionaries would be helped over their greatest trouble, and we would have a different exegesis of the Scriptures from that we sometimes hear.

J. M. WEEMS.

Bro. Lewis' Bible Proof.

In the ADVOCATE, of May 2, I find the first attempt to prove from the Bible that there must be a cleansing subsequent to regeneration where there has been no lapse, which I have yet seen. Bro. Lewis' attempt is commendable, however marked may be the failure.

To his complaints and personal allusions I have only to reply, I have meant no unkindness. I have only sought to bring out the truth. I concede to Bro. Lewis the same spirit and purpose. "Charity thinketh no evil."

Luke viii, 14: "And that which fell among thorns are they which, when they have heard, go forth, and are choked with cares and riches and pleasures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection."

This is irrelevant. These were not regenerated people—only "those who hear."

John xv, 2: "Every branch in me that beareth fruit he purgeth (R. V., cleanseth) it, that it may bring forth more fruit."

The word translated "cleanseth" and 'purgeth" is kathairei, and means, literally and simply, to prune—(see any Greek lexicon)—to cut away dead and useless branches, that the strength of the vine may be concentrated on bearing grapes. There can be no hint at removing original sin, "roots of bitterness," etc., in this passage. Bro. A. was called to preach, but his wealth hindered him. God pruned away that wealth, and he bare fruit. This illustrates the text.

Acts xv, 8, 9: "And God, which knoweth the hearts, bare them witness, giving them the Holy Ghost, even as he did unto us; and put no difference between us and them, purifying their hearts by faith." (R. V., cleansing their hearts by faith.)

Bro. Lewis adds:

Let this passage be read in connection with Acts x, 1, 2; Acts x, 44-48, and Acts xi, 15, 16. A fair interpretation of these passages will establish two points, viz: First, there is a cleansing provided for us subsequent to regeneration; and, secondly, this cleansing is effected by the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

No, my brother, a fair interpretation is that Peter was alluding to the event in the house of Cornelius (see verse 7) and was only saying that "God which knoweth the hearts" knew that Cornelius and his house were earnestly seeking the Lord; and that God pardoned them, and then gave them the baptism of the Holy Ghost, as on Pentecost, to fit them for work. First regenerating, then baptizing them with the Spirit—both are the works of the Spirit; but not both works of cleansing. That the cleansing is mentioned last in the passage by no means proves that it took place last.

II. Cor. vii, 1: "Having, therefore, these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God."

Whatever it may mean to "cleanse ourselves," it can not be a work done, as Bro. Lewis himself says, by the Holy Ghost. We do not regenerate ourselves; we can not purify ourselves in that sense at all. If it could mean a work kindred to regeneration, a second cleansing by the Spirit of God, there is no proof that these Corinthians had not lapsed, and needed regeneration again. Whatever they may have been when Paul wrote his first Epistle to them proves nothing about their state when he wrote this second Epistle.

Heb. x, 19, has not the slightest relevancy to the question of a second cleansing without a lapse from regeneration.

I. John iii, 3: "And every man that hath this hope in him (the hope of seeing Christ as he is, and of being like him) purifieth himself, even as he is pure."

Bro. Lewis adds: "We are said to cleanse ourselves, or purify ourselves, when we comply with the conditions upon which God promises to cleanse or purify us.

Suppose this he granted, does it prove that only those who are already regenerate thus purify themselves? Have no others a hope of seeing Jesus as he is? The vilest sinner hopes this; and when his hope grows strong he generally exercises faith and is regenerated. This passage does not touch the matter.

Bro. Lewis then quotes from Dr. Tiger; but as the Doctor is not one of the Bible writers, we may pass him by.

Let me beg Bro. Lewis to read I. Jno. iii, 9: "Whosoever is born of God doth not commit sin"—no, for when any man who was regenerate does get his consent to sin, he is instantly unregenerated, and must be regenerated again.

Now, these things charged by our second-blessing brethren as done by regenerate people before they are sanctified are things which, according to St. John, are only done by unregenerate sinners. You need not reply that Mr. Wesley teaches sin in believers. I reply, St. John declares against sin in regenerates. If, then, regeneration is a sinless state, what can a "second cleansing" state be more?

The great trouble with many of us is, that we make the standard of the regenerate life too low. Men say: "If I am regenerate, I will get to heaven"—and so he will. We all say, "Then I am satisfied," and our second-blessing brethren give him a low estimate of the regenerate life, so he lives on a low grade and believes himself safe. Neither Bro. Lewis nor Dr. Carradine preaches any higher life than I see as the normal life of every regenerate man; and he who is not holy in the sense given the word by you and your teacher, my Bro. Lewis, is a sinner, and needs regeneration. So says St. John—so say I.

Brethren of the second-blessing school, hear me: If you preach that holiness is the result of a second blessing only, then be consistent enough to say that a man must have the second blessing or be damned; and that there are regenerate men in hell, for the Bible plainly says: 'Without holiness no man shall see the Lord." Anything less a teaching is dangerous.

H. WALTER FEATHERSTUN.

My Experience.

"We believe in ultimate salvation—i. e., salvation in heaven—but we can never experience it in life."—J. A. Parker, in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, May 9, 1895.

This idea is intrenched in the minds of a great many Christians—especially those opposed to salvation from all sin in this life. We know it to be unscriptural, because it makes "to-morrow" the day of salvation, when God's Word says, 'Now is the day of salvation"—to day, etc.

We are at a loss to understand how our brother got such a total misconception of the scheme of redemption as to believe that heaven, its environments, etc., has anything to do with ultimate salvation, for it is evident if the hypothesis assumed above be true, the death of Jesus was useless. Any plan of salvation that invites subjects into "water," "the church," or "heaven," to be saved is a perversion of the gospel of the Son of God. It may have precedent in the "traditions of men," but it is without warrant in the Word of God, and will do incalculable harm. It is the result of a tendency to deal indefinitely with God, and savors too much of the "sweet by and by," to the neglect of the eternal "now."

Jesus came to save "men's lives," to save his people from their sins, i. e., acts of transgressions. To take away the "sin of the world," i. e., depravity, that we might be made free from sin, and become servants to God, and have our fruit unto holiness, and in the end life everlasting. "We are to be saved from the hand of all that hate us, . . . that we might serve him, without fear, in holiness and righteousness, before him, all the days of our life"—not when we get to heaven.

The objective outcome of all true religion is holiness. We are "elected" to be "conformed unto his image," "called" unto holiness, and the antinomianism that assumes that a man can not be made free from sin and preserved blameless in this life, and will be made so ultimately by entering heaven, has no foundation in the Word of God, and is as dishonoring to Christ as the heathen idea that attributes all sin to matter, and makes "death" partly the savior.

The "blood of Jesus Christ, God's Son, cleanses from all sin"—is the divine prescription. A sinner thus cleansed will enter heaven holy—yea, ninety-nine times more so than the highest archangel who "never went astray," and, therefore, knows nothing of "redeeming grace and dying love."

It is to the "riches of his glory" to save from sin in this life—for in heaven there is no sin to save from. We overcome here "by the word of our testimony, and the blood of the Lamb." Surroundings, environments, etc., have nothing to do with the saving power of the "blood." "He is able to save to the uttermost and outermost all that come unto him," and give "days of heaven on earth."

We are not saved—for heaven, but from sin—and go to heaven by the law of spiritual attraction because we are saved, and in no sense to be saved. Heaven is the result of ultimate salvation. If there were no heaven, and the Son of man had not where to lay his head, we would follow him, for he has died for us and would die for us again if it were necessary to save us.

The Meeting Yesterday.

The woman's meeting, which convened here yesterday, was composed of delegates from Greenville district representing the two branches of woman's work in the M. E. Church, South—Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. The foreign work was taken up in the morning. Mrs. C. C. Jones, district secretary of foreign work, was present, and reported favorably of the work in the district. Two delegates from adult societies—Mrs. Newman, of Greenville, and Mrs. Andrews, of Belen—and four junior delegates—Miss Birdie McCorkle, of Cleveland; Miss Mignettie Pease, of Gunnison; Miss Wallace Jamison, of Belen, and Master Robert Patterson, of Jonestown—were present, and reported the work done by their auxiliaries. Written reports were received from a number of auxiliaries. The claims of the papers published in the interest of woman's foreign mission work were presented—the Woman's Missionary Advocate, the Little Worker, and the Evangel.

The afternoon was devoted to the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission work. Mrs. George Shelby, assistant district secretary, was present. She reported this work in good condition in the district, and interest growing. Nine societies are at work. Several barrels of clothing have been sent by these societies to the sufferers in the West, and much work done on the home parsonages, besides regular contributions to the Conference treasury. The claims of Cuban work in Florida and mountain whites of Kentucky and Tennessee, were ably presented by Mrs. Gibbs, of Belen.

Mrs. Taylor, of Cleveland; Mrs. Pugnes, of Jonestown; Miss Newman, of Greenville; Mrs. Shelby, of Shelby, and Mrs. Palmer, of Tunica, read reports of their auxiliaries.

Mrs. Hargrove, of Sardis, president of the Conference W. F. M. S. and president of the Conference W. F. M. S., presided at these meetings.

The presence of quite a number of the ministers of the district added to the interest of the afternoon session.

The above report of the morning and afternoon sessions of the district meeting of the W. F. M. S. of the Greenville district, recently held at Tunica was clipped from "The Daily Advocate," kindly published by the people of that little city as the organ of the District Conference and the missionary meeting.

The night session was also one of great pleasure to all. There were recitations by Robert Patterson and George Shelby and Misses Mignette Pease and Birdie McCorkle; also talks by Mrs. Jones, Gibbs, and Hargrove.

Friday, at two P. M., a Juvenile Missionary Society, with twenty-two members, was organized, and named by the children the "Mary Hargrove Workers."

Notice.

To the Pastoral Charges of the Mississippi Conference and the Auxiliaries of the Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S.—

DEAR FRIENDS: We want to have such an annual meeting this year as will diffuse the missionary spirit over the Mississippi Conference. To this end we ask every pastoral charge in the Conference to send some one to Crystal Springs from June 14 to June 17, to represent the charge in the cause of missions. No matter whether you have an auxiliary of the W. F. M. S. or not, let me urge that some one be sent to represent the pastoral charge. Take up a collection (it will not require much) to defray the expenses of some good, consecrated woman of your church who is willing to undertake this work, and let her come praying for God's blessing upon our meeting and upon your charge, and she will take the blessing back with her.

By procuring from the agent a certificate at all the points where you buy tickets on the way to the meeting, stating that a full-fare ticket was bought, all who attend can get reduced rates returning.

The good people of Crystal Springs have thrown open their doors to the representatives of this work. Let us show our appreciation of this blessing by having the cause represented from every part of the Conference. All the ministers who can possibly be with us at any part of the meeting are earnestly invited to come. We need the encouragement of your presence and the aid of your counsel, brethren. Let us meet together at Crystal Springs, friends of the cause of missions, and talk together and work together in this cause so dear to our hearts, and God will bless our efforts to spread the light of his gospel by warming up our own hearts and making us the instruments of diffusing the missionary spirit in our home church.

Hoping to meet a representative from every pastoral charge in the Mississippi Conference at our annual meeting, I am,

Yours faithfully,

ADDIE V. MARSHALL,
Pres. Miss. Conf. W. F. M. S.

...n page 64: "There has been a ten...cy among some teachers of religion ...modern times so to speak of Chris...tian perfection as to seem to make it the entrance into a new order of life one namely of higher consecration under the influence of the Holy Ghost. That this higher life is the secret of entire consecration there can be no doubt. But there is no warrant in Scripture for making it a new dispensation of the Spirit, or a pentecostal visitation superadded to the state of conversion."

On same page: "Entire consecration is the stronger energy of a Spirit already in the regenerate, not a Spirit to be sent down from on high. The kingdom of God is already within, if we would let it come in its perfection."

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La., May 14: "Our revival of two weeks, ending yesterday, was a success. Twelve professed faith in Christ and were received into the church. I was assisted by Revs. H. Armstrong, C. R. Montgomery and Presiding Elder H. O. White. Many thanks to these brethren for help."

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Gunnison, Miss., May 18: "Have just closed a splendid meeting at this place. A man in his eighty-eighth year was converted, joined the church and was baptized. Five others united with us; more to follow. Bro. J. W. Honnoll, of Holly Springs, gave us the gospel in power of the Spirit."

Thomas J. Martin: "The Ringgold charge seem to be on the upgrade somewhat. Our pastor, Rev. B. H. Sheppard, reports congregations good and on the increase. Our people are manifesting a deeper interest in most all branches of the church work. Our presiding elder is in favor with the people, and especially with the preachers and officials on this work. Bro. Sheppard is loved and respected all over his large and growing circuit. We are praying and expecting God's saving presence among us."

Rev. J. Engle Denson, Pastor, Bunkie, La., May 27: "We closed on last night an eighteen days' meeting at Melville, La. God was with us from the first. The church was greatly revived and raised by the Holy Ghost to a more consecrated plane of living. Sinners were convicted and converted to God, and thirty-one new names were added to the army of the blessed Christ. We acknowledge with gratitude efficient service rendered by Bros. B. T. Crews, of Mansfield, and L. F. Jackson, of Alexandria."

Rev. B. W. Lewis, Martinsville charge, May 17: "This work is moving on very nicely; congregations are good and people hopeful. Have four Sunday-schools. Held the first Children's Day service at Pleasant Ridge last Sunday (May 12). A large crowd was in attendance—more than the house would contain—showing the need of a more commodious building, which we hope to have soon. The program being somewhat complicated, it was changed. The singing was conducted by Bro. E. W. Barington. God bless the children of the Sunday-school, and prosper the ADVOCATE!"

Rev. E. L. Alford, Harrisonburg, La., May 17: "On last night we closed a meeting at Jonesville, La., leaving the town considerably revived. The church was elevated to a higher Christian experience, and we hope for more and better work along all the lines of church interest. We received seven applicants for membership in the church and baptized four children. Bro. H. M. Banks came Monday night, and preached to us some very instructing and soul-stirring sermons. God bless Bro. Banks, and may he be instrumental in bringing many souls to Christ!"

Rev. J. D. Grymes, Anguilla, Miss., May 21: "Rev. W. W. Hopper spent a week, from May 7-14, with me, at Rolling Fork. The revival was of a primitive character. Christians were filled with the Holy Spirit and spoke of the wonderful things of God. While the victory was not complete, a great work was done. Fourteen professed the blessing of entire sanctification. Bro. Hopper has strong faith in the message he bears, and now delivers it in such a gentle, sweet way that great results always follow. After twelve months' trial, my faith is strong in the doctrine of entire sanctification as a second work of grace received instantaneously by faith."

D. F. Turner, Homer, La., May 16: "I want to tell you about our young men's prayer meeting. It was organized some two years ago, and has gradually grown in interest and numbers ever since. It started with a membership of about fifteen. Now we have a membership of about thirty-five. Sometimes we have a regular revival meeting, and everyone seems to be filled with the Holy Spirit. It meets every Monday night, rain or shine, sleet or snow. The weather never gets too bad for it. Our pastor (Bro. V. D. Skipper) says it is the only prayer meeting he ever knew that couldn't either rain or freeze out. It has already sent two preachers to the Conference, and there is no telling how many more may go in the future."

Rev. J. S. Sanders, Rayne, La., May 23: "Please let me have space in the ADVOCATE to call the attention of our people to 'A Miscellaneous Essay on Entire Sanctification, showing how it was lost from the church, and how it may and must be regained. By the Rev. L. Pierce, of the South Georgia Conference.' It is published and on sale at our Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. The author of this essay was born in 1785, became an itinerant Methodist preacher in 1804, and remained with us until 1879. He says: 'If there ever was a time when Methodism was Christianity in earnest, I am from that time.' I believe this essay will prove a blessing to every thoughtful reader. Send fifteen cents to Barbee & Smith and get it."

Rev. B. S. Rayner, Gloster, Miss., May 23: "Our Gloster Methodism is decidedly on the up grade. In fact, we have been advancing somewhat nearly all the year. Our congregations have been large, prayer meetings well attended, and most of the backslidden ones reclaimed. We have had twenty-three accessions to this church to date, and expect soon to receive several others. The old and new churches have been harmonized, and all worship together, though services are held at both places. We have fraternal union to an individual. God be praised for this! Our Ladies' Aid Society has been doing good work, adding valuable improvements to our beautiful new church. The Sunday-school is much improved. The Epworth League, with Ed. Hines president, is doing substantial work. Mrs. M. M. Snell recently spent eight days with us, conducting services to the delight and edification of scores. Upon the whole, we are much stronger in the Lord and much encouraged in the work. The great need of the charge is a parsonage."

Living to Christ in small things, and living for Christ every day, is the secret of large fruitfulness. A peach tree or an orange does not leap into a bounty of fruit by one spasmodic effort; an orchard does not ripen under a single day's sunshine. Every raindrop, every sunbeam, every inch of subsoil does its part. A fruitful Christian is a growth. To finish up a godly character by a mere religion of Sundays and sermons and sacraments and revivals and special seasons is impossible. A man can be converted in an instant, but he must grow by the year.

Scrofula in the Neck

Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger."

Experiential Differences.

Nature declares in unmistakable language that the Creator of the universe is not shut up to one mode of operation. In a thousand different ways the student of nature sees the power of God manifested to-day in the wind, to-morrow in the earthquake; here in the lightning, there in the restless tides; now in the germination of the tiny seed, and again in the movements of the stars and planetary systems. Truly does the poet sing:

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea,
And rides upon the storm."

Just as God has countless methods of displaying his powers in the realm of nature, so also he uses numberless modes of revealing himself to the human soul. He who asserts that God always works in the same way upon the heart of man greatly errs, not knowing the Scriptures, neither the infinite power of Jehovah. To Moses, God spake out of the burning bush; to Elijah, at Horeb, there came a still small voice; to Saul, on his way to Damascus, a great light appeared, brighter than the noonday sun, and a voice spoke to him out of heaven. "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all." (I. Cor. xii, 4-6.)

In spite of the teaching of Scripture upon this point, there are many persons who imagine that all Christians, in being born again, must pass through an identical experience. Conversion, according to their ideas, must take place in a certain way, else it is dubbed spurious. Emotional people, after undergoing deep conviction, on receiving the witness of the Spirit, are more than apt to give vent to their feelings in shouts of joy. For them it would be wrong to repress their emotion. But it is a great mistake to suppose that every man or woman, at the moment of regeneration, or any subsequent work of grace, will be equally joyous or demonstrative. Even in the days of the apostles not all upon whom the Holy Ghost fell spoke with tongues, or prophesied. There may be genuine conviction unaccompanied by sighs and weeping, and true conversion often occurs without the rapture which some experience.

Some preachers have a set process through which they expect all penitents to pass in order to get God's blessing. In some instances persons under conviction, fancying that the cleansing of their hearts will take place exactly as in the case of others, struggle on in the darkness for days, or, perhaps, give up in despair, because they do not feel as they think they ought to feel. Now and then a man or a woman who sees some friend bubbling over with religious joy is led to feign what he does not feel, being told that the rapturous feeling will thus be superinduced; but the result is nearly always harmful. No man can change his temperament, however much he may try. In truth, it is just as foolish to try to feel as do others as would be the attempt to look like others.

In considering the emotional evidence of conversion, Christians are too apt to ignore differences of age, temperament, circumstance, and education—all of which help to determine the nature of the individual religious experience. We might as reasonably look for orange blossoms on an oak tree as to expect a person of stoical nature to act at conversion as would a man of the Hotspur type. The nature of the conversions that occur in any community is, in large measure, determined by the habits, degree of cultnre, and moral status of the people. To insist that a child, on being converted, should display the same transports as a hardened sinner who has just found peace, would be folly indeed. The "moral man," when under conviction, is not, as a rule, as deeply moved, nor does he rejoice as much on finding Christ, as is the case with a prodigal. Yet, in this fact, there is no encouragement to any man to dive deep into sin in order that when reclaimed he may experience the greater joy, for the scars of sin ever remain.

Says Dr. Broadus: "We are prone to forget that Christian experience, like the human countenance, will in no two persons be precisely alike, and often presents many and striking differences, though the great characteristic features are always the same." To one the Spirit comes as gently as a zephyr, bringing sweet peace, yet playing but little on the emotions. To another he comes like a mighty wind, overwhelming by his power, and filling the soul with ecstacy. We should remember, too, that not all conversions are instantaneous. We mean that the consciousness of conversion is not always instantaneous. With some the work is gradual, the exact moment of the passage from darkness to light being unknown. Yet the fact of sonship is as clearly known as in the case of those to whom redeeming grace came as the lightning's flash. However the change may take place, the soul must be able to say, "One thing I know, that, whereas I was blind, now I see." From the very beginning of her history until now Methodism has not ceased to emphasize the necessity of knowing this blessed fact; but we must bear in mind that God works in his own way, and that way may not always be in accord with our notions. In bestowing his grace upon us, our heavenly Father does not transcend or disannul his established laws, but adapts his spiritual blessings to our mental and physical condition and capacity. Feeling without fruit, we may be sure, is not acceptable to God. It is like a warrior's banner without an army behind it. Better an excess of emotion, however, than a dead formalism.

Jackson, La., now has a railroad. She is exceedingly proud of it, and has a right to be. Under the old regime it took from an hour and a half to two hours to reach Jackson from the nearest railroad station. Now the journey is accomplished in ten minutes. Centenary is to be congratulated. All honor to the wide-awake, public-spirited citizens of Jackson who organized this enterprise and pushed it to a speedy completion.

How Others See Us.

[The following appeared in the Nashville Advocate about twelve years ago. Believing that it is no less timely now than then, we give it space in our columns.—EDITOR]

A short time since I heard a conversation which made a deep impression on my mind. The participants in the conversation were a lawyer of considerable ability and several clergymen. The lawyer said he knew of no class of men who criticised each other so generally and so mercilessly as the clergy. Said he: "Lawyers, however fiercely they may antagonize each other in the court-room, almost uniformly observe a large and generous courtesy toward each other elsewhere. As a rule, a lawyer never criticises another's management of a case. He may have been employed to take the place of another lawyer; he may know that his predecessor's conduct of the case has been egregiously faulty; yet he refrains from adverse criticism, even in talking to his client. But ministers criticise each other severely, anywhere and everywhere, concerning almost any kind of ministerial act. They almost invariably find fault with each other's sermons. Even when they have spoken in high praise of a sermon, characterizing it as a 'grand effort,' etc., they are almost sure to nullify this commendation by a terrible 'but,' introducing numerous depreciatory criticisms. And not only pulpit work, but pastoral administration, in all its minutiæ, comes in for its share of disparagement. In almost every case a preceding pastor's methods are pronounced wrong, and his administration faulty; and this sort of criticism is not reserved for ministerial circles, but is indulged in with little regard for time or place."

The above is a brief account, in my own words, of the substance of the lawyer's remarks. This lawyer is not an adversary, but a friend of the ministerial fraternity, being a devout Christian and an active member of a Protestant Church. These statements are not, therefore, inspired by prejudice or malignity, but are the results of calm, impartial observation, embracing a wide circle, and extending over a large sweep of time.

I have written out these remarks in order that we, the clergy, may "see ourselves as others see us." If the lawyer is right, then is there not need of a reformation? Ought it to be truly said that the clergy are less courteous to each other than members of the legal or any other profession? Is any other fraternity on earth bound together by ties so strong as those which unite the ministerial brotherhood? Ought not the members of this God-ordained fraternity so to conduct themselves that the golden cord of heaven-born love which unites them may be seen by all the world? Brethren of the ministry, let us be chary of adverse criticism and depreciatory remarks.

W. C. BLACK.

"The World for Christ."

The above is the title of a monthly missionary messenger sent out to the churches and the Sunday-schools by the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The copy before me is number six of volume one. Only six issues have been sent out to the people, and yet nineteen thousand subscribers have their names enrolled in the mail books. Its rapid circulation is not surprising when the neat mechanical execution, the artistic wood cuts of actual scenes in missionary lands, the thrilling facts and figures from the "regions beyond," together with graphic letters from missionaries in the field, are all taken into consideration. Then the paper is furnished at the almost ridiculously low figure of ten cents per annum. No wonder that the increase of circulation should be unprecedented. A Sunday-school superintendent, holding up the paper before his school, pointing out the impressive pictures, reading a selection from the thrilling narratives, would need only to call out, "Who wants to give ten cents to become a subscriber to this spicy, sparkling sheet?" and the names would be called out so rapidly that the secretary could scarcely take them down. A winsome young girl could take a specimen number, make a round of solicitation, and leave scarcely a house without a subscription.

The Board of Missions, at its last meeting, passed a resolution requesting the faculty of Vanderbuilt University to provide a course of lectures on missions for the students. This was a step in the right direction. If, in addition to this, missionary tracts and periodicals, like this little paper, can be circulated among the rising generation, we shall have no more of infidelity masquerading in Christian garb and insinuating its unbelief upon the unthinking by the assertion, "Oh! I don't believe in foreign missions; let us provide for the destitute at home."

This number of the World for Christ is especially interesting to me, because it contains the first published letter from Dr. J. B. Fearn since his sailing for China. It contains a very natural description of the city of Honolulu, in Hawaii. He sends the photo which, printed in a wood cut in the paper, portrays the view as it appears from the summit of the Punch Bowl, an extinct volcano: "The city half hid in the dense foliage, the rice fields in the low part of the country, the sugar plantations off to the right at the foot of the mountains, and the harbor with its ships of many nations, all combine to prove a very beautiful picture." In sharp contrast to this interesting exhibition, showing what Christianity has done for the Island, appears on the fourth page of the paper the picture of a "Native Hut in Hawaii," of which Dr. Fearn writes: "I enclose a photo of a native hut made of grass. The natives are not dressed in their native dress, but you could easily imagine how they would look with a piece of cloth loosely hung from their waists. This picture is more respectable, and shows what civilization has done for them."

Dr. Fearn will be a regular contributor to the "World for Christ." By subscribing for the paper, our friends can keep in touch with him, whom their contributions have sent out to the foreign field. They will also increase the circulation of missionary thought which is bound to stir the heart of the world.

Rev. N. B. Norwood Drowned.

Dr. Sawyer received the sad intelligence through Bro. Geo. W. Lee, of Daisy, La., that Bro. N. B. Norwood, pastor of Lower Coast Mission, Louisiana Conference, fell from his skiff and was drowned in the Mississippi river on June 3. Efforts have been made to recover his body, but by 6 o'clock in the evening of that day it had not been found. Bro. Norwood was a good and able man.

Centenary College Commencement.

The close of the academical year at Centenary exhibits very gratifying results. Professors and students seem to be encouraged with the prospects of this time-honored institution. The moral tone of the student body is excellent, and the work done by them is, in the main, very satisfactory.

Jackson is full of visitors to attend the closing exercises. The Sunday morning audience was large, attentive, and received Dr. Featherstun's commencement sermon with every mark of appreciation. We have heard very favorable comment. His theme was based upon the fourth and fifth verses of the eighth Psalm—"What is man that thou art mindful of him," etc.

At night the Y. M. C. A. held its annual meeting; but, owing to the inclemency of the weather, the audience was small, but gave the speaker a very appreciative hearing. Rev. F. N. Parker addressed the association; his theme, the Temptation of Christ, its significance and bearing upon individual experience.

BOOKS.

TEN NIGHTS IN A BAR ROOM. By T. S. Arthur. Handsomely bound in cloth. 12 mo. 8 illustrations. Price, seventy-five cents. Porter & Coates, Philadelphia.

This famous book, of which a new electrotype edition has just been issued from the press, has already done much for the cause of temperance, and is deserving of a still wider circulation. A more graphic presentation of the evils of the liquor business and of the drink habit we have never read. Friends of the temperance movement, by helping to circulate this thrilling story, will give King Alcohol a mighty blow.

NOTES.

Bishop Galloway has been selected to deliver the next course of Cole Lectures before the students of Vanderbilt University.

***

The Epworth League Conference of Alabama, in session last week, provided for the support of two additional missionaries in China.

***

Miss Mary Lizzie Godbey, daughter of Dr. J. E. Godbey, editor of the Arkansas Methodist, died May 15. Our sympathy goes out to the bereaved family.

***

Mrs. Juliana Hayes, ex-president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the M. E. Church, South, died at her home in Baltimore on Sunday, June 2.

***

Bro. L. F. Jackson lost his only child, John Caldwell Jackson, on Wednesday night, May 29. He was a bright, promising little boy of eight months and four days.

***

Mr. W. Duke, who has already given a large sum to Trinity College, N. C., offers to make an additional donation of $50,000 on condition that $75,000 be raised by the Methodists in the State.

***

The press dispatches of May 26 announce that Mr. Samuel Cupples, a member of our St. John's Church, St. Louis, has just given $70,000 to the Southern Methodist Orphanage in that city.

***

Under medical advice, Bishop Fitzgerald is making no new engagements for work at the present time. His nervous prostration has been extreme, and absolute rest for awhile is necessary.—Nashville Advocate.

***

Laredo Seminary has enjoyed another year of marked prosperity. There has been an attendance of over two hundred at the Seminary proper. The Seminary has five large brick buildings that are an honor to the Woman's Board and to Methodism.—Texas Advocate.

***

Some unknown individual who has not the fear of God before his eyes made an attempt, last Sunday night, to burn the residence of Dr. T. S. West, pastor of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, Miss. Fortunately the flames were discovered in time to save the house.

***

A woman's edition of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE will be issued about the first of October. The precise date is not yet determined upon. The net proceeds of the edition will go into the treasury of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the New Orleans district.

***

Drs. Lewis, Dupaquier and Tolivar, of this city, have procured a small supply of Dr. Paquin's antituberole serum and begun its use for the purpose of testing its efficacy. Reports from St. Louis in regard to the beneficial results of the remedy are more and more favorable.

***

Rev. Jas. C. Morris, D. D., of the North Alabama Conference, and the Hon. E. B. Perkins, of Greenville, Texas, were selected by the College of Bishops as fraternal messengers to the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and have signified their acceptances.

The Holman Bible outsells anything we have ever struck. Take note of the fact that we are now handling a large type edition.

***

We ask the indulgence of those who have ordered Bibles. We have a good supply on the road, but, as freight trains travel slowly, it may be some days yet before they reach us. Hereafter we hope to be able to keep a supply on hand, though the demand for them is so great that this is not an easy task.

***

Let all our subscribers take note of the change in our sewing machine offer. In order to get the benefit of this offer, one must pay his subscription in January, '97. There has recently been an unavoidable delay in filling orders for sewing machines. We have now made such arrangements that orders will be filled promptly.

The kind of paper which people support is an index to their intelligence. If they are content with a mere monthly sheet, which covers only the work of a charge or a district, it would argue the utter lack of connectional spirit. A small paper measures a small church, or makes one.—Bishop Hendrix, in St. Louis Advocate.

The Epworth Herald, the organ of the Epworth Leagues of the M. E. Church, came out on the first of June in a special edition of mammoth size. The paper and typography are excellent, and the literary make-up first-class. It is profusely illustrated, having ninety-four wood cuts representing human faces. Many of these are celebrities of the M. E. Church. It has a group of Southern Methodist editors, viz, J. J. Lafferty, J. J. Tigert, E. E. Hoss, W. B. Palmore, and the editor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. We extend hearty congratulations to the editor, Dr. Berry, upon his deserved success in this venture.

The voluntary increase in wages which many manufacturing establishments have recently made are a credit both to their generosity and their good judgment. No better preventive of strikes can be devised than the conviction of the conviction among workingmen that their employers are disposed to give them as good wages as business will permit. If the feeling that those who employ labor are not remorselessly trying to grind down their employees to as hard terms as they can exact can become general among workingmen, and employers labor consistently to create and maintain this idea, the destructive conflicts between labor and capital will become largely a thing of the past. Justice and fairness on both sides would soon create a mutual confidence that would be a harbinger of better times.—Methodist Recorder.

An invitation to deliver the annual address gave us an opportunity to attend the commencement at Millwood Female Institute, Jackson, La., May 29 and 30. At the concert on Wednesday night there was a fine display of musical and elocutionary talent. On Thursday twelve young ladies received their diplomas—the largest graduating class in the history of the institution. The first honor was won by Miss Ruth Singleton, of Jackson, La.; the second by Miss Emma Lipscomb, Clinton, La. Each of the graduates read an essay. The essays were of a high order of literary merit, and were listened to with great interest by the large audience present. A fine programme of music, vocal and instrumental, was also rendered. The accomplished principal, Miss McCalmont, is to be congratulated upon the success which is attending her efforts in behalf of higher education for women. We regretted our inability to remain over to attend the Centenary commencement, which is now in progress.

A mammoth mass meeting was held in Washington Artillery Hall, on last Monday night, in the interest of the enforcement of law. The immense hall was filled to overflowing. A number of stirring speeches were made and strong resolutions were passed. It seems that the better class of citizens in this city have at last waked up from their age-long stumber. They are beginning to perceive that if one law is allowed to be trampled upon with impunity, it is almost impossible to secure the enforcement of other laws. Hence they now say with tremendous emphasis: "The laws must be enforced; Sunday law and all." We believe the day of judgment has come for the saloon crowd of New Orleans. A further attempt at the defiance of the Sunday law on their part will result disastrously. We hope this law and order movement will spread throughout South Louisiana. We would like to say that we hope it will stop the liquor-vending operations of the Holy Roman Church on Sunday; but we can not say so truthfully. Whenever Rome wishes to get up a Sunday festival to raise money for the Lord (?), she will do so, law or no law. She can sell whisky on Sunday with impunity.

Bright's Disease.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

In PARIS.

Eminent Parisian Physicians order BUFFALO LITHIA WATER specially for Uric Acid Diathesis, Bright's Disease, Gout, Rheumatism, etc.

Dr. Thomas H. Buckler, of Paris (formerly of Baltimore), Suggester of Lithia as a Solvent for Uric Acid, says:
"Nothing I could say would add to the well known reputation of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
"I have frequently used it with good results in Uric Acid Diathesis, Rheumatism, and Gout, and with this object I ordered it to Europe, from Baltimore. Lithia is in no form so valuable as where it exists in the Carbonate, the form in which it is found in the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
G. Halstead Boyland, A. M., M. D., of the Faculty of Paris and University of Leipsic:
"In cases of Bright's Disease in which albumen in the urine reached as high as fifty per cent., I have known it under a course of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER gradually diminish and finally disappear; at the same time other alarming symptoms were relieved and the sufferer restored to health."

Dr. Wm. A. Hammond, Washington, D. C., Surgeon-General U. S. Army (retired).
"I have for some time made use of the BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in cases of affections of the nervous system complicated with Bright's Disease of the Kidneys or with Gouty Diathesis. The results have been eminently satisfactory."

Dr. Alfred L. Loomis, Professor of Pathology and Practical Medicine in the Medical Department of University of New York:
"For the past four years I have used BUFFALO LITHIA WATER in the treatment of chronic Bright's Disease of the Kidneys occurring in Gouty and Rheumatic subjects with marked benefit."

Dr. Wm. B. Towles, Professor of Anatomy and Materia Medica in the Medical Department of the University of Virginia:
"I feel no hesitancy whatever in saying that in Gout, Rheumatic Gout, Rheumatism, Stone in the Bladder, and in all diseases of Uric Acid Diathesis, I know of no remedy at all comparable to BUFFALO LITHIA WATER
"I have witnessed decided beneficial results from its use in Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, and have great confidence in it as a remedy in certain stages of this disease."

Dr. Graeme M. Hammond, of New York, Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System, in the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital:
"In all cases of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, I have found BUFFALO LITHIA WATER of the greatest service in increasing the quantity of urine and in eliminating the albumen."

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can secure this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $40 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to June '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1.65.

Notice.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference will be held at Crystal Springs, beginning on Friday, June 14, at 9:30 A. M., and continuing through Monday, June 17.

Let us all go to the meeting praying for the presence and guidance of the Holy Spirit in all our plans and proceedings.

ADDIE V. MARSHALL, Pres.
Miss ANNIE E. LINFIELD, Cor. Sec.

Brethren of Mississippi Conference.

Please don't forget the Week of Prayer and Self-Denial for missions, beginning June 10. Dr. Lambuth will send a few each of best missionary leaflets for reading if written to immediately. A preparatory sermon on June 9 may open the field for seeding and fruitage on the sixteenth.

To Mississippi Epworth Leagues.

I have arranged the detail of an official route to Chattanooga. All parties on or near the lines of Y. and M. V., I. C. and M. and O. railroads can get to Chattanooga by the M. and O., on the "Galloway Express," which will be made up of special coaches and chair cars which start from Vicksburg at 7 A. M.; Jackson, 2:40 P. M., and Meridian about 11 A. M., June 26. These coaches will be taken up by M. and C. at Memphis, Grand Junction and Corinth, and we will get to Chattanooga at 6:50 the morning of the twenty-seventh.

Everything possible will be done for the comfort and enjoyment of Mississippians. Bishop Galloway will be the guest of Mississippi delegation, and will go on this train. I urge you to come by this route, so we can be together. Let all who go other routes have the conductor of the train inform the committee at Chattanooga how many Mississippians on board, so that they may be given homes in Mississippi colony.

Remember: (1) To send me your name; (2) to get a Souvenir Programme; (3) to go by the official route; (4) that Mississippi Headquarters will be at First Presbyterian Church. Let everybody come.

"Glideroy and the Heresy Coffin."

I am glad to see that Bro. "Glideroy" continues to drive nails in the coffin of several heresies that are stalking about in the church. If the work continues for a little while like it begins, we will soon have a funeral. The articles of "Glideroy" are timely, to the point, and unanswerable. They are in accordance with Scripture, and are the most satisfactory to both mind and heart. I desire to join with Bro. Edgar in a vote of thanks to "Glideroy."

Local Option.

Under the Local Option Law the people of Coahoma county voted "dry" on the twenty-eighth instant by a majority of ninety. The election passed off very quietly. We thank God for this success. The riddance of the saloon is largely the salvation of this fertile land and generous people. When the whisky question is truly left to the people, the stronger voice in answer will be every time, "No saloon." There is one saloon in the county, at this place. It opened on the tenth; hence more than eleven months to annoy the people and curse the land. But if the law is honestly applied, the dealer in the poison and ruin will vitiate his license in less than six months. The planters and laborers are learning the great benefit of "no saloon" in the country.

Kindness of Fellow-Feeling.

MR EDITOR: In your valuable paper, of May 30, Rev. W. Winans Drake poses as champion of Rev. D. C. Rawls. In doing so he charges the "pastors of the churches within range of the meeting" with dereliction of duty. He admits that he knows nothing of the result of the (Rawls) meeting, but rushes into print all the same. Being one of the pastors censured, I beg leave to submit:

1. Mr. Rawls was not wanted here. Our presiding elder had urged him to stay away.

2. Mr. Rawls claimed authorization for his course from a certain Louisiana State Holiness Association, an organization unknown to the Methodist Discipline. Our Louisiana Conference is a holiness association, but that Conference had not sent Mr. Rawls.

3. Under the circumstances we deemed Mr. Rawls' course revolutionary. We declined to be particeps criminis.

4. We hold that the law confines a local preacher to the bounds of the circuit or station which recommends his licentiation. Thus Mr. Rawls belonged to Tallahatchie circuit.

Quantum sufficit. 'Tis not that we love Cæsar less, but that we love Rome more. Bros. Drake and Rawls are beloved in the Lord; but, permit the confession, we love the church more than either of them.

HENRY H. AHRENS.

North Mississippi Conference Notes.

The District Conference at Okolona last week was attended by all the pastors but one and a few local preachers and laymen. Can not some plan be adopted to enlist the latter more in these meetings? The colporter was on hand and did good work. Children's Day is being observed more extensively than heretofore. We hope no pastoral charge will report blank in this matter, and that the collections will be better than formerly. Send whole amount raised to Rev. G. H. Lipscomb, Como, Miss., or to the Sunday-school agent, who will distribute to the different purposes for which it is designed.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh is assisting Bro. Park in a meeting at Booneville. Great results are reported.

Bro. Lowe is engaged in a meeting at Verona, assisted by Bros. Tumlin and Perkins.

Bro. Shumaker will begin a meeting next week in Okolona. He expects the aid of Bro. McIntosh.

Good meetings have been held recently in Aberdeen and Amory.

Epworth Leagues are being organized in many places. May the good work grow!

Notice.

The third Annual Convention of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society will convene, Aug. 21, in Asheville, N. C.

It is expected that every Conference Parsonage and Home Mission Society will send its corresponding secretary, president, treasurer, or some representative woman as delegate. Each Conference should elect its delegate without delay.

The ladies of Asheville have given a most cordial invitation, and request that all expecting to attend send their names promptly to Mrs. Dr. James Atkins, of Asheville, that homes may be provided.

If one hundred delegates and visitors attend, one and one-third railroad rates can be secured. Owing to its altitude, the climate of Asheville is delightful even during August. This especial time was selected with the purpose of accommodating teachers and mothers who would be too busy to leave home after the opening of school.

Let the entire membership of the society remember this approaching meeting in earnest prayer for the presence and blessing of the heavenly Father.

In behalf of the Central Committee.

That Last Glass.

Yes, it was that last glass at the supper which gave me that "ready" feeling, and which PRESTON'S BED-AKE only would remove. It did it quickly, too. Cures late-hour nervousness.

Messrs. Walter Baker & Co., the largest manufacturers of pure, high-grade Cocoas and Chocolates on this continent, have found it necessary to issue a special notice cautioning consumers of their goods against the recent attempts which have been made to substitute other manufactures, bearing labels, and done up in packages, in imitation of theirs. A sure test of genuineness is the name of WALTER BAKER & Co.'s place of manufacture—"DORCHESTER, MASS."

Do You Know?

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-fourth Annual Camp Meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 10, next, and continue for eight or ten days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the Camp Meeting to begin their journey on July 1, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 1 to 27, inclusive. All trains to stop at Camp Ground station from July 8 to 29, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The Camp Ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet, and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush at the opening of the Camp Meeting, should address communications to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, Mobile, Ala. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, chairman, New Orleans, La.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the Camp Meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. No gate fee will be exacted on the Sunday of the Camp Meeting. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees in gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to visit the Camp Meeting.

To Jericho, Jordan, and the Dead Sea.

BY BISHOP CHAS B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

"Down to Jericho" and the Jordan valley we went on horseback. The descent of over three thousand feet was made in twenty-eight miles. Sometimes we were threatened with a headlong plunge into echoing depths, and occasionally had to dismount and lead our horses, who were as sure-footed as a mountain goat. Roads there were none much of the way, especially after we turned aside from the Jericho road to go directly to the Dead Sea.

At an early hour everything was astir, the horses were ready, and after a hasty breakfast all were mounted and going down to the sea in which there is no life. The horses, though not full blood Arabian steeds, and by no means handsome, are active and strong-limbed—able to climb dizzy heights and safely go down the steepest hills. Their shoes cover the foot entirely, except a small hole in the center, and are fastened by two nails on a side with large heads. These are so made in order to protect them from the sharp rocks which are the most liberal remains of the time when this sacred land flowed with milk and honey. The "bit and bridle" with which they are "held in" is a curiosity of inhumanity. With that immense and cruel curb the hand of a child could break the horse's jaw.

We road past the Damascus Gate, across the Brook Kedron, by the Garden of Gethsemane, and over the Mount of Olives along the "Hosanna Road." At Bethany we were joined by the Sheik, a swarthy, warlike native, who was to be our guide and guard on the Jericho journey. He was dressed in the garb of a Bedouin, rode a fleet-looking bay horse with many gorgeous trappings, had a pistol in his belt, and a long Damascus blade swinging at his side. He had no occasion to use these weapons of war in our defense, but as there is yet danger of "falling among thieves" in going down to Jericho, we felt more secure in their protection.

Very soon the mountains of Moab were in full view with Nebo, the sturdy monarch of those historic peaks, rising above the range. The Dead Sea flashed like a mirror under the rays of the morning sun, and seemed but a few miles away, but hours of weary travel were necessary to bring us to its desolate shore. The country through which we passed was not cultivated, and had scarcely a habitation. Here and there were the tents of Bedouins, who moved with the seasons in order to find pasturage for their stock. We passed many shepherds tending their flocks on the hills. To-day, as two thousand years ago, that seems to be the only industry of the country.

We stopped for lunch at Neby Musa—the tomb of Moses—which is a large and almost deserted mosque. Here the Mohammedans claim the great lawgiver was buried, and deny the Bible statement that he died in the land of Moab and was mysteriously buried. This mosque was built over three hundred years ago. It is visited annually, in the month of April, by a great crowd of Mohammedan pilgrims.

A ride of two hours or less brought us to the Dead Sea. As we descended the last of the mountain terraces which overlook the sea, the plain looked like the valley of the shadow of death. There was no vegetation—only rugged, stunted bushes, and bunches of tall dry reeds. The latter, with its tufts of dry plumes, easily moved by the breezes, is the "reed shaken by the wind" spoken of in Scripture. We passed what our dragoman claimed as the supposed site of the gardens of Sodom and Gomorrah. A dreary, blasted plain that is without a tint of beauty or the sign of healthful life.

Some time was spent at the Dead Sea, tasting its brine, bathing our faces, and gathering stones along the shore. One of the party tried a plunge into the waves and tested the fact that the human body can not sink in that heavy water. It is said to hold in solution fifteen per cent. more salt than the ocean. From the taste I should insist that the estimate is too low by half. There are no shells on the shore—not even the remains of any living thing. But the stones are beautiful—of every size, shape, and color. Having no outlet, its waters are carried off by evaporation.

Across the sea, and some miles eastward, we saw the ruined castle of Machærus, where the iron-hearted John the Baptist was imprisoned, and in which he was beheaded by order of Herod Antipas. It was from the gloom and "maddening solitude" of that fortress that the dauntless Forerunner, "cowed by the physical lassitude and despair of a life left to rot away in the lonely darkness," sent two of his friends to Jesus with this strange, sad question: "Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?"

We were very near the place where the waters of the Jordan are poured into the lifeless sea, but saw no open mouth and turbid tides. These floods come in by a subterranean channel, except when the great valley is overflowed. Some distance above the river runs underground, as if to accustom itself to the "shadow of death" before it is swallowed up in its remorseless sea.

An hour's ride brought us to the "Fords of the Jordan," the reputed place where Joshua led the Israelites across the river, and probably not far from the spot where our Lord was baptized, and a strange voice was heard from "the excellent glory." In that valley—that "uncultivated and untenanted wilderness"—girdled by wild and robber-haunted mountains, the great Baptist preached to vast multitudes attracted thither from the whole land. Priest and publican, soldier and civilian, scribe and Pharisee, rich and poor, were there—coming on eager "from priestly Hebron, from holy Jerusalem, and from smiling Galilee." How vividly those scenes rose before us as we urged our horses along the dreary, alkali plain, and caught the first view of the river Jordan. To most tourists that first sight is doubtless a shock of disappointment. We involuntarily invest with poetic beauty the scenes where great events have occurred, and especially where spiritual revelations have been made. It is difficult to conceive of the commonplace in scenery being associated with the wonderful and miraculous in experience or achievement. But in truth the Jordan is not a beautiful stream—crooked, muddy, with precipitous banks and a swift, swirling current. Its average width is said to be about ninety feet, and its depth ten feet. We bathed our faces in the historic river, cut several canes from the balsam that grows on its banks, had our dragoman to fill for each of us a bottle with the sacred water, meditated reverently upon the wonderful events which were there enacted, and then remounted our horses for a two hours' ride to Jericho.

Our route was along the very path the ancient Israelites traveled toward Gilgal and Jericho. Every square foot was hallowed by associations and memories that thrilled the soul with unrestrained rapture, while away in front of us, gilded by the declining sun, rose to majestic height Mount Quarantania, the scene of our Lord's temptation. We passed in a few hundred yards of ancient Gilgal, but the deepening twilight warned us that we had not time to stop. There the first tent was stretched after the miraculous crossing of the river, there the first passover feast was eaten in the promised inheritance, there the last manna was gathered, and there the wilderness wanderers ate of the old corn of the land. In Gilgal the Tabernacle was set up and remained until the tribes moved to their several estates.

We reached Jericho about seven o'clock, after fully ten hours in the saddle. In a modest hotel we found comfortable rooms, courteous attention, well-prepared meals, and refreshing sleep. Our one-eyed host was glad to see us, and, after the manner of the East, wanted a certificate of commendation. At an early hour the next morning we were ready for a visit to the site of ancient Jericho, and our return to Jerusalem. Near the modern city we were shown the spot where Herod's palace stood, now a Russian hospital, and probably passed where blind Bartimeus "sat by the wayside begging." The Turkish barracks are supposed to occupy the site of the house of Zaccheus, "the execrated publican," where our Lord was an honored guest, and where he left his blessing and great salvation. Here he gave his disciples the Parable of the Pounds. We plucked some apples of Sodom as we rode along. They are about the size and shape of an ordinary plum, yellow and beautiful without, but empty and useless within. Lemon and orange groves abound, and the trees were laden with golden fruit. The valley which stretched out before us—green and fertile—which once so charmed the eye of Israel, is now the personal property of the Sultan.

A half-hour's ride brought us to ancient Jericho and "Elisha's Fountain." Three great hills—piles of stone and rubbish—are all that remain of the strong-walled city which fell at the blast of Joshua's trumpets. We climbed upon them, traced the line of the old wall, and in imagination saw, as "the people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down flat." We heard Joshua as he pronounced a curse upon the man who should rebuild the city, and in the rubbish about us saw its literal fulfillment. Just at that spot I fancied was the house of Rahab, who hid the two spies under stalks of flax, and from whose window of faith floated the scarlet line that secured for herself and family divine protection. As we looked across the Jordan, and toward the distant mountains of Moab, we probably saw the place where, as Elijah and Elisha "still went on and talked" that "there appeared a chariot of fire, and horses of fire, and parted them both asunder; and Elijah went up by a whirlwind into heaven."

At the base of these mounds is "Elisha's Fountain," which sends out a bold, clear stream, strong enough to turn the big wheel of a grain-mill near by. Here the prophet made the bitter waters sweet, and from that day to this it has been a wholesome fountain of flowing plenty and crystal beauty. Above us, and very near, rose the great wall of the Mount of Temptation. On its steep side there is a large Abyssinian monastery, which seems to cling to the rocks like lichen on a tree, and to which access can only be had by a narrow path on foot or the back of a donkey. We were told that the monks in that monastery are supported by food brought from Jerusalem. What a dreary, indolent life they must live!

Leaving ancient Jericho, we passed through the valley of Achor, where Achan and family were stoned and burned for his covetous disobedience. Before beginning our steep ascent of the mountains of Benjamin we forded the Brook Cherith, by which, farther up the deep gorge, the prophet Elijah was fed by the ravens. Here it is bold and beautiful, making glad and fruitful all the plain where it flows. Farther up it is smaller, but as it falls from one rock-terrace to another, we could distinctly hear from the road the wild music of its waters. At the base of the mountains we noted the ruins of a large aqueduct, built by Herod the Great to carry the waters of Cherith to his famous gardens in Jericho.

When away up the hills of Benjamin, we were shown a Greek convent—convent of St. Elias—built on the side of a deep gorge, down which ran the channel of Cherith. That is supposed to be the identical spot where Elijah secreted himself after delivering his startling message in the ivory palace of King Ahab. There it is supposed that the ravens came by divine commission to minister unto him, and from there, refreshed in spirit and endued with power, he went to win the wonderful faith-victory of Carmel.

We stopped for lunch at a khan, which is said to mark the place where the Good Samaritan wrought a work that will be spoken of throughout the world and to remotest generations. All the physical surrounding may very well support the claim that just there the poor man "fell among thieves." After tarrying for a few moments again in Bethany, we reached our hotel in Jerusalem in safety. One of our party, Rev. Mr. Patterson, of Scotland, came in rather unpleasant contact with the heels of a vicious horse, but otherwise we had neither "let nor hindrance" during the two days' journey.

Athens, Jan. 30, 1895. —Nashville Advocate.

Ill Words Fly Far.

A minister, who lived more than three hundred years ago, was anxious to show a lady in his congregation the evil of slandering others. So he asked her to do a very strange thing—to go to the market, buy a chicken just killed and still covered with feathers, and walk a certain distance, plucking the bird as she went.

The lady did as she was directed, and returned, anxious to know the meaning of the injunction.

"Retrace your steps," said the minister, "and gather up, one by one, all the feathers you have scattered."

"I cast the feathers carelessly away," said the woman, "and the wind caried them in all directions."

"Well, my daughter," the minister replied, "so it is with your words of slander; like the feathers which the wind has scattered, they have been wafted in many directions. Call them back now, if you can. Go, sin no more."—Selected.

Children hunger perpetually for new ideas. They will learn with pleasure from the lips of parents what they deem drudgery to study in books; and even if they have the misfortune to be deprived of many educational advantages, they will grow up intelligent if they enjoy in childhood the privilege of daily listening to the conversation of intelligent people. We sometimes see parents who are the life of every company which they enter, dull, silent and uninteresting at home among their children. If they have not mental activity and mental store sufficient for both, let them first use what they have for their own households. A silent home is a dull place for young people, a place from which they will escape if they can. How much useful information, on the other hand, is often given in pleasant conversation, and what unconscious, but excellent, mental training in lively, social argument. Cultivate to the utmost the art of conversation at home.

President Garfield once said that one of the most solemn moments in a young man's life is when he casts his first ballot, because he invariably measures his standard of citizenship thereby. "If," says Garfield, "he follows the tracks of his father without inquiry as to principles and reforms, little dependence can be placed upon him to fight the battles of progress, which every republic must fight to live; if he allows prejudices to warp his judgment, he at once becomes one of a class that under certain circumstances might become dangerous to our country's welfare and perpetuity. On the other hand, if he goes to the ballot-box with independent judgment, careful investigation of political principles and parties, and unswerving devotion to duty, he becomes the highest type of an American citizen. A nation governed by such voters is sure to go forward and upward in all that makes a nation truly great."—Southwick Messenger.

STAFFORD—Mrs. ALLETHA ALICE STAFFORD was born Sept. 5, 1843, and died at Stafford's Springs, Dec. 26, 1894. In early girlhood she was converted and united with the Presbyterian Church at Philadelphia. On Feb. 14, 1865 she was married to E. Stafford, and, as her husband was a member of the Methodist Church, she united with the Methodist Church. God blessed them with six children. The five living are God-fearing members of the church. Her care and devotion for her children were lovely. She laid them all on the altar of Christ; and their piety is the fruit of her devotion. In the lives and hearts of her children she has a monument more enduring than a marble shaft. Her teaching, example and influence over them were in keeping with the lessons of Christ Jesus. Her suffering for several months was at times severe; but in the midst of it all she would invariably greet her visitors with a pleasant smile and cheerful words. Days before her departure she seemed anxious to depart, though regretting to be severed from her husband and children. Before she was confined to her room she attended the sanctification meeting at Meridian, and after her return her face glowed with delight in repeating the public evidences given of a holy life by young ladies, and her daily conversation was witness to the fact that she had entered into a higher and sanctified life in Christ Jesus. Her prayers and admonitions to her children breathed the atmosphere of heaven for days before she entered into her eternal rest.

She was buried in the cemetery at Vossburg.

A FRIEND.

HOPKINS—NANCY NORMAN, daughter of Elijah Norman and Nellie Baird, was born in Wilkes county, Ga., Sept. 16, 1809; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was converted December, 1829. On Jan. 20, 1831, she was married to Thos. J. Hopkins, of Wilkes county, who preceded her several years to the better land. Her death occurred at the home of her son, W. T. Hopkins, near Pleasant Hill, Sabine parish, La., March 23; etc.

We miss you, dear "Grandma," from the old rocking chair in the corner, but rejoice that a life of patient toil and suffering has emerged into a life of rest and joy. Her life was an example of the power of Christ to save from sin, to give joy in suffering and peace in storm and tempest, and to inspire hope amid surest disappointment. She bore faithful testimony to God's sustaining grace and full salvation. Her faith and love were an inspiration to us; her blessings were a benediction.

She leaves a number of children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren, most of whom are seeking to walk as she walked.

We are parted now, dear "Grandma." We shall meet again.

W. F. AND L. M. HENDERSON.

FRANKLIN—Died Dec. 27, 1893, SALLIE MAY FRANKLIN, aged three years and twenty-two days; daughter of F. E. and Lula Franklin, residents of Bienville parish, La.

Sallie was a good child, and is now an angel of light. Spoke to her little brother and sister as to the reward of the obedient and the punishment of the disobedient. Spoke to her mother a few days before she was taken sick; told her she was going to die and live with the angels. "Suffer little children to come unto me."

T. J. M.

DANIELS—EDWARD HILTON DANIELS was born in Algiers, La., Oct. 11, 1864, of Franoli A. and Mrs. Mary Daniels; joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in 1880; was converted in 1886; graduated in pharmacy at Tulane University, April 8, 1892; was married to Miss Leah Walls, of Algiers, April 23, 1896; died April 2, 1895.

His was for many years connected with the Sunday-school of Algiers as secretary. Being of pious parents, and reared under the most sacred of influences, this work was natural and pleasant.

It was my good fortune to know him intimately during a pastorate of four years, in which I was drawn to him in bonds of love by his sterling integrity. He was pure gold. There never was the slightest stain upon him. His whole life was one of uprightness. He had no use for anything low or mean. He loved the church, and was always willing to do his part to promote her welfare.

Mr. Wesley said: "Our people die well." It was so in this case. Though surrounded with life's tenderest ties, and just beginning life, yet he was resigned to the will of God. He knew in whom he had believed. A short time before his death he said: "It is so bright over there, and all is beautiful." His eldest brother knelt and prayed at his bedside. A few moments after he said, "They have come for me," and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. His death was calm, without a struggle. He leaves a father and mother, a wife and three brothers. May God comfort them, and make them faithful to meet him in heaven. We hope to meet him "by and by."

H. S. JOHNS.

GLASS—JAMES RICHARD GLASS, the subject of this sketch, was born in Butler county, Ala., June 29, 1855.

When a small boy his parents moved to Kemper county, Miss., where our deceased brother lived until the seventh ultimo, when he was, without a moment's warning, suddenly stricken down by a stroke of lightning.

He professed religion and joined the Methodist church in his twenty-fourth year, and, I am informed by those who knew him best, lived ever after a consistent life. In his case we have the testimony of his life only upon which to base our hopes of his salvation. He leaves a wife and seven children, besides father, mother, brothers and sisters, to mourn his untimely death.

May God bless and sustain the bereaved ones!

D. G. W. ELLIS.

BALDWIN—Our grand baby boy, WM. HENRY, infant son of E. A. and M. Lillie Baldwin, went to dwell with the angels above, May 15, 1895.

We sorrow not as those who have no hope, for Jesus said, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." We will go to him.

IRA B. ROBERTSON.

The Old Story.

Hypocrites in the church is an excuse that many are ready to give for not being Christians. A few days ago the writer met one of these. He did not want to associate with Christians, or be numbered with them in any way. In the course of the conversation, however, he acknowledged that there were two men he had known who had lived up to their religion, who were as near perfect as men could be. But both these were church men. When asked to name two others outside the church of whom the same thing could be said, he was compelled to confess that he could not think of them at present.

Without doubt others would have to make a similar confession. Where are the men outside the church who come anywhere near perfection, that we can point to as examples, that we would be willing to entrust with the care of our children? It is impossible to find men in the world whose characters compare with the characters of those in the church. Wherever we find a good, moral, upright man in the world, we may depend upon it we will be able to find a better man in the church.—Rev. J. L. Stillwell.

Practical Results of Higher Criticism.

Opportunity was afforded during the past Summer of talking with a number of persons, whose pastors are higher critics. They were gathered at a pleasant resort from different parts of the country, and it was discovered in every instance that, while still retaining their connection with the church, they were practically infidels. They did not hesitate to say that they had lost their faith, and no longer took any interest in the reading of the Bible. Thus wrecked souls are drifting on to meet the awful doom of their unfaithful teachers, who are responsible for their ruin.

One who carries a lantern on a country road at night sees only one step before him. If he takes that one step, he carries the lantern forward, and thus makes another step plain. At length he reaches his destination in safety, without once going into darkness. The whole has been made light for him, though only a single step of it at a time. This illustrates the usual method of God's guidance. His Word is represented as a lamp unto the feet. It is a lamp—not a blazing sun, not even a lighthouse, but a plain common lamp, or lantern, which one can carry about in the hand. It is a lamp "unto the feet," not throwing its beams afar, not illumining a hemisphere, but shining only on the one little bit of dusty road on which the pilgrim's feet are walking. The duty for the moment is always clear, and that is as far as we need concern ourselves, for when we do the little that is clear, we will carry the light on, and it will shine upon the next moment's step.

"Keep Thou my feet; I do not ask to see

—J. R. Miller, D. D.

Referring to higher criticism, Dr. P. S. Henson says: "The devil does not walk abroad as he used to, with horns and hoofs and a forked tail, and a breath that smells of brimstone, but he comes in the guise of a gentleman, with eye-glasses on his nose, encyclopedias under his arms, and the learned lingo of philosophy on his lips. He does not squarely and impudently affirm that there is no God, but shakes his sapient head and shrugs his shoulders, and says he doesn't know, and he rather suspects that nobody knows."

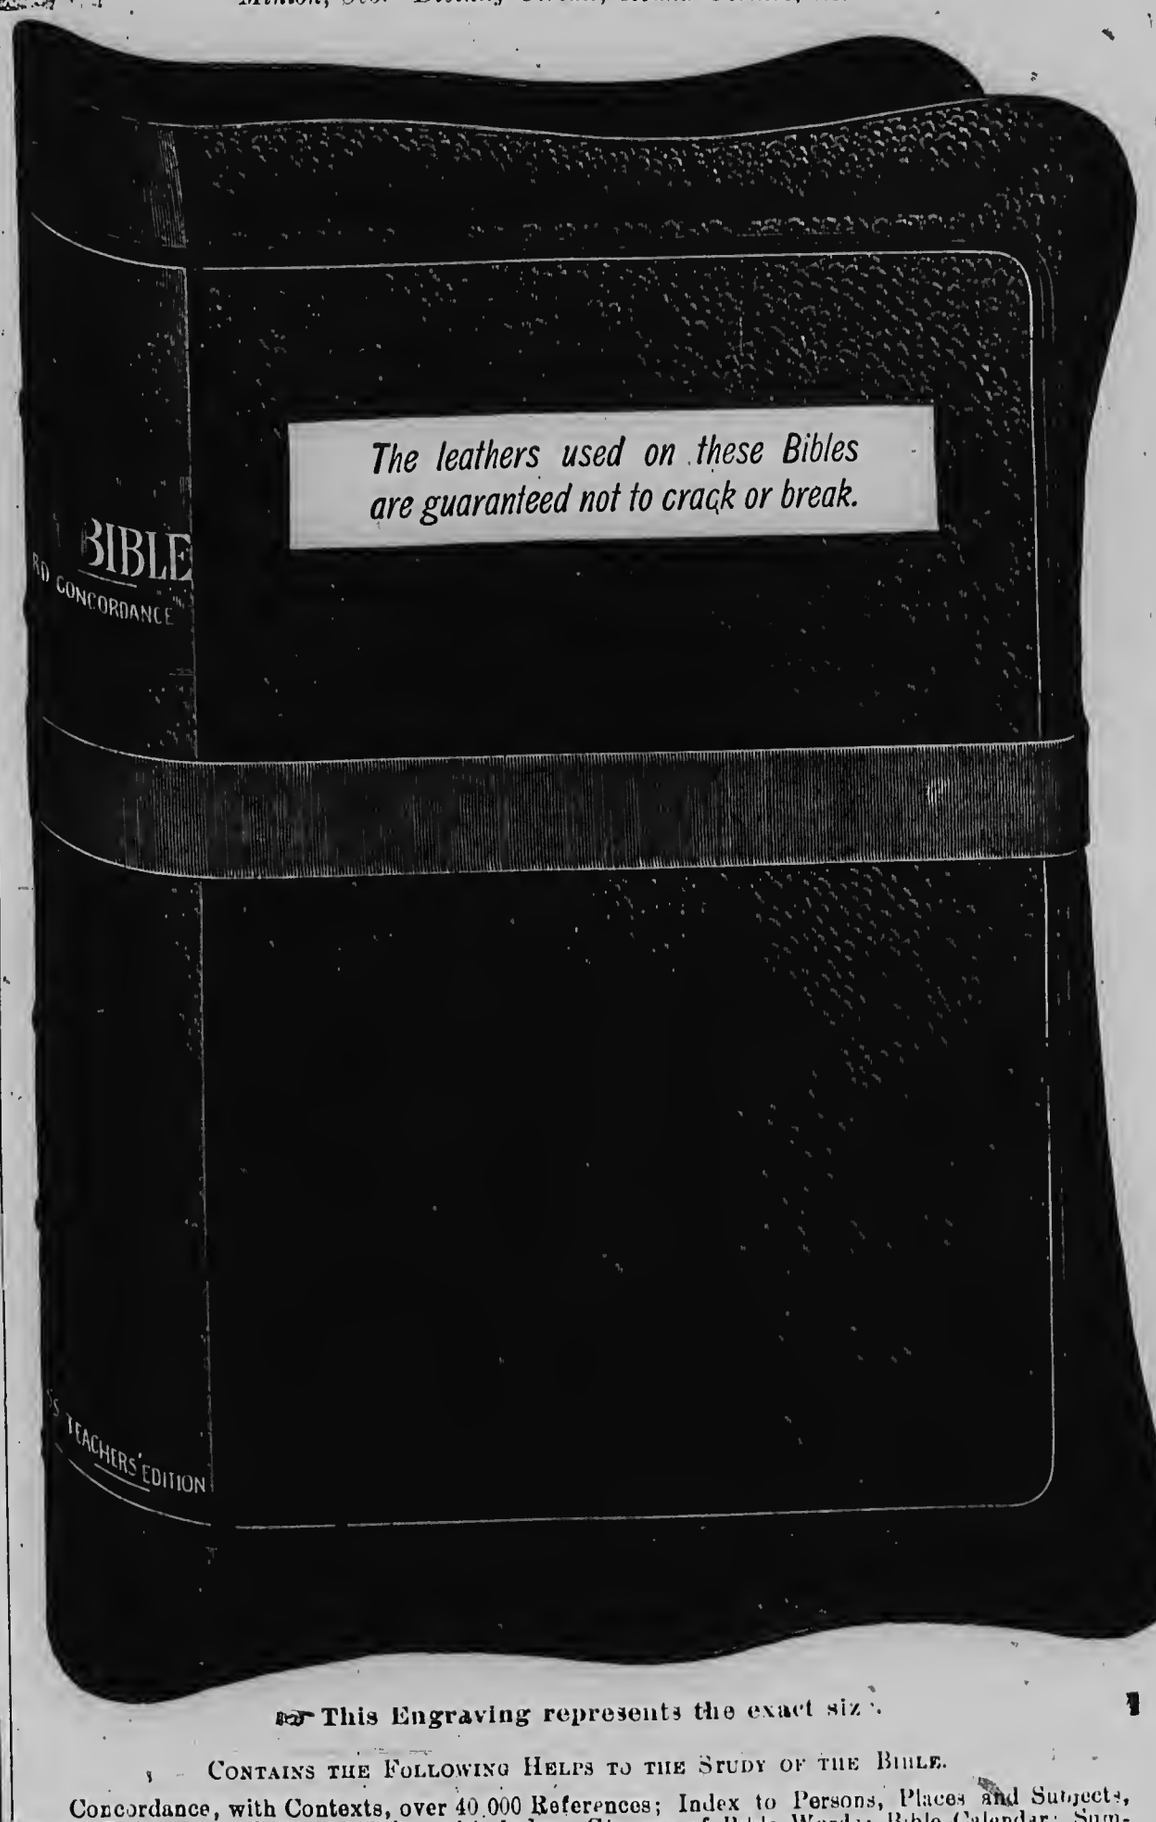
The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.



This Engraving represents the exact size.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., June, '96. A little later it will be July, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

In Chicago, on May 30, a great number of people were overcome by the heat.

Decoration Day—May 30—was fittingly observed throughout the country by the G. A. R. Posts.

The Chinese exclusion act has at last been before the United States Supreme Court, and is affirmed as constitutional.

The police strictly enforced the Sunday law in this city on June 2. Many saloon keepers were arrested for keeping their places open.

Since the death of the late Secretary of State, the dispatches from the national capital have teemed with gossip concerning the probable successor to be appointed.

A terrific fire raged in the northern part of Pennsylvania the first part of this week. Millions of dollars' worth of property was destroyed and some lives were lost.

The municipal administration of Chicago are laboring to discover how many of the names on the city's pay roll represent actual employees, and how many represent straw men.

The limit for the construction of the new bridge across the Hudson at New York is fixed at $25 000,000. It will probably be a cantilever-hinged suspension bridge, supported by twelve cables.

Word comes from Connecticut that the Danbury Temperance Society, composed of young women who have pledged themselves not to marry a man who drinks intoxicants, now numbers 400, and the young women of Bethel, about three miles from Danbury, will join the society.

Representative Meyer says of the payment of the sugar bounty claims: "I think there will not be any unusual delay in the payment of the claims. I think the treasury department will formulate regulations for proving claims in a reasonable manner, and I believe the auditing of claims will be done promptly."

Amid the peaceful shades of Oakwood Cemetery, Chicago, with martial music and stirring eloquence, with civic function and military pomp, there was dedicated on May 30 by men who wore the gray and men who fought for the blue a monument to the fallen champions of the "Lost Cause." Upon the green sward of God's acre met the columns of the North and South.

Alderman Desforges, who was convicted in the Criminal Court of this city of having attempted to intimidate a witness from testifying before the Grand Jury, will have to serve his term in the penitentiary. The Supreme Court has confirmed judgment of the lower court. Also Alderman Dudousat, who was convicted of receiving a bribe, was refused a rehearing.

FOREIGN.

Sir William Vernon Harcourt announces the intention of the British government to stand firmly on the gold basis.

Dr. Louis Pasteur has refused a German decoration tendered him in recognition of his discoveries in the line of curing hydrophobia by inoculation.

There seems apparently to be no improvement in the situation in Cuba. A settlement of the insurrection seems as far distant as ever it was, neither side having succeeded in securing any decisive advantage.

Two hundred houses were destroyed by fire in the native quarter of Port Said, Egypt, on June 1. The commander of the British gunboat "Dryad" landed men and pumps and succeeded in quenching the flames.

A bill to prohibit the employment of Jews in official positions of state missed passing the French Chambers by a narrow majority, and yet the French Constitution declares the equality of all citizens before the law.

The Sultan has undertaken to reply to the proposition of the powers regarding reforms in Armenia before the feast of Bairman, the powers having declined to entertain a proposal to have his answer deferred until after this period.

Notwithstanding the results in recent by-elections and the growing discontent within the Liberal ranks, the government of Lord Rosebery appears determined to hold on to power, no matter how much reduced its majority may become.

The report of the Anglo-Indian opium commission, supposing it to be unbiased by considerations of trade, throws a new light on the use of opium, so far as the tropics are concerned. The commission holds that opium does, on the whole, quite as much good as harm, and declines to recommend any restrictions on the trade.

During last week there occurred two terrible marine catastrophes, in which there was great loss of life, as well as the total destruction of two fine vessels. One event took place off the coast of Galicia, while the other occurred in the Pacific Ocean, in the neighborhood of Manzanillo on the Mexican coast. About 300 persons were lost.

In the presence of a typical gathering of students of all the German universities, on Saturday, the foundation of a monument of Bismarck as a student was laid at Andelsburg, near Kissen. Hans Hopfer, the novelist, and president of the Society of Old Students, delivered the oration. Emperor William contributed 1,000 marks toward the cost of the statue.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

There is more joy and more stir in the secular press over one heterodox minister than over ninety and nine orthodox ministers equally great and far more useful. A runaway horse attracts more attention than ninety-nine teams doing steady work, so a sky-rocket attracts more attention than ninety-nine street lamps; but the street lamps and the steady teams are more useful.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE WAYS OF GOD JUSTIFIED.

(Job xxxiv, 14-30.

Said melancholy Cowper: "God moves in a mysterious way." Whether elated or depressed, it is true that God can write straightly on crooked lines.

1. Elihu, who sets forth the sentiment of our lesson, obviously a young man, prefaces his justification of God's ways by saying: "Days should speak and multitude of years should teach wisdom."

(1) Modesty, respectful silence in the presence of seniors, is becoming to the young. Youthful impudence, arrogance, presumption, is doubly censurable.

(2) The aged should teach wisdom. Puerility in an old man is an abomination. Dignity, manliness, wisdom, mellowness, should characterize all he says and does.

2. In justifying the ways of God, Elihu declares that God is not a respecter of persons. Prince and beggar, opulent and indigent, constitute relations which he regards not.

(1) High station is held in high esteem only by the ignorant. The oak on the mountain's summit suffers most from the Winter's blast. Uneasy rests the head which wears a crown.

(2) Opulence? The toothache of the millionaire hurts as much as that of the pauper. Appetite, sleep and health can not be purchased with money.

(3) Life on earth, to be correctly estimated, must be viewed from standpoints different from those in vogue among men. This life is simply preparatory to the life beyond the smiling and the weeping.

3. Elihu assures that God heareth the cry of the afflicted. He hears and answers prayer.

(1) The afflicted. Their number is large. Writer and reader included. Ailment, disappointment, suffering, distress.

(2) When afflicted, we are apt to cry to God. Afflictions are also on that account benedictions. Suffering seeks relief. In the valley of sorrow we look to the mountains, from whence cometh our help.

(3) God heareth. "Ask, and ye shall receive." Have proof ourselves that God answers prayer.

4. Elihu declares that man's weal or woe, fortune or misfortune, are according to God's arrangement.

(1) When God giveth quietness, none can trouble. It pleases him to strew flowers of prosperity and happiness on the pathway of many. In such case ill-will of devil and man are of no avail.

(2) When God hideth his face, darkness is inevitable. His frowns entail failure and disaster.

Prove yourself worthy of God's friendship.

A Chance to Make Money.

I have been selling Dish Washers three weeks, and have cleared $315 Can any of your readers, without previous experience, beat this? In this business a woman can make as much as a man. Every family wants a Dish Washer when they can be got so cheap, and they will have one, no matter who it is that is selling it. I am convinced anyone can make from $5 to $10 a day in this business anywhere, city or country. They all want Dish Washers. You can get particulars by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., E. E Pittsburg, Pa., and by beginning at once, you can have enough money by Spring to start in most any kind of business. I am going to stick right to this Dish Washer business till I make $10 000. LOUISIANA EPWORTH LEAGUE STATE CONFERENCE.

As suggested by the New Orleans Epworth League Union, a committee, composed of the several officers of said Union, was selected to formulate plans for the holding of an Epworth League State Conference.

Accordingly, on Friday evening, May 31, '95, said committee met and discussed the advisability of such a step. After some deliberation, it was decided to submit the following report to the New Orleans Union at its next meeting:

Resolved, That the Epworth Leagues of the State of Louisiana meet in convention, Sept. 6, 7, 8, 1895 (rather than in October, as previously voted on by Union), at the Louisiana Avenue M. E. Church, South, New Orleans, La.

Resolved, That the following Committees be appointed: Program, Reception, Correspondence, Homes, Printing, Press, Transportation, Music.

Respectfully submitted.

J. T. CREBBIN, Pres.,
M. B. DEPAES, 1st V. Pres.,
H. B. RUEE 2nd V. Pres.,

MOCKERY.

Why do we grudge our sweets so to the living,
Who, God knows, find at best too much of gall,
And then with generous, open hands kneel, giving
Unto the dead our all?

Why do we pierce the warm hearts, sin or sorrow,
With idle jests, or scorn, or cruel sneers,
And when it can not know, on some to-morrow,
Speak of its woe through tears?

What do the dead care for the tender token—
The love, the praise, the floral offerings?
Not palpitating, living hearts are broken
For want of just these things.

Luther the Great.

BY SCOTT F. HERSHEY, PH.D.

IV.

When the great Protestant Reformation came, like the breath of the morning, over Europe, Papal vices and tyrannies had well-nigh suspended the best operations of civilization. Political reformers had tried to weaken the power of Rome, and clear her political atmosphere at least. The Austrian house had tried it and failed. The house of Hohenstaufen, imperial family of Germany, and heroes everyone of them, sought to deliver the empire from the Papal bondage. Henry IV. had thrown all his courage, power and patriotism into the struggle, to humiliate Rome, and save Germany the humiliation of a vassalage to the profligate Popes. He bent every energy, used every resource, exhausted every means, and at last was compelled to suffer the most shameful humiliation to which ruler was ever driven by the papacy. In the trenches of the Italian castle of Canossa, in midwinter, barefoot, with loose garment about him, upon his knees, he spent three days and nights imploring the forgiveness of the Pope.

Political reform would not reach the case. It had to be a religious reformation. No one man contributed so much to the working forces of the new era as Martin Luther, the honest monk. The sixteenth century was fairly begun when from the ranks of the common people came this leader, who was to usher in the mightiest moral and political reformation the world had known. While he was to become one of the most monumental men of all the centuries. Carlyle's estimate of Luther is less true to history than it is matchless in elegance: "I will call Luther a great man—great in intellect, in courage, in affection and integrity; one of our most lovable and precious men. Hero and prophet, a true son of fire and fact, for whom these centuries and many that are yet to come, may be thankful to Heaven." I must find no time for the highly interesting incidents of his boyhood home and education. He one day found a Bible, read it, began to think, to see, to feel; and the thunderbolt, which Europe needed, was being forged. Then came the journey to Rome. Some difficulty had arisen in one of the monastic orders, and he was deputized to Rome to settle it. On his way to the Papal capital he lodges in a convent in Lombardy. He is amazed at the magnificence of the apartments, the richness of the dresses, and the delicacy of the cuisine. Marble, silk and luxury all about him, and his heart sinks.

At Rome he is startled at the profane and heartless way in which the sacraments are celebrated, and at the jokes and buffoonery of the prelates, while he is profoundly shocked at the evil, hypocrisy displayed at the mass. Accustomed to abominations, profanities and blasphemies he had never supposed possible with any class. He said, "It is incredible what sins and outrages are committed in Rome." The excessive corruption of the Papal clergy must have been so general and shameful as to convince him of the fundamental evil of the Papacy. "If there be a hell," he writes, "Rome is built above it. It is an abyss, from whence all sins proceed."

One day, while in Rome, he ascends Pilate's stairway on his knees, as was his custom. But his thoughts were on the light he had received out of the Bible. Suddenly a voice seemed to say to him, "The just shall live by faith." He sprang to his feet, and fled from the place of such folly.

Luther's heart was right when he came to Rome; now his conscience was awed. The great truth of justification by faith, which flooded his soul with marvelous light, awoke his whole moral being, and is one of the mighty foundation-stones of living Christianity.

Then the Pope opened in Germany the great market for the sale of indulgences. This merchandise was simply a traffic in sins. The people believed that as soon as their money was given they were certain of forgiveness, and by the same means they could deliver the souls of their dead friends from the fires of purgatory.

When Luther first heard of the work of the auctioneer of these indulgences in Germany, he exclaimed, "God willing, I will make a hole in his drum." He did. One day a number of persons came to him to confess their sins. They confessed to the grossest vices and the most enormous crimes. He rebuked and instructed them. His astonishment increased when they declared that they did not intend to abandon any of their sins, and boldly produced their certificates of pardon, which they had received for money paid. Luther at once went into the pulpit and delivered a powerful sermon. It was circulated throughout the empire. It brought on a storm. It was while that storm was brewing that Luther determined upon a bold thing. He determined to cast himself into the conflict, and stand between the people and the shameful impositions practiced upon them under the sanction of the Pope. He threw the gauge of battle down when on the memorable evening of Oct. 31, 1517, he went to the cathedral door at Wittemberg and nailed to the panel thirty-five arguments against the corruptions and errors of Rome. It was practically an impeachment of the Papal authority.

The most stupendous moral struggle the world ever felt was on. Luther became the great teacher of national independence. The Pope excommunicated Luther. The people burned the bull. Luther addressed an affectionate letter to the Pope, promising such obedience as was right in scriptural things. But he was the keeper of his own conscience. The whole power of the Papacy was called into play to crush him. The work of the Papal envoy, and the story of Augsberg and Worms, are familiar to all.

From the whole line of Rome's fortifications persecution poured its galling fire. But persecution failed, as did all the arguments of Romish doctors and nuncios. Luther successfully controverted the right of Rome to rule above the conscience in the church, and the state in public affairs. He led the church into the light of a spiritual faith and scriptural doctrine. Martin Luther is the crowning glory of the Reformation.

Boston, Mass.

"Why I Became a Catholic."

Recently there has been put into my hands a pamphlet bearing the title at the head of this article, and having for its author "Frank Johnston, Jackson, Miss." Unless I am mistaken in the identity of the author, Mr. Johnston has long been a member of the Jackson bar, is the present Attorney-General of the State of Mississippi by appointment of Governor Stone, and is a candidate before the people for election to that high office now held by him. He is a clever, cultured, genial gentleman, related by consanguinity and affinity to some of the most distinguished families in Mississippi. Whatever he publishes is entitled to respectful consideration.

How extensively this pamphlet has been circulated I do not know. The copy before me appears to have been presented by a Catholic priest to a "dear friend" whose relatives are all Protestants and mostly Methodists. The pamphlet has been read by me (and others through whose hands it came to me) with curious interest, because of personal acquaintance with the author, whom I esteem as an honest and honorable man; and because of the facts, as stated on the first page of the pamphlet, he was "born and educated in an atmosphere of Protestantism," and he "had been trained as a lawyer to analytical and logical methods of thought and investigation," and he "proposed to use these methods in this [examining the subject of religion] as I would in the examination of any other subject, rejecting all prejudices and preconceived impressions, and resolved to follow with all possible fidelity the logic" of his inquiry.

Yet at the very outset it is very apparent that Mr. Johnston had not many "prejudices and preconceived impressions" to reject, since he says on the very first page: "While I was not imbued with any bitter prejudices, yet all my impressions went strongly against the Catholic Church, for I had accepted without examination the common Protestant objections to its dogmas and politics, though the beauty and dignity of its ritual excited my admiration." And on the same page he says: "I believed in the existence of a God in a general way, but the evidences of his existence were not clear or distinct to my mind." "Paley's Evidences of Christianity" and "Natural Theology" were disappointing to him, and, instead of proving the case to his mind, "threw a shadow of uncertainty about it." And then on same first page and in the same connection delivers himself of these remarkable words: "The theory of design in nature [Paley's great argument] proved clearly enough that there is some all-pervading intelligence presiding over and governing matter, but it did not prove to my mind that there is a personal God with moral attributes." And yet on page 4 Mr. Johnston, now Attorney of the State of Mississippi by appointment, and desiring to be elected to the same office by vote of the people, says: "The impossibility of imagining a moral law without a moral law-maker . . . forces the mind logically to the acceptance of one or the other of two alternatives. We must reject absolutely the idea that there is such a thing as a moral law possessing positive and fixed qualities, or we must believe that there is a supernatural law-maker, or, in a word, that there is a personal God."

Mr. Johnston fails to see how illogical and contradictory are the positions thus assumed by him. The "evidence of design in nature" proves "the existence of an all-pervading intelligence," and yet is not sufficient to prove the existence of personality! As though intelligence could exist or subsist without personality! And then, assuming that there is a moral law—which I am willing to admit—he says it is impossible to imagine a moral law without a moral law-maker, who must be a personal God! Nevertheless, Infinite Wisdom may be without a personal God! Does he really think his argument stronger than Paley's? Is it not an unintentional re-statement of Paley's argument made weaker by a change of terms?

But the existence of a moral law is not the only unsupported assumption made by Mr. Johnston. He does not stop to define what a church may be, or is, but assumes that there is, or ought to be, an infallible church composed of somebody or something—just what or which he leaves us to guess; and assumes that an infallible church must be divinely inspired; and further assumes that the Roman Catholic Church is infallible and can not err! Evidently he has forgotten, or never read, the history of the Protestant Reformation, which he lightly dismisses with a brief reference, which classes that mighty movement, God-inspired and blessed, with the Arian heresy! Assuming that the Roman Catholic Church was divinely established, and referring to the claims of Protestants, Mr. Johnston says: "But I could not conceive how errors could find their way into the teachings of a divinely established church!" Hence one infers there was no need of the Protestant Reformation, and Protestant Churches have no right to exist. Surely he has never read "The Lives of the Popes." He confesses that he has never studied the history of the Jews, and disproves of them as he does the Mohammedans and other pagans. Had he studied the history of the Jewish Church, he would have seen how a "divinely established church" could so far err that Sadducees, denying the immortality of the human soul, the existence of angels or spirits, could occupy the office of high priest (even as the infidel Leo X. became Pope) and at length demand the crucifixion of the Son of God! Not to have studied the history of the Jewish Church is not to have studied the Bible—and in that Mr. Johnston is a good Catholic. Certainly he has never read the history or teachings of the Jesuits—or else has read only to learn to follow their teachings. Has he never read of the horrors of the so-called Holy Inquisition? of the sale of indulgences by Tetzel and others? of the scale of prices for indulgences (not only on account of sins committed, but also sins to be committed) in and by authority of the Vatican Court of Chancery? from sins of omission to the grossest incest and the most diabolical murders? Has he never read how one Council would set at naught the decrees of another Council or of many other Councils? or how one infallible Pope has cursed another infallible Pope, and sometimes how these infallible Popes would be scientifically cursing each other at long range?

On page 6 Mr. Johnston says: "But no Protestant Church claims infallibility. And all together they can not possess a power which no single one of them possesses." Is that sentence according to the "analytical and logical methods" in which Mr. Johnston was trained? If he be correct, then it is also true that since one-fifth does not equal the whole, therefore five-fifths can not equal the whole! However, it is true that no Protestant Church claims infallibility—although the Protestant Episcopal Church (in which Mr. Johnston, I believed, was reared), the Baptist and the Campbellite Churches each claim to be "the only original and true church," to the exclusion of all the other sects and religious societies—neither do any of them concede to the Church of Rome its monstrous, absurd, and preposterous claims to be infallible, nor admit the blasphemous claims of Leo XIII to be God's vicegerent on earth.

Mr. Johnston is correct when he says that, "according to Protestant principles, there is no reason why every individual should not have his own peculiar creed." Why not? God's Word is for every creature. Liberty of conscience, freedom of thought, are among God's priceless gifts to the children of men. Papal Rome wrested it from men, and held human souls for centuries in a thralldom as iniquitous as the oppression of Pagan Rome. Imprisonment, the stake, fire, sword, and every torture which satanic inspiration could suggest were used to enslave manhood, debauch womanhood by the most cruel hierarchy the world has ever seen. God raised up Luther, Melancthon, Zwingli, Calvin, Knox, to strike the shackles from individuals and from nations, that his "people might go out free." Later on, when there was need, God raised up Wesley to revive a languid, if not dying, Protestantism. Just as to-day he is raising up a host of men to awaken all Protestantism to a knowledge of the encroachments of the Church of Rome, especially in these United States, where so many are ready to do the bidding of the Pope or of his ablegate, Mgr. Satolli, and to sacrifice citizenship to an allegiance claimed by a foreign power. He who fails to see the Spirit of God in the mighty Protestant Reformation, or in the Wesleyan Revival, would not be convinced though one rose from the dead.

On page 5 Mr. Johnston uses a sentence, which may be purely metaphysical, but which appears to me to be only "muddy-physical," as my friend, Sam Jones, would say: "To my mind the proposition is undeniable, or self-evident, that the divine truth is one and indivisible, and can make no compromise with error." But what is divine truth, Mr. Johnston fails to say or define. Divine truth is divine truth, I presume. A fact so self-evident needs no definition. But it reminds me of a preacher whom I once heard define, "conscience to be that faculty of the human soul which we term conscience." There is nothing like being clear in such matters. Nevertheless, our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ on one occasion said, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life," which I steadfastly believe. Then if by divine truth Mr. Johnston means our precious Redeemer, then I quite agree with him that divine truth is one and indivisible, and go beyond him in rejecting the dogma which he accepts in his pamphlet (when he recognizes a "striking analogy between the doctrine of the Real Presence in the Holy Eucharist and the divinity of our Lord"), and absolutely refusing to believe that each wafer put by the priest on the tongue of the communicant is transformed by the prayer of the priest (who has often been a drunkard, a libertine, and sometimes a murderer) into the body and soul, humanity and divinity of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ! There is a wide difference between credulity and faith.

From my careful perusal of the pamphlet, I am led to the conclusion that, notwithstanding Mr. Johnston's culture and literary taste, he was never well informed in church history or in the Bible. He had only "believed in God in a general way," and had no fixed religious opinions or convictions. He had always "admired the beauty and dignity of the ritual" of the Roman Church. Family or other influences were brought to bear upon him. Following his own unconscious inclinations, he only read one side of the argument, and quite forgot the old law maxim, Audi alteram partem, and also the facts of history, and reached a conclusion that all along he wished to reach. But he must excuse others from following him into the grasp of the ecclesiastical octopus. The argument of his pamphlet is not equal to those in many of his briefs before the Supreme Court. It is neither clear, logical, nor convincing. It is specious and fallacious; yet it indicates the thorough earnestness of the man and his complete devotion to the Church of Rome. His loyalty to that great organization can not be doubted. He is wholly on that side. Hence I can not but wonder what sort of an argument he would make before the Supreme Court of Mississippi should there ever come up for review the action of the Board of Trustees of the Meridian, Jackson, or McComb City public schools in refusing to permit the Bible to be read in the school-rooms, notwithstanding the provision of our State Constitution (which, I believe, they are sworn to support) that "The Holy Bible shall not be excluded from the public schools of this State." In Meridian they claim that, inasmuch as they never have had the Bible in the schools, therefore, it has not been excluded! In other words, you must get in before you can be shut out!

In the Living Present.

Mr. Balfour, M. P., recently said to a newspaper-man that Ministers of State and Parliament could not successfully carry on the government without the stimulant and wholesome criticism of the press. The newspaper had been of great benefit to him. In our country the newspaper is the uncrowned king.

France is carrying on a war of conquest in Madagascar. Though that island has a good and Protestant government, the restless Frank is bent on subjugation. The course assigned for the recourse to arms are supposed grievances of French merchants. Queen Ranavanola, of Madagascar, in the London Daily Telegraph, requests the prayers and sympathy of all Christian people in this time of deep trouble.

In view of the fact that George Gould is spoken of as possible successor to Senator Hill, of New York, an extract from Plutarch's Life of Pompey is apropos: "Two persons received from the people the name of Maximus, i. e., The Greatest: Valerius for reconciling the Senate and the people, and Fabius Rullus, because he put out of the Senate certain sons of freed slaves who had been admitted into it because of their wealth." Our Senate had been denominated Club of Millionaires.

Count Tolstoi, the Russian writer and dreamer, has published "The Four Gospels in One." In the preface he assures that he has harmonized the four gospels; but, in keeping with his vagaries, he has inserted much not found in the four books. He makes Christ say and do what suits his fancy, regardless of the original. The work is fantastic and sacrilegious.

Humanitarianism is not Christianity; but Christianity without humanitarianism is a misnomer. Piety and philanthropy should go hand in hand. As Dr. John Matthews used to say: "Visiting the unconverted masses, we should come with a loaf of bread in one hand and the Bible in the other."

W. T. Harris, U. S. Commissioner of Education, assures, that as employees those who enjoyed a common school education receive fifty per cent. higher wages than analphabetes; graduates of a high-school or college even hundred per cent. In other words: If an analphabete as wage-worker earns one dollar, the graduate of a common school earns a dollar and a half. If college-bred, two dollars. Eloquently expressive, indeed.

The Ottoman empire, Turkey, the national nuisance, would have disappeared from the map if the jealousy of the European powers did not keep it alive. Russia has the first claim on same, but England will never consent to said transfer. Austria, too, has a longing eye. France and Germany favor the aspirant from whom they expect greatest benefit. Thus the Armenian outrages and the Jeddah massacre remain unpolished.

Contentment in Life.

Not settling into sluggishness and inaction, but yet carrying a spirit of contentment to one's work that of itself begets hopefulness—this is one of the secrets of the successful life. Believing in present opportunity for usefulness, and doing the very best possible in present situations, even though obscurely stationed, may be accomplishing the most for the Master after all, and be affording self the most necessary and valuable discipline. And if there is to be a higher station, it were ignoble to fret under present limitations. If there is to be nobler life, it is possible only in loyal and faithful response to present opportunity. With Horace, "carpe diem," seize the day—use the present, and possess your soul in patience. You are, even where you are, a co-laborer with God. Commenting on patience, the United Presbyterian says: "Remember that labor is an ordinance of God, and you will be more patient with your tasks. Every man has his own assigned work to do. If we believe in an overruling Providence, we must believe that there is no accident about our allotments in life. If there is no accident about our allotments in life, we can glorify God in any station. Some stations may be higher than others, and some work may have to do directly with the interests of souls, but all are laborers together with God. The high-priest and the humblest Levite, the king and his armor-bearer, the teacher and the trader, all carry a divine commission. He who does the works of God, no matter what those works may be, is the servant of God."—Zion's Herald.

Satan's Own Devices.

I verily believe the devil has studied church architecture. How else can we explain the erection of costly churches with the windows (wind doors) placed so high that the Summer breeze is go over the heads of the sweltering congregations? Who but the aforesaid planned a church with large, handsome windows of stained glass, so constructed that they can not be opened, with here and there a small window that will let in a little air on a stifling Summer night? Who but he instigated an unwise young preacher, who had charge of a church last year that is still in debt, and that has been making pitiful appeals to the charitable, to further increase that debt by buying window shutters, and putting them up in such a way that they can not be thrown open on a hot night? This Summer I have preached in eight or ten churches with windows arranged or shuttered or curtained, according to the plans of his Satanic Majesty, seemingly with the evident design and intent to keep out God's fresh air. And to make matters worse, I often find an immense coal oil lamp hung low over the pulpit, so that the light can distress the preacher's eyes and the heat stupefy his brain. Who but the old gentleman already referred to is responsible for this state of things?—Rev. C. H. Briggs, D. D.

Americans are in danger of losing sight of the logical in their responsiveness to the ludicrous. The cartoon is made to do duty for the rostrum. The daily paper abounds in pictorial hits. Upon the platform burlesque is resorted to when one is worsted in debate. The funny story is employed to evade the force of strong reasoning. An audience is carried with the witty sally, or the merry retort, and seems to think the man who turns the laugh "on the other fellow" is the smarter one of the two, and has won the point. There is need for better discrimination. Sarcasm and witticism have their place and power, but logic is not to be set aside by a sneer or a laugh. Reason is the superior faculty, and is to be given chief recognition. A nation of thinkers is to be preferred to a nation of wits.—Richmond Advocate.

NOBLE DEEDS AND THOUGHTS.

Whene'er a noble deed is wrought,
Whene'er is spoken a noble thought,
Our hearts, in glad surprise,
To higher levels rise.
The tidal wave of deeper souls
Into our inmost being rolls,
And lifts us unawares
Out of all meaner cares.

Communications.

Bro. Hailey Agsis.

REJOINDER NO. 4.

(Concluded.)

So abhorrent to Bro. H. is the idea of one minister exercising authority over another that he is simple enough to ask, "Where is there anything like that in the New Testament?" And then, recollecting that something exactly like that was exercised by Paul over Timothy, he says: "Paul did send Timothy, but there is no indication that he claimed other authority than that of a teacher and minister by whom he had believed (and he had done so). Paul was an apostle under direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit; and even then he went under the appointment of a local church. Do you claim that your Bishops are under the direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit? . . . Or do you go by authority of a local church?" Again he says: "Where is your authority? You arrogate it to yourself; the people never voted it to you; God never gave it to you; you stole it from John Wesley." All this is based on the assumption that every form of church government, except that of Congregationalism or Independency, is utterly at variance with New Testament teachings. It may be well to examine a little further into this matter.

It has never been claimed by us that an episcopal form of government is prescribed in the New Testament to the exclusion of all others, but we do hold that it is more in harmony with the usage of the early church than Congregationalism. We believe this for two reasons:

1. It is impossible to derive authority from a body that does not exist. It is self-evident that before the New Testament churches were organized, all ecclesiastical authority was necessarily exercised by the ministry.

2. In the Book of Acts, which is mainly a record of the doings of the apostles, and in the Epistles, it is clear that the beginning of church history was in line with this idea. The apostles sent Peter and John to Samaria. (Acts viii, 14.) Philip baptized the eunuch without any authority from a local church. (Acts viii, 26-40.) Barnabas and Paul were sent out from Antioch, not by a local church, but by "certain prophets and teachers." (Acts xiii, 1-3.) When dissension arose at Antioch concerning circumcision, the question was decided, not by a local church, but by the apostles and elders at Jerusalem. (Acts xv, 6.) Paul and Barnabas went on their second missionary tour on their own motion, and not by direction of a local church. (Acts xv, 36.) When Paul was at Athens he sent a "commandment" to Silas and Timothens to come to him. (Acts xvii, 15.) Paul's movements were not directed by any local church. (Acts xix, 21; Acts xx, 16.) He appointed Timothy to Ephesus, and Titus to Crete, as we learn from the epistles bearing their names. He directed Titus "to ordain" (R. V., "appoint") "elders in every church." This was to be done on his own authority. Bro. H., in speaking of Paul's sending Timothy, says, 'Even then he was sent by a local church." The absence of proof is conspicuous.

In answer to all this Bro. H. would ask, "Do you claim that your Bishops are under the direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit?" It is just as pertinent to ask, Are your local churches "under direct inspiration of the Holy Spirit"? The above examples of ministerial authority are given to show that our church government is abundantly sanctioned by the usage of the early church. It was not necessary for the people to vote authority to our ministry; neither was it necessary to steal it from John Wesley. God put it upon us, and we bear it as we do the cross of Christ—for the sake of the kingdom of God.

Bro. H. hates Methodism with all his heart; and if he could banish it from the earth, he would be supremely happy. Our Bishops, elders, and deacons, he thinks, have too much authority; and if he could open our "long-blinded eyes," there would be a stampede for the Jordan, and the liquid grave would hide us from the frowns of the Almighty. According to him, our people are an ignorant set, hardly worth saving. He says: "You herd them about like cattle that belong to you, and they have no recourse but to leave you, and this you know they would do if they only understood what a system they have submitted to. You may preach to them the rankest heresy, or live a most immoral life, and the utmost they can do is to report you; and if the other preachers vote to excuse you, the Bishop may send you back to be their pastor, and they are helpless. Is this not so? Deny it if you will." I could just as correctly and appropriately say that if a Baptist minister chooses to preach heresy and to live an immoral life, and a majority of the church should vote to excuse him, the minority would be helpless. You might say they could withdraw; but suppose the majority were to refuse to grant them letters? All such writing is for buncombe.

There is nothing more effective in the propagation of the truth than truth itself. This lesson Bro. H. seems never to have learned, as the following quotations will testify: "But to the authority over these societies. The preacher in charge is their master. He . . . expels whom he pleases, . . . or marks off as he chooses. These societies . . . can not elect nor reject a single one of their officers. The preacher, or his elder or Bishop, appoints the class leaders, stewards, trustees, and nominates their Sunday-school superintendent and their church clerks, or clerks of the Church Conference. These may be removed by the preacher in charge if they do not suit him. . . . And the stewards, under an order from the Conference, can sell even their house in spite of all their protests." Every statement in the above quotation, except that the preacher in charge appoints the class leaders and nominates the Sunday-school superintendents, is absolutely false. He says our preachers not only choose their members, but "dismiss them at will; choose their officers and dismiss them when they please." How anyone claiming to be truthful can deliberately write and publish such statements, I have not the capacity to understand. But let us hear him still further: 'A man himself, though he feels called of God, can not preach till the Annual Conference says so; or a presiding elder or Bishop, till the Annual Conference meets. Did the Mississippi Conference at Meridian, last month, not refuse to allow six young men to become preachers, and assigned as a reason, No room? In the name of Christianity I ask: With immortal souls dying and going to hell, and six noble young men with their hearts fired with zeal to preach to dying sinners the way of eternal life, and the Annual Conference saying, 'No, you can not preach,' and yet you say you do not submit to unscriptural authority? What is this, then, I beg to know?" If you really wish to know, I will tell you. It is either deliberate falsehood, or an exhibition of nauseating ignorance.

The Annual Conference has no authority to say whether a man shall preach, or not. The Mississippi Conference did not "last month," or at any other time, 'refuse to allow six young men to become preachers." Up to the last General Conference the licensing of preachers was with the Quarterly Conference; now it is with the District Conference. The Annual Conference has no voice in the matter. It admits preachers into the traveling connection, but does not say whether men shall or shall not preach.

Bro. H. innocently asks: "Does not Bro. Carley know that when one joins the Conference he must complete a prescribed course of study of Methodist theology before he can be admitted into full connection?" Yes, he knows this very well. "They refused one for that reason at Meridian." It is done quite often. "Does he not know that they will never ordain him either deacon or elder until he has promised to obey his superiors?" Yes, he knows it. "And if he refuses to go where he is appointed, they expel him." No, they don't. "They did that at Meridian." No, they didn't. Such a one may be located, but not expelled.

Bro. H. says: "I have simply chosen at random from the material I have at hand. I have twice as much more." Of course; and what is not already at hand can be easily manufactured. He says he has been "severely criticised," and "boldly accused of falsehood." Well, I wonder if he expected all his misstatements to pass unnoticed. If a man wilfully or ignorantly perverts the truth, he must suffer the consequences of his own folly. L. CARLEY.

Official Correlation in Methodism.

Recent publications by both the secular and religious press has brought to the surface very important questions which will have to be settled sooner or later, or Zion will suffer. As usual, disputants have gone into extremes on both sides of the question.

The government of the M. E. Church, South, is a complicated form of government, having a variety of official grades. Among these officers there must be a well-adjusted relation, else there will be clashing and no end of confusion. Correlation seems to have been a prominent idea in the very genesis of the church.

EPISCOPAL AUTHORITY.

The Discipline of 1844 thus defined the 'duties" of a Bishop: "To travel throughout the connection at large; to oversee the temporal and spiritual business of our church." (Italics are my own.)

In 1858 the word "business" was superseded by the word "affairs." This change, whatever may have been the object of it, could have had but one effect, and that to enlarge the scope of episcopal prerogative. There are many "affairs" arising in our pastoral charges relating to the church, such as could never come up in the "business" of our recognized jurisprudence. In this form the law has continued up to the present. (See ¶ 107, 1894.) Thus the authority of the Bishop throughout the whole church—in all its districts and charges—over all its officers and members, in all its "affairs," is unmistakable.

THE POWER OF THE PRESIDING ELDERS.

The law of 1844 authorized the presiding elders "to take charge of all the elders and deacons in his district" in the absence of the Bishop.

No change has ever been made in this law, which in the least degree changes its meaning or its force. (¶ 110, 1894.)

So far the correlation of authority as between the Bishops and the presiding elders is clearly defined, but there is no definition of the authority of the preacher in charge, and hereby hangs the tale to which we have recently been listening.

Just here a little history will help us to appreciate the situation. From 1844 to 1894 the law conferring authority on the preacher in charge was very brief, and confined to receiving, trying, and expelling members "as the Discipline directs." At the time of the convening of the General Conference of 1894, the entire church was occupied with the question, What are we to do with the evangelists? There was a flood of remedies offered for each and every offensive aspect of that great question. Among other remedies offered was this, "Let the pastors take charge of them." To this it was objected that the pastors had no authority to take charge of an evangelist while holding a meeting in his charge. Moving from this point, it was proposed to so change the law of 1890 as to put the entire question of evangelists in the hands of the pastors. Paragraph 118, of 1890, became the base of operation, and the Committee on Revisal reported to the General Conference a change of the law by the addition of the words, "and to control the appointment of all services to be held in the churches of his charge." This, it was thought, would overcome the evils likely to grow out of an unauthorized, self-constituted evangelist transporting his tent, or securing court-houses, school-houses, halls, etc., in which to conduct his meetings without regard to the wishes of the pastor. However, when this simple change of the law was reported to the General Conference, some one thought he saw in it the occasion for serious conflict among our officials. I am not certain (as to the individual member), but I think Dr. Yates, of North Carolina, opposed the change on the ground that some preacher in charge might conceive the idea of taking charge of the presiding elder, or a Bishop, under such a law; that these officers held rank, each in the stead of the other—i. e., when the Bishop was present he had charge, and in his absence the presiding elder had charge, while in the absence of both the preacher in charge has charge.

These points were urged as a reason for an amendment to the proposed change by inserting after the word "and" the words, "in the absence of the presiding elder or Bishop."

To this amendment there were many objections, but the preponderance of argument was in favor of the amendment. Quarterly Conferences, District and Annual Conferences are held in pastoral charges, and it would surely be unwise to enact a law which would place these "services" at the whim of a pastor. Beside, the system of correlation would be incomplete without it—(1) The Bishop, (2) the presiding elder, (3) the preacher in charge. How this new law got into a new paragraph I can not tell; but that the object of it was to give pastors authority which they did not have, thereby enabling them to control the evangelistic movement, I do know. That this law—as other laws—is liable to be misused and abused is certainly true, but I fail to see how any presiding elder or Bishop can depend upon it for authority not before existing. From 1844 up to date each of these officers, according to his order, is supreme when present, and the words, "in the absence," etc., certainly imply a time when neither of these officials is present. Presence and "absence" are not technical terms. A Bishop is always present when not absent. When absent, he can not be present. His presence is corporeal. The man and the Bishop are all one with us. If he is in the bounds of A.'s charge, he can not be present in B.'s charge; and when he is not present, if the presiding elder be present, all the authority which the Bishop would have had he has. But his presence or absence is a matter of personal location. It may not be a quarterly meeting occasion, but if he is merely passing through a charge, he is present. If he has crossed the boundary going away, he is "absent." As soon as he is absent, all the authority which rested with him rests with the preacher in charge, and he may "control the appointment of all services to be held in his charge." All officers must have discretion, and if in the exercise of that discretion they go wrong, then let the proper tribunals determine the matter. Other laws do it, but ¶ 120 (1894) was never intended to give Bishops and presiding elders permanent control of "the services to be held" in a pastoral charge.

Referring back to the law of 1858, relating to the authority of the Bishops, and to the law of 1844, relating to the authority of presiding elders, it will be difficult to see or think of any "affairs" which a Bishop could not "oversee" when present, or anything among the preachers of which the presiding elders could not "take charge" when the Bishop was "absent." But before the enactment of ¶ 120, of 1894, the preacher in charge had no authority over any services held in "the churches in his charge," except such as he conducted himself. This law was enacted for the specific purpose of giving preachers in charge entire control of all services held in their charges except when a Bishop or presiding elder is actually present. Any other construction of it is outside of the intent of the law makers, as plainly expressed at the time the law was passed.

Sardis District Conference.

The twenty-fifth session of the District Conference of the Sardis district, North Mississippi Conference, was held at Pleasant Grove, Miss., May 23-26, 1895.

It was, indeed, an occasion well worthy a page of honor in the history of Southern Methodism in North Mississippi. From the commencement to the close it was a time of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The Spirit's presence and power was felt and acknowledged by each and everyone who attended its sessions. The preaching was of the purest and highest type, and was blessed of God to the spiritual comfort and uplift of all. It was manifest from deliverances that the preachers had been walking in close communion with God. The same spirit of unction love that consecrated the pulpit and made its utterances divinely imperial was seen and felt in all the deliberations and discussions on the Conference floor. Unanimity and spiritual fraternity characterized the entire session. A good brother of the local work said to the secretary: "If all the preachers in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, preach and work like you preachers of the Sardis district do, it will not take long to present this world as a trophy of redeeming grace at the feet of Jesus." Each succeeding service was better than the one going before, until Sunday evening during the love-feast an inundating wave of divine blessing filled the sanctuary.

"God came down our souls to greet,
And glory crowned the mercy-seat."

The reports from the charges evidence growth and development in all departments of Christian life and enterprise. Sunday-schools are more largely attended than heretofore. In some places where our old people have not attended the Sunday-school they are now engaging in this cause. We have more family altars, prayer meetings and Epworth Leagues, and they are doing more and better work. The Epworth League movement is receiving special attention just at this juncture. We are impressed that this feature of Methodism is soon to become, under the agency of the Holy Spirit, one of the most potent factors in the redemption of the race, and we are determined, by the blessing of God, that Methodism in the Sardis district shall furnish her part of this divine energy for the spiritual conquest and salvation of the world.

Finances are not as good as we desire, but better than last year.

Educational interests are being wisely provided for. The District Board of Education is fully organized, and in connection with it local Boards have been elected by the Quarterly Conferences in each pastoral charge. By this means we hope soon to have all our educational methods and forces so systematically organized and correlated that each public and private school in Methodist communities may have a Methodist teacher. This we are persuaded is not a sectarian spirit, but true loyalty and devotion to Christ and the church of which we are ministers and members. We are profoundly impressed that if the character and life of future Methodism are to measure up to the lofty standards of Christly purity and nobility taught both in the Word of God and in the theology of our church, and if her ministers and members are to be fully equipped for the great work of saving this world for Christ, our children and young people must be educated and qualified for this God-given mission under the influence and auspices of our own beloved Zion.

We came very near having this Conference all to ourselves. Our ubiquitous connectional brethren came well nigh losing, or breaking, the link that binds their destiny with ours. We had only two visitors. Dr. W. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps, and Rev. T. W. Lewis, pastor at Grenada, spent a few hours with us. Their visit was short, but a benediction to the Conference. Their speeches on Christian education will be long remembered. Dr. W. B. Murrah, with that stately elegance and classic diction of which he is the master, held us spellbound as he spoke in behalf of Millsaps College. He and his faculty are doing a great work for the boys of Mississippi. Bro. Lewis came as the representative of Grenada Collegiate Institute, and his mind and heart were surcharged with good news from her classic halls. Her interest will never suffer when in his hands. We feel more closely drawn to and identified with her by his coming.

The True Mark.

To be religious does not mean that we should try to look as though we were inspired by the Holy Ghost, or to give ourselves such airs as to intimate to the world that we are so absorbed with eternal things that whether we are in the body, or out of the body, we can not tell. Every paltry endeavor, whether it be a monk's cowl or a Quaker's hat, to seem dehumanized and denaturalized by religion, is offensive to good taste. As the Bible is printed in common type, which may be used afterward in the publication of a novel or a play-bill, and as the profoundest and most sacred speculations may be inscribed by a pen which has been used in summing up accounts, so we are to illustrate Christian truths in ordinary and every-day affairs, knowing that it is the message borne, and not the material used in its announcement, that is the important and sacred thing.—G. C. Lorimer.

Heaven is Home.

Heaven is home. There is no truer conception of Heaven than as the Father's house—the eternal home. Life away from heaven is at best a pilgrim life, and the end of that pilgrimage is rest at home. Every home-coming is, therefore, or ought to be, a foretaste of heaven. Two of the recent home-comers writing of their joy in being together at home, after an absence beyond the ocean, say, in recognition of this thought: "If home-coming here is so good, what must the great home-coming be when we see the face of Jesus, and know that we are safe with all our dear ones in our Father's home!"—Sunday-School Times.

Hon. Carroll D. Wright, the well-known statistician, recently stated that facts show that "for every dollar the people receive from the saloon, they pay out twenty-one."

It is only when to-morrow's burden is added to the burden of to-day that the weight is more than a man can bear.—George Macdonald.

P. AND H. M. S.

EDITORS.

Mrs. H. W. Foote, of North Miss. Conference.
Mrs. S. S. Cope, of Mississippi Conference.
Mrs. F. E. Russ, of Louisiana Conference.

The time is rapidly approaching when the Annual Conference session of the W. P. and H. M. Society will be held; so we feel it incumbent upon us to take "time by the forelock," and place this matter before our readers, and urge all auxiliaries to be "up and doing" in the matter of selecting delegates, providing for their transportation, and all other necessary details. We urge—nay, insist—upon a full attendance. Let us have a larger number of delegates at the session than ever before in the history of the organization. These meetings are seasons of refreshing and encouragement to all who attend. New thoughts and ideas are exchanged; new life and zeal infused into the flagging spirits of delegates from dead or dying auxiliaries—indeed, all are benefited by the attrition of minds coming together amid varied environments and circumstances.

We beseech you, sisters, in the name of Him for whom we are all laboring, to take active interest in all matters pertaining to our society, especially in things that may advance our cause, and get it more prominently before the people. Let us be "instant in well-doing," and "watching unto prayer," that we may continually advance all along the line, and so, in our lives, show forth our love for the lonely Nazarene, whose cause we have espoused. He had not where to lay his head. At least, let us provide resting-places for his disciples, that they may be the better prepared to wage war on sin, and carry the gospel unto all creatures.

We asked an old colored preacher the other day how his church was getting on, and his answer was: "Mighty poor, mighty poor, brudder." We ventured to ask the trouble, and he replied: "De 'Cieties, de 'Cieties. Dey is just drawin' all the fatness and marrow outen the body and bone of the blessed Lord's body. We can't do nuffin without de 'Ciety. Dar is the Lincum 'Ciety, wid Sister Jones an Brudder Brown to run it. Sister Williams mus' march right in front of de Daughters of Rebecca. Den dar is de Dorcases, de Marthas, de Daughters of Ham, and de Liberian Ladies." "Well, you have your brethren to help in church," we suggested. "No, sah. Dar am de Masons, de Odd Fellows, de Sons of Ham, and the Oklahoma Promis' Land Pilgrims. Why, brudder, by de time de brudders an' sisters pay all de dues and tend all de meetings, dere is nuffin left for Mount Pisgah Church but just de cob. De co'n has all been shelled off and frowed to de speckled chickens."—Bible Reader.

The truth of the old colored brother's assertion is patent. Too many societies very often detract from the general welfare of the church. We cite this only to entrench our position formerly taken, that all outside societies should merge into our connectional one, thus enabling all to turn their efforts into one channel, and, at the same time, comply with the disciplinary command to uphold all the ordinances of the church, one of which, and an extremely prominent one, is the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference, held its first annual district meeting at Okolona, Miss., May 23, 1895, the day preceding the district Conference; Mrs. Thames, vice-president, in the chair, assisted by Mrs. Shumaker, district secretary. The Scripture lesson was read by the presiding officer, followed by prayer by Rev. Bachman. Mrs. McDonnell, in behalf of the Okolona Auxiliary, extended a cordial welcome, responded to by Mrs. Parrott in a few well-chosen words. Bro. Thames then gave a short and very interesting talk on Woman's work, which abounded in words of encouragement, and made us feel that ours was a divine call to woman to put on the whole armor of God, and help to save the world for Christ. We then had a memorial service in memory of Mrs. Nannie D. Ward, one of our most honored and useful members. A touching memoir was read from Mrs. Dalton, of Aberdeen, followed by a loving tribute from Mrs. Ellie Elkin, who had known, loved, and worked with her in establishing this woman's missionary work in this district. Then followed talks by Bros. Thames, Bachman, and Sister Thames and Shumaker, which showed that she was a woman of wonderful power. She had the magnetic influence and silver tongue to sway the multitude, and in making a plea for the cause so near her heart she was almost irresistible, but God buries his workmen and carries on his work. Reports were then read from Aberdeen, Okolona, Tupelo, Houston, Verona and Tupelo, Amery. No report from McCool, Prairie, Smithville, and Strong. Papers were then read by Mrs. Elkin, Mrs. Thames, reviewing the great and good work accomplished already; showing that woman had done, was doing, and could do work that man could not, that under her gentle and benign influence the homes of the heathen had been entered, and that God had honored and blessed her work that day for discussing whether she should help to save the world, or not, was passed; and while the cry used to be "Give us men and money to save the heathen," it was now, "Give us women and money to help." We then had a short praise service, conducted by Sister Parrott; the most precious ever witnessed. The hour for the juvenile society had arrived, and they were welcomed by an excellent address by the president of the Mamie Band, Miss Sue Ella Haley, responded to by Miss Mary Lowe, of Verona, Pearl Gatherers. Reports from the different societies in the district showed these young people enthusiastic in the cause, and we expect some good workers developed from their ranks. Excellent papers were read by Miss Lowe, of Verona, and Mrs. Murphy of Okolona, on "How to Interest the Young People in Mission Work;" a nice recitation by a band of little girls from Okolona; a characteristic, common-sense talk on the importance of the work by Dr. Sullivan; an earnest, heart-searching plea for our foreign fields by Sister Shumaker, closed the meeting never to be forgotten by the Woman's Missionary Society of the Aberdeen district.

Delhi District Conference of the Louisiana Conference.

The Delhi District Conference met in the quiet little town of Oak Ridge, La., on Thursday, May 30, with Presiding Elder B. F. White in the chair. There was a fairly good attendance of the preachers and lay delegates, and they all seemed to take a lively interest in the proceedings of the Conference.

A communication was received from Rev. W. C. Black, of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, which showed the paper to be in a much healthier condition than for some years past. Rev. J. F. Scurlock, colporteur of the Louisiana Conference, was present and represented the paper before the Conference.

Miss Grace Burbank, of the Tchoupitoulas Mission, New Orleans, was present in the interest of Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society and made a stirring talk, telling what was being done and what the objects of the society were. Only two societies were reported in the district, and they seem to be doing good work.

Bro. Akin reports that he has no organization of the W. P. and H. M. Society; but that he has a very superior Ladies' Pastoral Aid Society of one member.

A letter was received from Rev. J. A. Parker, secretary of the Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, urging the brethren to more diligent effort in the cause of home missions.

Bros. H. W. Knickerbocker, B. F. White and R. A. Davis made stirring speeches setting forth the needs of South Louisiana as a mission field.

Bros. E. N. Evans, Samuel Whited and J. B. Riley were appointed a committee on Temperance. A whole session was devoted to this subject and some good talks were made by the brethren. Bro. B. F. White spoke on prohibition in his district, and Bro. L. Upton of the Relation of the Public School to the Liquor Traffic. The report of the committee will appear later.)

The brethren reported good Sunday-schools all over the district, and the Children's Day collection largely in excess of last year, and about one-half the charges are yet to have their celebrations. West Monroe leads the district so far with a collection of $22. The spiritual condition of the churches was reported to be fairly good. Some charges have been blessed with gracious revivals.

Bro. E. N. Evans, of Monroe, reported that he expects soon to build a new church to cost $15,000; $10,000 of which he has pledged. He will also build a beautiful two-story parsonage. Bro. I. T. Reames, of Rayville circuit, started to work on a neat $1,000 church near Charlieville, on Boeuf river. Both of these churches, it is hoped, will be completed before Conference. Bro. Knickerbooker expects to make extensive repairs on the Lake Providence parsonage soon. Several of the other brethren are hard at work during the same line.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: Samuel Whited, Dr. A. S. Helmick, L. L. Upton, and L. G. Johnson. Alternates—E. E. Riggs and J. M. Stafford.

Bro. Eli E. Riggs was licensed to preach, and was also recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

Delhi was selected as the place where the next session of the Conference will be held.

Resolutions of thanks were passed, expressing to the good people of Oak Ridge our hearty appreciation of their many kindnesses.

WM. G. EVANS, Sec'y.

Children's Day, Vicksburg.

A congregation so large that many were unable to gain admission assembled at the Crawford Street M. E. Church, last Sunday evening, to participate in the services appropriate to Children's Day. The young people of the church were, of course, principally in evidence, but their elders were present in great numbers also, and evidently heartily enjoyed the exercises. The programme was most interesting, the hymns by the fresh young voices only less melodious than the notes of the birds, and the recitations were artlessly and gracefully delivered. The auditorium of the church had been elaborately dressed with flowers and evergreens in honor of the day by Mr. Frank Edwards, assisted by the ladies of the congregation. Beautiful wreaths hung on the walls, tropical foliage lent variety to the picture, and the great chandelier in the centre was festooned with garlands of cedar, entwined with roses. The decorations of the choir, gallery and altar-rail, however, were the crowning glory of the entire design. In these the snowy whiteness of the magnolia contrasted with its dark green leaves, and with the verdure of garlands of ivy, and smilax, starred with pink and yellow roses. The artistic effect is rarely paralleled in church decoration, but it was heightened by a large white cross, reared on high, and by the banners and mottoes that surrounded its pedestal. So greatly was the design admired that it has been photographed, and thus its memory will be perpetuated long after the young celebrants have taken the place of their seniors in gazing with fond, admiring eyes on such another celebration in days to come.—Commercial Herald.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Camden, Miss., June 3: "Report from Camden circuit for the month of May: Pastoral visits made, 20; sermons preached, 8; miles traveled, 517; children baptized, 3; adults baptized, 4; 3 renewals to NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE; 20 new subscribers to Epworth Era; 1 Epworth League organized."

Rev. R. M. Blocker, Jeanerette, La.: "At the close of our recent revival meeting at Jeanerette we received into the church a convert from the Roman Catholic Church, and the Quarterly Conference has recommended him for license to preach. His name is Paul S. Zwicky. He was sent over from Switzerland as a missionary. He can preach in French, German and Italian. He delivered a sermon in our church last week that would have done credit to any pulpit in Louisiana. If he holds out all right, he is the man we need. God bless him."

Rev. E. G. Kilgore, Denton, Texas, May 29: "I have just closed a two weeks' meeting with Rev. Ben H. Bounds at Bridgeport, Texas, where the Lord gave us a great victory. About one hundred conversions and nearly that many additions to the churches. Bridgeport is a mining town, and was very much in need of a work like this. They are many boys there away from home influences and friends, and many of them have been led into all kinds of wickedness. Thank God they now rejoice in hope of eternal life. I am now in a meeting here with prospects of victory ahead. Rev. J. F. Pierce is our pastor here, and is much loved. Pray for us."

Rev. W. B. Van Valkenburgh, P. C., Cameron, La.: "We are again at the front. On Sunday, May 19, the citizens of Leesburg assembled at the court-house (our only place of worship) to see what our children can do. The result can only be appreciated by those who were there. The children did their part well. 'The Methodist Army Corps,' led by the 'standard bearer,' led the juvenile army of the Lord Jesus Christ on to victory. (As this is the first Children's Day service observed by this congregation, we have reasons to feel proud.) The four bright colored banners carried by the army, accompanied by rosettes of three colors, one color for each division, helped to inspire the warriors, and then when the 'collection girls' reported four dollars and fifty-five cents we felt glad."

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, Binnsville, Miss., June 5: "As the roads harden and the fields luxuriate, this prairie region assumes an appearance that is beautiful in contrast with the all-absorbing mud, which seemed to take the country in Winter and Spring. There were six preaching-places on the circuit last year, but two of these are now in another charge, leaving Binnsville, Scooba, Old Scooba, and Wahalak. My stewards have, with diligence, kept us on a cash basis. We owe no man anything. Most, if not all, of the Conference claimants' money reported for Meridian district the first quarter was from Binnsville circuit. The missionary assessment is now being collected. The Binnsville Children's Day exercises were held the first Sabbath of May, exactly according to the program, and they were a great success. The Scooba Sunday-school is just being organized, with a new organ in our new church. Prof. L. L. Vann has been re-elected president of the school here for the fourth time."

Rev. Amos Kendall, P. C.: "On the first day of May we began a meeting in Aberdeen, Miss., which was continued for more than two weeks, resulting in great spiritual benefits to Christians and four valuable additions to the church. We have seldom been in meetings of greater power. From the first morning service to the last the Spirit's presence was manifested. Revs. J. A. Bowen and T. B. Malone, of the North Mississippi Conference, did most of the preaching, and such preaching it was—all that could have been desired, plain, pointed, practical. Revs. D. L. Cogdell, J. M. Barnes, W. D. Wendell and S. M. Thames, P. E., were with us and did efficient work in different ways and were a blessing to the church and the community. The Aberdeen station is in good condition. The Sunday-school is larger than ever before. The assessment in full for foreign missions; $200 has already been sent to the treasurer. Congregations are large. The prayer meetings, of which there are three, are well attended and profitable. And our Epworth League is promising. We thank God and take courage."

Rev. C. McDonald, P. E., Forest, Miss.: "We held the second Quarterly Conference for Homewood circuit at Independence Church, June 1, 2. One joined the church and one infant was baptized. The child baptized was the sixth that I baptized for Rev. C. C. Griffin and wife, having received the parents in the church when they were young and also married them. I preached my first sermon at Independence in October, 1857. Only a few persons are here that were here then. It was pleasant to visit again this church, and realize that there is a deep spirituality abiding. Rev. R. A. Sibley, the preacher in charge, is working as best he can for a man of his age. The work in the district is progressing very well. The preachers report large congregations with increasing interest in church affairs. We are preparing for our District Conference at Steen's Creek, June 28 30, with the Preachers' Institute and Sunday-school Conference on June 26 27. We baptized a number of children at our quarterly meetings. Some of we preachers have been highly honored by children being named for us. I baptized two in the last month named for me, and one named for Bro. Carley. There is one named for Bro. Rayner on the Homewood circuit. It is grateful to us to be thus kindly and affectionately remembered. Please come to our District Conference."

CHILDREN'S DAY.

We had a delightful Children's Day service at Wesley Chapel, Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss., last Sunday one week. The program was carried out nicely. The children were well trained and did their best; and the people were delighted. We then took a nice collection amounting to $12.90 net, after paying for banners $10, making, with $12 05 net raised at Oak Ridge, $22.05. What work will do better? Then we had a sumptuous dinner of the very best the county affords, and you may be sure we did our duty there also. Then after dinner we had some very fine recitations by Misses Bessie Hamberlin, Gertrude Smith, and Annie Lee. Also very entertaining addresses by Mr. McGuire, editor Yazoo City Herald, and Dr. F. Carruthers, of Midway, Yazoo county, Miss. Many thanks to the brethren and also to Prof. and Mrs. Gildart for valuable services rendered. The music as rendered by the choir was delightful.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began I was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism, I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have a letter thanking me for recommending Hurtful Liberalism.

Like the tides of old ocean, the sea of humanity restlessly swings from one extreme to the other. A few decades ago conservatism in Church and State was the rule. Now innovation after innovation is proposed until it looks as if nothing is safe from the hands of the iconoclasts. In no previous age has mankind enjoyed such large measure of liberty in speech and action. This spirit of freedom so widely diffused is one of the results of our blessed Christianity. No place is there in the teachings of Christ for intolerance and bigotry. "Ye shall know the truth," says the Master, "and the truth shall make you free."

Out of this very freedom, however, arises a danger. It is that of viewing the various forms of Christianity with a complacent air, under the supposition that all are alike good. Under the guise of pious liberalism the heretical notion has obtained credence among many Protestant Christians that one denomination is about as good as another, and that, after all, it makes little difference what a man believes, so his life is right. Such a notion is born of weak convictions and shallow thinking.

As to the connection between life and belief, we maintain that no man's life will rise above the level of his creed. From the religious point of view it might seem that character is the essential thing; the nature of a man's belief a matter of small moment. But, in reality, the latter is of prime importance. Faith is to human action what the rudder is to the ship. If it is wrongly directed, disaster is sure to result. As a man believes, so will his life be. What father would be willing to trust his daughter to the protection of a man who sees no harm in illicit love? What merchant would dare to intrust his goods to the care of a fellow who regards the Eighth Commandment as binding only when he is under surveillance?

There is hardly a saloon keeper in the land but will declare he sees no harm in the liquor business. Men will drink intoxicants, he argues. Why should he not sell them? Why is it that in our large cities we have so many Sabbath-breakers? Why so much talk of socialism? Why is our country so often shamed by exhibitions of mob violence? Is it not because men's consciences are warped, and their convictions unsound? There is no little truth in the saying that "an infidel would be guilty of any crime, if he were inclined to it." It would be absurd to say that men always act in accordance with their convictions or that they all live up to their belief. We may be sure, however, that so long as man's belief is wrong, his life will never be right. Christian character, then, is shaped in accordance with the nature of the creed accepted by each man or woman. The members of the several religious denominations exhibit characteristics that are the result of the particular tenets held and practiced. Judging by the teaching of certain churches, we naturally expect the members of the same to be lacking in spirituality. Nor are we disappointed. People of shallow convictions never originate mighty movements nor display an aggressive spirit.

To hear Protestants, and, above all, Methodists say that "one church is about as good as another" is really painful, not to say disgusting. True it is that there are some good people in all the churches, but this is by no means admitting that all denominations stand alike for a pure form of Christianity. Every church member ought to feel not only that the church to which he belongs stands for something, but that it best represents the teachings of the New Testament. Unless he thus believes he can not be a sincere Christian, neither will his religious life be likely to impress others. To feel thus is not to be a bigot, but, on the contrary, is essential to religious activity. Half-way Methodists are never the ones who labor zealously in God's kingdom. A man is none the less a Christian for being a loyal Methodist. Nay, the more loyal he is the more he will advance the cause of Christ. Nothing is plainer than that the work of evangelizing the world must be done along denominational lines.

When we study the history of Methodism, and consider what she has done and is doing for fallen humanity, when we think of her vast army of itinerants who go wherever sent, of her glorious missionary enterprises, of her numerous colleges and universities, of her hospitals, orphan asylums, and other benevolent institutions, we can not help rejoicing that we belong to a denomination that has caught so much of the spirit of the Master. What more fitting definition of Methodism could have been given than that it is "Christianity in earnest." Little patience have we with so-called Methodists whose attachment to their church is measured by musical attractions, the popularity of the pastor, or by the local social position of her members.

What shall we say of the loyalty of those who will work enthusiastically in outside organizations, as the Y. M. C. A., or the Christian Endeavor Society, attending conventions, holding meetings, etc., but who can't be depended upon for such work in their own church? In some instances Methodist laymen in good standing give one or two nights every week to clubs and secret orders, but can't (?) find time to attend prayer meetings. Some Methodists have no more self-respect or regard for the church than to ape other denominations. Lack of loyalty to Methodism is largely due to weak convictions and ignorance of Methodist history and doctrines. The Epworth League is destined to do a grand work in the way of educating the young people of the church as to what Methodism is, and why we should stand by her interests. Indifference will thus be changed to enthusiastic devotion. If Roman Catholic parents were half as lax as most Protestants are in the religious instruction of their children, Catholicism would soon be on the wane. Let every Methodist be true to his vows.

Asking Amiss.

Complaint is often made by professing Christians that their prayers are not answered; and this complaint is often made in a querulous tone as if God had proved unfaithful to his promises. In many such cases self-examination, in the light of the divine Word, will demonstrate the fact that the fault is not with God, but with the petitioner himself. "Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss that ye may consume it upon your lusts." This passage strikes the key-note of the situation. Selfishness stands in the way. Men do not receive answers to their prayers because their prayers are vitiated by selfish motives. They pray for universal prosperity, because of the personal enjoyment or aggrandizement that is to come from it. He who thus prays asks "amiss." One who professes to be a disciple of Jesus of Nazareth should desire wealth, not solely, or even chiefly, for purposes of personal gratification, but as an instrument for the glory of God and the betterment of humanity. He who thus prays puts himself in line with the agencies of grace, and thus removes a great obstacle to the answer of his prayers. With reference to temporal blessings, however, it should be borne in mind that prayer must not be used as a substitute for wisely directed effort. The man who prays for his daily bread, and sits with folded hands waiting for his prayers to be answered, will go hungry. It should also be remembered that with reference to temporal blessings God has not promised an unconditional answer. Were that the case, Christians would all be rich; all would be healthful, etc. Here God holds the reins in his own hands. Perfect equality as to temporal condition is not his plan for fallen humanity.

Again. Men may ask amiss, not only for temporal, but also for spiritual blessings. Prayer for spiritual blessings may be grounded in selfishness. Many a man has prayed long and earnestly to be elevated to some Hermon height in spiritual life without any purpose beyond his own personal enjoyment. Transfiguration experiences should not be an end in themselves, but a means to an end. Celestial raptures are to be succeeded by the prosaic work of casting out devils. Reading the Scriptures, communion with God in prayer, and, in short, devotional exercises of every kind should always be regarded, not as an end in themselves, but as a means of fitting us for working more successfully in some department of the Lord's vineyard. He who gets this conception of the religious life, and prays earnestly for light and peace and joy and strength, not for his own sake alone, but in order that he may be better fitted for serving God by serving humanity, will receive the enduement of power which he seeks.

"The Monk and the Prince."

From Bishop Haygood's new book, "The Monk and the Prince," we quote as follows:

Many of the troubles that beset preachers — of a sort that often destroy their usefulness and break down their inner character — come of overmuch anxiety about sustaining themselves. Study, to find the truth in God's great book —the Holy Bible, his works and his providence—does not, when done with reasonable moderation, wear out men's nerves; study to find something to say that will merely content, or please their hearers, and sustain their reputation — this is a microbe that kills . . . Many admirable men are tortured with embarrassment; not always because they are timid, but often because they fear the criticism of the audience. Why should they who have God's truth to speak be afraid of any human being—however exalted or learned—or of ten thousand people? Not a little, we must believe, of the over-anxiety of some truly good men comes of the sort of selfishness that keeps one's mind more on his relation to an occasion than on the truth itself.

Denunciation is easy. With gifts and practice one can be eloquent in denunciation with little need of study or prayer. History, from ancient days, makes this plain. Denouncing men nearly broke the heart of the divine Galilean. Yet, alas! there have been preachers who seemed to have much pleasure in bitter, relentless speech, without giving more evidence of zeal for souls than others who could, in the spirit of Christ, faithfully reprove sin without anger, or the language of mere abuse. . . . When Savonarola was denouncing right and left with the air of one who said, "I, even I only, am left," he was mistaken. He had little capacity for seeing any goodness that was not going his way. Alarmists, sensational alerts and panic-hunters are always in danger at this point.

With the preaching Savonarola did he could not win sinners, nor feed saints; he denounced. Alas for him! he seemed to have acquired fondness for such speaking exercises. The fate that follows all of his temper and method overtook him. At last he could not preach in any other mode.

It is said of a great violinist that he did play a tune on one string of his fiddle; but the string broke, and playing was done. It is conceivable that a musician of gifts might play one tune till he could play no other. It is certainly true of preachers. They may preach on one theme and in one tone till they can preach on no other theme and in no other tone. This is bad enough for them; but what of the hearers? They reach the point where they can not hear even that preaching. Is it not possible that the natural ear, condemned to hear one tone every instant, would at last grow deaf to that? It would be a mercy to the victim of harsh monotony. . . . No sort of speaking demands of the speaker in order that he may be fluent and seemingly vigorous, perhaps very eloquent, so little knowledge, study, prayer, or high character, as simple denunciation. It requires no learning. It requires no habit of careful thinking. Prayer may not only be dispensed with; prayer is not even helpful for such speaking as this. . . . When one begins to think that the universe—to say nothing of its Maker and Ruler—can not get on without him, he is in a bad way, mentally and spiritually. It is lunacy, or egotism, so great that it unbalances the brain as surely as insanity itself. When a ruler concedes that the country depends upon him, he is going to make a blunder; when a preacher deludes himself into the notion that the church depends upon him, he is going to make a fool of himself, and when he concludes that God needs him more than he needs any other honest and religious man, he is going to backslide, or go deranged.

Chaplain McCabe to Colonel Ingersoll.

Chaplain McCabe, passing through Bangor, Maine, recently, seeing announcements that Colonel Ingersoll was to lecture on the Bible, went to the Daily News office and wrote him this message:

DEAR COLONEL: While you have been lecturing against the Bible, the Methodists have built ten thousand new churches in this country. All other denominations have built ten thousand more at least. Meanwhile you have not overthrown the humblest altar upon the furthorest frontiers of this Republic.

In thirty years the Methodist Episcopal Church has increased its membership from nine hundred thousand to twenty-eight hundred thousand, and her church and school property has increased one hundred and twenty-five millions of dollars. Never were we so successful as now. In heathen lands orphanages and hospitals and asylums for children, for the sick, for the aged and the insane, spring up like magic. Thirty-five years ago we had but one convert in all the heathen world. Now we have 135,000 converts in foreign lands, and they give over $300,000 a year to propagate the faith.

Come and join the Methodists, Robert! Stranger things than that have happened. Saul of Tarsus joined the Christians. He built up the faith he sought so vainly to destroy. Come and do the same. We are praying for your conversion. Take your Bible. Read the Sermon on the Mount. Think what a world this would be if its teachings were universally obeyed! Meantime look out for your hammer. The seal of the Huguenots had on it a representation of an anvil, surrounded by broken hammers, and this legend:

"Hammer away, ye hostile hands;
Your hammers break, God's anvil stands."

BOOKS.

STORY OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES; or, History of the War for Southern Independence, embracing a Brief but Comprehensive Sketch of the early settlement of the country, trouble with the Indians, the French, Revolutionary and Mexican Wars, and a full, complete and graphic account of the great four years' war between the North and the South, its causes, effects, etc. By Joseph T. Derry, of Georgia, with an Introduction by Gen. Clement A. Evans, of Georgia. Suited to all those who wish an interesting, instructive and true account of the War for Southern Independence, but designed especially for the boys and girls of the South. Beautifully illustrated. Over 130 fine engravings. Richmond, Va.: B. F. Johnson Publishing Co.

The above is a transcript of the title page of a book just from the press. Mechanically, the work is a fine specimen of the book-maker's art. The paper, typography and binding are superb. The engravings also are excellent. The work is an octavo of four hundred and forty-eight pages. The author's style is clear, concise and forcible, admirably adapted to a work of this character. The author is not a novice in literature, having published some years since a school history of the United States which has been extensively used. In the preface the author says, "Great pains have been taken to give the facts accurately." Knowing Prof. Derry as we do, having been his pastor during the year 1893, we can vouch for the truth of this statement. This is in exact keeping with the character of the man. No one who knows Prof. Derry would believe him capable of misrepresentation, or of a lack of proper effort to be accurate in all his statements. This work is written from a Southern standpoint, and does justice to the aims and motives of the boys in grey as well as those in blue—a thing which can not be said of many of the histories that have found their way into the homes and schools of the South. We predict for it an extensive sale. The author has filled a chair in Wesleyan Female College for many years.

The problem of "hard times" will be solved when the workingmen of America boycott the saloon and stop drinking liquor. About $400,000,000 a year goes into the saloon from the hard-earned wages of workmen. This money, turned into the channels of industry and commerce, would bring comfort and happiness and plenty to millions of households.—National Temperance Advocate.

One writer says: "When I was a boy, I heard a local preacher in Tennessee declare: 'The church is degenerating. I fear we are backsliding. We are growing colder and colder, the church is dead.' Yes; and I have heard the same thing for fifty years; but the church of to-day is the most active and successfully working corpse I ever saw or read of. Religious people are not perfect, and they have need of improvement, but they are a long way ahead of those I saw in my boyhood."—Florida Advocate.

If anyone can show from the voluminous writings of higher criticism the least manifestation of concern for the salvation of souls, or the attempt to convince men of their sin and need, or the setting forth of the blood of Christ as the price paid for redemption, or the necessity of the new birth by the Holy Spirit, or advice to the Christian how to live, or a word of comfort to the bereaved, or of hope to the sorrowing, or assurance of eternal life and a blessed resurrection and glorious immortality to the dying, he is entitled to a good reward.—Truth.

Rev. Robert Parvin, of the Louisiana Conference, died at Gibsland, La., on the fourth, after an illness of about three weeks. Bro. Parvin was one of the pioneers of Methodism in the Southwest, having been actively engaged in the itinerant ministry more than forty-five years. He had preached in every parish in Louisiana, and in nearly every county in Southern Arkansas, and had conducted about eighty camp meetings. He was a man of admirable spirit, and was an exceedingly unique and original character. A suitable memoir will doubtless appear in due time.

The Huntsville (Ala.) Female College, having been burned several months since, the president, Dr. A. P. Jones, has decided that instead of rebuilding at Huntsville, he will remove the institution to Gadsden. He has purchased the Belleview Hotel, on Lookout Mountain (not the Chattanooga Lookout), and will begin operations there in the Fall. The Alabama Advocate says: "A more eligible and beautiful site for such an enterprise is not to be found, perhaps, within the limits of Alabama. The building is a beautiful one, and, under the practical eye of Dr. Jones, will soon be adapted to all the demands of such an institution."

To those who clamor so loudly for the repeal of our Sunday observance laws, which they denounce as an anachronic survival of old Puritan days, the report just issued by the Sabbath League Association of France should serve as a lesson. From the days of Emperor Charlemagne down to [illegible] statutes have figured in the French codes prohibiting, under severe penalties, labor of any kind on Sundays, even the Revolutionary Government of a hundred years ago, which substituted the worship of the Goddess of Reason in the place of Christianity, made it a point of prescribing by law one day of rest in the week. Fifteen years ago the free-thinking element in the National Legislature succeeded in obtaining the repeal of all legislation in connection with the matter, declaring it no longer in keeping with the enlightened and liberal spirit of the present age. Yet to-day these same men figure prominently in the ranks of that Sabbath League, which has been formed with the object of securing the re-enactment of the laws providing for the observance of Sunday. The experience of the last fifteen years has furnished to them, as well as to the many eminent statesmen, politicians and economists of every shade and creed who belong to the association, adequate proof that the removal of these statutes from the Code was a mistake and that a legal day of rest in the week is a necessity to every people, be it infidel or Christian.—New York Tribune.

Centenary Commencement.

The commencement at Centenary this year was a fine success from start to finish. We had two good sermons to begin with—one by Dr. Featherston, and the other by Bro. Frank Parker. The exercises were of an interesting character, and the audience large and appreciative.

One of the principal features of the occasion was the reunion of the class of 1855, and Judge Ellis was "in the vein" addressing his old class-mates. Quite a number of the alumni were present, and they have taken hold and intend to do something for us. We sent out six bright young fellows to help make the world better.

As I have intimation that another pen will give details, I will just say to Louisiana Methodists that Centenary has bright prospects.

Rev. Jas. D. Parker.

The following are the resolutions of Wayne Memorial Quarterly Conference upon the death of Rev. Jas. D. Parker:

The first Quarterly Conference for the current year, held March 12, ordered a brief memorial upon the death of our late lamented and valuable member.

Whereas, Since the last meeting of this body it has pleased God to call from our midst Rev. Jas. D. Parker, who had been for many years a valuable and devoted official member of this church;

Therefore we look upon the death of Bro. Parker as a great loss to our church and community, and that we, as former co-laborers with him, do express our sense of personal loss in the departure of a brother beloved.

Finally, that we shall endeavor to imitate his godly example and follow him as he followed Christ.

Natchez District Conference.

The Natchez District Conference will be held in Gloster, June 27-30. We will gladly welcome a full attendance. We urge you to give immediate attention to the following:

1. Preachers in charge, please let me know who of your delegates you think will attend.

2. Local preachers who expect to attend please notify me.

3. Any others who will be in attendance, and desire to be provided for, please let me know.

4. Any and all please notify us by what conveyance you will come, and, as nearly as possible, time of arrival. Let all come to remain over Sunday.

5. With reference to "second-blessing sanctification" this charge, pro and con, in public and in private, with Bible in hand and by the light of the Holy Spirit, prefers to take care of itself. Let all come in the Spirit of the Master, both to bring a blessing to the community and to carry one away.

Vicksburg District Conference.

Let all the brethren who expect to attend the Vicksburg District Conference send me their names immediately. It is important that we know how many will come via "Little J." R. R. Those in charge of the hack line have agreed to bring you from Raymond to Clinton (your nearest and quickest route) for two-thirds the regular fare. This proposition holds good for return trip.

Brethren, we urge you to give us the desired information immediately and save trouble. We suggest that those who come via "Little J." R. R. be at Raymond, Wednesday evening, June 26, and you will have conveyance to Clinton the same evening.

A Good Appetite

Always accompanies good health, and an absence of appetite is an indication of something wrong. The universal testimony given by those who have used Hood's Sarsaparilla, as to its great merits in restoring and sharpening the appetite, in promoting healthy action of the digestive organs, and as a purifier of the blood, constitutes the strongest recommendation that can be urged for any medicine.

Belhaven College Commencement.

When Belhaven College buildings burned, some months ago, many feared that this youngest of the sisterhood of schools for women in our State would never recover from the disaster. Those who felt thus, however, did not properly estimate two things—the pluck and energy of its president and the fast hold the college had taken upon the favor and confidence of the Jackson public. If any doubt still existed upon the subject, it was set at rest by the closing exercises and their enthusiastic reception by our people.

The annual sermon, preached by Bishop Galloway in the First Methodist Church, was a model of excellence and adaptation. The Bishop has a fine eye for a good text, and made no misteke in selecting for this occasion Philippians iv, 8. For more than an hour he spoke with great force and beauty of the connection between high thought and holy living, the elevating power of habitual meditation upon the best things in nature and grace, and the heights of Christian character attainable by one thoroughly in love with Christ and filled with the enthusiasm of humanity as it was found in him. It was a commencement sermon with a blessing in it.

The commencement exercises proper were held in the Opera House, Monday morning, in the presence of a large and highly appreciative audience. Bro. A. F. Watkins opened with prayer. A delightful program followed in which the pupils taking part made good proof that they had been trained throughout the session, not crammed for a display. Three young ladies graduated, Misses Mabel Fisher and Bettie Russell, of Mississippi, and Miss Helen Cooper, of Louisiana, who read a bright, sensible essay written by herself on The Coming Individual. The feature of the occasion, however, was the annual address by Capt. T. A. McWillie on Shakespeare: His Sovereign and his Heroines. The range of topics discussed at commencement, and especially those of female schools, has been painfully limited, and not a few have longed for the time when the average popular orator, with a lame adaptation of his last campaign speech or his tedious platitudes about woman's sphere should give place to a speaker whose address would be educative as well as entertaining. Mr. McWillie upon this occasion struck the key-note of the new departure. A scholar himself, an enthusiastic student of the great master of the drama, he led his audience in a study especially of the women of Shakespeare, which made it a privilege to hear him. It was, indeed, an address that would bear publication both for its literary merit and for the assurance it gave that the speaker could make another quite as good when called upon. A graceful tribute to the influence of Belhaven College in the recent renaissance of letters in our capital city was received with spirited applause.

Following the address, three medals were presented by Bishop Galloway: one for scholarship to Miss Meddie Robinson, of Rankin county; one for vocal music to Miss Eva Lowther, of Louisiana, and one for instrumental music to Miss Jessie McNair, of Brookhaven.

The baccalaureate address by President Fitzhugh was, as usual, brief, wise, and to the point.

The grand concert, on Monday night, was a success more marked because of the difficulties under which the school has been conducted since the fire. That such results could be secured under the circumstances speaks loudly for the discipline of the school, the confidence of its patrons and the loyalty of both teachers and pupils. The selections in music were universally admired, and the execution such as to win the enthusiastic commendation of a music-loving and highly critical audience. The exercises in elocution and dramatic action reflected the highest credit upon that department of the college work. An adaptation and arrangement of Julius Cæsar made by Miss Townsend, the modest and gifted teacher of elocution and physical culture, was a triumph of successful training.

The enthusiasm of the audience reached its height when President Fitzhugh announced that the foundations of the new Belhaven building were already laid, and that no pains or expense would be spared to make the future of the college fulfill every promise of the past.

The need of a school for the higher instruction of young ladies has been felt for many years in Jackson, and its establishment only a question of time. That the want has been met, and under such happy auspices, is cause of congratulation to the friends of Christian education in Mississippi and Louisiana. X.

Should Women Be Rich?

That question is about as sensible as to ask, Should women breathe? of course, they should be rich, and especially in health. Prohibition in Jackson.

The following from Bro. Watkins will be hailed with delight throughout the State of Mississippi:

Jackson's last liquor license expired at midnight of June 4, and the morning of June 5 found Mississippi's capital city without a saloon. May it continue so forever! A. F. WATKINS.

Notice.

To the Members of the Shreveport District Conference—

BRETHREN: Please let me know at once if you will attend the District Conference at Keatchie, June 26. How will you come—by private conveyance, or by rail? Do you expect to bring your "better half" with you?

To those coming by rail I will say that reduced rates on the certificate plan have been secured on the Houston, East and West Texas railroad. Rates have been applied for on the Texas and Pacific, and doubtless will be secured on the same plan.

Those coming west on the morning train on the Texas and Pacific will be met at Gloster, if you will notify me.

Preachers in charge will please send me the names of those recommended for license to preach or orders. Representatives of our Colleges and Conference Boards, of the ADVOCATE, of the W. F. M. S. and P. and H. M. S. are cordially invited to attend. We will prepare for a full attendence, and are praying that you will come praying for and expecting a great outpouring of the Holy Spirit.

We are expecting the Conference to be a revival in the highest and best sense of the term. To this end will not those expecting to attend join me in spending the Monday before the Conference in fasting and prayer?

The people of Keatchie will freely and gladly entertain you, but will expect you to do all you can to help us to a higher and better life.

P. M. BROWN, P. C.

P. S.—The preachers will please call the attention of their delegates to this notice.

Notice.

All those who expect to attend the District Conference of the Brandon district, which will convene in Steen's Creek, June 27-30, will get off of the cars at Pearson, on the A. and V. R. R. There will be transportation from Pearson to Steen's Creek.

R. H. RAWLS, P. C.

Nothing is more deceptive than a crowd. We nearly always overestimate its size, and if it is our crowd, we are sure to overestimate its significance. We take a large congregation as the measure of the preacher's usefulness, whereas it is only an evidence of his popularity. We demand that our preacher shall be able to "draw," because we imagine that the larger the crowd, the more good he will accomplish. Occasionally the preacher himself falls in with our way of thinking. Starting with the premise that if the people will not come to church, he can not do them any good, he jumps to the conclusion that to do them good he has only to get them to church, and forthwith an ecclesiastical side-show is set up to advertise his services. The side-show deceives nobody but the preacher. The people come with an eye to the show: they have ears, but hear not. A church that advertised an unusual attraction had to call in the police to keep the crowd from rushing out during the sermon. The crowd is not worth the trouble it takes to get it, and what is worse, it costs more and more to keep it. "Attractions" do not save a declining church: like a stimulant, the dose must be continually increased, and the best they can do is to lengthen out the dying hour.—Richmond Advocate.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE DISCIPLINE OF SUFFERING.
(Job xxxiv, 29-32.)

All things work together for good to them that love God. Inexplicable, though, God's dealings with man may be, the design, the result, are good.

1. In setting forth the object of our lesson, the writer makes the dolorous statement: "I have borne chastisement."

(1) Not all our ills are punitious. Correctives rather. Whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth.

"He only designs
Our dross to consume, and our gold to refine."

(2) Frequently, though, our afflictions are the result of our sin. Significantly, Christ said to the healed impotent man of Bethesda: "Behold, thou art made whole; sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee."

2. In affliction, as a rule, the distressed soul, the writer intimates, determines, "I will not offend any more."

(1) Suffering awakens reformatory aspirations. When sickness invades our domicile, when racked with pain, in losses, distress, the determination acquires maturity, hereafter, to lead holy lives.

(2) But frequently the reformatory desires cease when the affliction is removed. In ugly staccato the old saying marches before our mental vision: "When the devil was sick, the devil a saint would be; when the devil was well," etc.

(3) Usually, repentance which leads to renewal of heart is superinduced by God's goodness. "Know ye not that the goodness of God leadeth to repentence?" The reflection, Christ on the cross for me, brings to the knees.

3. The converted man carries out the programme laid down in verse thirty-two: "That which I see not, teach thou me; if I have done iniquity, I will do no more."

(1) Should sit with Mary at the feet of Jesus, assured that our intellectual vision is limited. We see much, but far more is to be seen of ourselves and of God. Christ, our spiritual comfort, our teacher.

(2) The Holy Spirit leads the Christian into all truth. Without his illumination we are benighted. The baptism with fire dispels all darkness.

(3) He determines to sin no more. What, sin? Continue in sin? Sin, when it is borne in mind that sin necessitated Christ's incarnation and crucifixion? No, no. The man of God says, "I will do no more."

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $40 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to June, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1 65.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-fourth Annual Camp Meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 10, next, and continue for eight or ten days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the Camp Meeting to begin their journey on July 1, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 1 to 27, inclusive. All trains to stop at Camp Ground station from July 8 to 29, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The Camp Ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet, and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush at the opening of the Camp Meeting, should address communications to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, Mobile, Ala. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, chairman, New Orleans, La.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the Camp Meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. No gate fee will be exacted on the Sunday of the Camp Meeting. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to visit the Camp Meeting.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Dr. R. D. Baskerville, Swepson's, Va., Reprint from the "Maryland Medical Journal" of February 23, 1889.

"I have prescribed BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2, with decided beneficial results in both forms of chronic Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. In a case of acute Parenchymatous Nephritis occurring in a lad fourteen years old—'the first stage of Bright's Disease' of some writers, 'the large, smooth Kidney' of English authors—the urine gave a faint acid reaction, specific gravity 1006, and contained about three per cent. of albumen, CEdema of the feet and legs extending to the knees, face pulled almost beyond recognition, and considerable effusion in the great cavities. BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2, was ordered at once, and in twelve days the Dropsy was entirely relieved, the specific gravity had risen to 1012 and the albumen had disappeared to a mere trace; the Water was continued for a few weeks and the patient was entirely well, and has remained so to this time, a period of more than ten months."

Dr. John W. Williamson, late of Jackson, Tennessee:

"A member of my family suffered from chronic Bright's Disease of the Kidneys. There was dropsical effusion, the urine rich in albumen, an abundant sediment containing casts, and decided manifestations of Uræmic Poisoning, especially serious impairment of vision—Uræmic Amaurosis. After a signal failure of every remedy suggested by several eminent medical men, and when the condition of the patient was regarded as well-nigh hopeless, trial was made of BUFFALO LITHIA WATER Spring No. 2. The result was relief from the threatening symptoms so prompt and decided as to be almost incredible to any but an eye-witness. The continued use of the Water for several months resulted in a complete recovery. Several years have now elapsed and there has been no return of the disease."

This Water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

HOME CIRCLE.

RECONCILIATION.

Let there be
No farther strife nor enmity
Between us twain: we both have erred!
Too rash in act, too wroth in word,
From the beginning have we stood
In fierce, defiant attitude,
Each thoughtless of the other's right,
And each reliant on his might.
But now our souls are more subdued;
The hand of God, and not in vain
Has touched us with the fire of pain.
Let us kneel down, and side by side
Pray, till our souls are purified,
And pardon will not be denied!

Religious Reading.

At the last Church Congress of the Episcopal Church, one of the subjects under discussion was "Devotional Reading." Without entering into the phases of that debate, there can be no question as to the importance of the subject itself.

I think it must be apparent to even the casual observer, that Christian people, as a class, do not read as much in this direction as formerly. Years ago almost every intelligent Christian household had its library shelf of religious books, to which additions were frequently made; but the later generation has come up quite ignorant of the new treasures in this department of literature.

If a pernicious book can hurt, a good book ought to help. There are thousands of Christian parents who seek to keep bad books out of the hands of their children, but who seldom place a good one within their reach. As there is no lack of the former, so there is an abundant supply of the latter, which in literary style and treatment are the equal of the others. In no other branch of literature has there been a better development than in modern religious and biblical biography, pulpit discourse, biblical history, practical discussion of spiritual themes, and handbooks of devotion. And yet, notwithstanding the growth of the church, and its increase in intelligence, the publishers of such books declare that there is a lessening rather than an increasing demand for them. I do not seek to discuss the reasons for this, but simply to call attention to the fact.

A recent work of fiction, in which the author assails the very foundations of our faith, has gone into the hands of a hundred thousand Christian readers. Has any antidote followed? What are fathers doing to ward off the baleful effects of the skepticism that environs their sons? What are mothers doing to show their daughters, in the life of some Christian woman, a contrast to the woman of society? All over the land are thousands overburdened by the sorrows or calamities of life, who need a word in season. For such there are many books that would come to them with a message of peace and hope, did they only know of them, did they only look them up. In untold instances there are good men and women in the grip of necessary service, in which "the world is too much for them," who might be mightily strengthened by the words of some one who from such a plane as theirs had risen to spiritual heights.

I have sometimes thought that if all those who do read such books would but speak of them to others, as some do, they might greatly increase their distribution and consequent usefulness. Every apostle of evil is always ready to recommend the book that argues on his side; and the ministry (everything comes on them, I know) might frequently do the people a service by calling attention to a book which they knew would be a silent teacher of godliness.—Evangelist.

A Faithful Son.

A beautiful illustration of filial affection was brought to our notice the other dry. A busy New York physician, who is by no means wealthy, has been in the habit, for the last twenty-four years, of writing to his widowed mother every other day. She lives in a distant State and is dependent upon him for support. In each of these letters he incloses a perfectly fresh bank note—frequently only a dollar in value, but always new. Doubtless these missives are very brief. A life crowded with professional duties would hardly admit of the penning of lengthy letters, but what a wealth of devotion is shown by their frequency through this long period of years! Their regular arrival every other day must be like a sacrament to her lonely soul, sweeter even than the kisses which mothers receive daily from sons who are still with them. No remorse for neglected duty will trouble his conscience in the day when he looks upon her dear face in its last quiet sleep. Multitudes of young and middle-aged men who read this incident may cherish their mothers as fondly as this physician, but how many express their love? How often do they write to her, or give any tangible proof of their affection? Yet a man is never more manly than when imitating the Son of God in tender consideration for her who bore him.—Congregationalist.

Gather Up the Fragments.

Few children can ever be made to realize and appreciate how much they can lose in a lifetime in idle moments, neglected opportunities, careless mistakes, and thoughtless mischief. There are many things more precious than gold, and yet the following information shows what stores of wealth can be wasted in infinitesimal atoms of that shining metal even after the greatest pains are taken to save every particle of it:

"The firm of Robbins & Appleton, manufacturers of gold watch cases at 1, 3, and 5 Bond street, New York, recently went out of business. They took up the three floors of the building, and, together with all the accumulated rubbish, reduced them to ashes. From this they extracted $67,000 worth of pure gold. For the past nineteen years from $1,000 to $3,000 worth of gold has been melted over these floors each day in the course of the business.

"Although every possible care was taken to preserve the fine particles of metal, the $67,000 represents the amount that had escaped the careful sweepings of the firm. They had adopted the strictest methods to save the least particle of the gold. Even the towels the workmen used were washed in water that was saved and examined for specks of gold. Nothing that went into the building ever went out without inspection or reduction."—Northwestern.

"It Ruined Me."

A young man was in prison for forgery. His mother got her minister to go and see the fallen man. On being admitted to the prisoner the minister began by giving mother's kind message, and then relating the interest all the church felt in his welfare. At last the prisoner impatiently replied: "Do you know that yourself caused me all this trouble? I began the business in your Sabbath-school fair, when they first set up raffling? For twenty-five cents I got a whole box of little books. I was pleased with my luck and went in afterwards for chances. Sometimes I gained and sometimes I lost; money I would have for lotteries. Half crazy with excitement, I used the names of other men. Thus committing forgery, here I am; don't let the church come blubbering around me. They may thank themselves. Their raffling was what did it! It ruined me!"

Of all such money-machine religion God says: "It is written, my house should be called a house of prayer, but ye have made it a den of thieves."—Selected.

A Good Church Member.

He believes in his church. He loves it. He gives himself to it. He prays for it, and speaks kindly of it. He does not put a stumbling-block in the way of his brethren, and avoids those things which may grieve them or cause them to offend. He is charitable in his judgment, and promotes peace. He feels it a duty to build up his own congregation. He cheers his brethren and his pastor by regular attendance upon the public service. He helps the pastor, and does not leave him preach to empty pews, with an aching heart, or to carry on the prayer meetings alone. It is no slight excuse that keeps him from the Lord's Supper. The appointments of his church and the memory of his Savior are sacred to him. He does not trifle with either. He does not long continue derelict in duty to church, so as to become liable to discipline. He keeps his covenant solemnly made with his church when he entered its fellowship. God bless our good members, old and young, and constantly increase their number! Let lively stones be laid into the spiritual temple.—Reformed Church Herald.

Don't Fret.

Two gardeners, who were neighbors, had their peas killed by frost. One of them came to condole with the other on this misfortune.

"Ah!" he cried, "how unfortunate we have been, neighbor! Do you know I have done nothing but fret ever since. But you seem to have a fine, healthy crop coming up already; what are these?"

"These," cried the other gardener, "why these are what I sowed immediately after my loss."

"What! coming up already?" cried the fretter.

"Yes, while you were fretting I was working."

"What! don't you fret when you have a loss?"

"Yes, but I always put it off until after I have repaired the mischief."

"Why then you have no need to fret at all."

"True," replied the industrious gardener, "and that's the very reason."

The Future of a Boy.

Neither precocity nor dullness is a certain index of the future of a boy. Only a wise man can tell the difference between the priggishness of conceit and the display of unusual talent, and it takes a superlatively wise man to devise right methods of exciting temperaments that are dull, or, on the other hand, to guide a genius. Abnormal brilliancy and abnormal slowness are usually the result of abnormal physical conditions, and physiologists are only just beginning to show to ordinary parents how these unusual conditions may be discovered and treated. When we see a man we can not tell what sort of a boy he came from, and when we see a boy we can not tell what sort of a man he will make.—President D. C. Gilman, president of Johns Hopkins University.

John Wesley on Exercise.

John Wesley was possessed of so great a fund of common sense, and of such remarkable powers of observation, that he became as noted among the common people for his instructions in relation to health and the treatment of disease as for his theological teachings. He even wrote a medical work which, although it contained many things of which we can not approve, was, nevertheless, in its recognition of rational and natural remedies, more than a century ahead of the times when it was written.

Mr. Wesley recognized fully the value of exercise as a means of preserving health. He was always a man of active habits, and declared that he owed his vigor to the fact that when he went up to London to school, his father charged him, in his parting instructions, that he should run three times around Charter House Square every morning before breakfast. This practice he adhered to during his school life, and thus was kept in excellent health. A man recently measured the distance around Charter House Square, and reports it to us to be 445 yards, or a little more than one-fourth of a mile. Three times around the square would be three-fourths of a mile.

To take this exercise would have required from ten to fifteen minutes according to the rate of speed. If Mr. Wesley ran at a brisk trot he would have so increased his respiration and the action of his heart as to have brought a large amount of air into his lungs and circulated his blood thoroughly to every part of his body. Mr. Wesley's father must have been a man far advanced in his knowledge of the benefits of exercise for students, or he would not have given his son this wise command.—Journal of Hygiene.

The Hygiene of Laughter.

It has been aptly said that there is not the remotest corner of the inlet of the minute blood vessels of the human body that does not feel some wavelet from the convulsions occasioned by good hearty laughter. The life principle of the central man is shaken to its innermost depths, sending new tides of life and strength to the surface, thus materially tending to insure good health to the persons who indulge therein. The blood moves rapidly, and conveys a different impression to all the organs of the body, as it visits them on that particular mystic journey when the man is laughing, from what it does at other times. For this reason every good, hearty laugh in which a person indulges tends to lengthen his life, conveying as it does new and distinct stimulus to the vital forces. —National Stockman and Farmer.

In the pulpit truth made so simple that the unlearned or a child can grasp it is better than the flights of eloquence or poetry. —Cumberland Presbyterian.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

ROLLS.—One and a half pints of new milk, one cupful of yeast, half a teaspoon of salt, and flour enough for a dough. Cover and set to rise in a warm place over night. In the morning add the whites of two eggs, well beaten, half a cupful of butter, and flour enough for kneading. Knead the dough briskly for ten minutes, roll out to the thickness of half an inch, cut in four-inch squares, brush the tops with sweet milk, and fold over cornerwise. Place them close together in buttered pans, and set in a warm place until light, then bake in a quick oven.—American Cultivator.

FRENCH OR EGG TOAST.—One egg, one cup of milk or cream, one saltspoon of salt, one-half cup of sugar, slices of bread. Break the egg on a plate and beat it with a fork for a minute, or until the viscidness is destroyed. Then mix in the milk and salt. In this mixture soak the slices of bread until they are soft, lay them in a buttered omelet pan, and fry them slowly until a golden brown. Then place a bit of butter on the upper side of each slice, turn and brown that side. Sprinkle a little powdered cinnamon and sugar on each slice and arrange them one above another in a covered dish. Serve very hot.—Selected.

ALFORD—Drs. J. F. and J. T. ALFORD. [illegible] comes the news of the death of the two brothers. How I remember them with much gratitude in my heart! They lived on the south side of the beautiful Pearl: J. F. on the western shore, and J. T. on the east. My home in my youth was a few rods above, on the back of the same historic stream. Those godly men visited me for two long years once when my young life came near going out with that painful disease we call white swelling. During those long, weary days they spoke many comforting words, and on one occasion Dr. Jim, as he was called, predicted more hopeful future than I could at that time possibly dream.

Some years before I was converted, in company with neighbor boys, I was fishing in my native waters on the Lord's day, when Dr. John passed, going to see a sick man. Seeing me breaking the Sabbath, he said, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy." This was all he said, but it had good effect.

They being of another denomination to myself, I would not have known of their death had not Dr. Black so kindly sent the CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE to our College Reading Room. They have now gone to their reward, and my dear mother, who also was a devout Methodist, and who also waited so faithfully at my bedside in those years of suffering, has, too, gone to the saint's rest.

May God bless the widows and children!

NORWOOD—Mrs. ALMIRA L. NORWOOD (nee Irwin) was born Nov. 24, 1837; married to Rev. Noel B. Norwood, Dec. 18, 1878, and died May 11, 1895.

She joined the Methodist Church soon after marriage, being one among the first souls saved for the Master by Bro. Norwood. The Bible was the Book of books with her. For twenty-two years she made it her rule to read it through each year. Her life may truly be said to "have been hid with Christ in God." Having been permitted to associate with her in a meeting at Daisy, I was charmed by her frank and bold, yet modest, testimony to the realized power of Jesus' blood to cleanse her from all sin, and her fervent prayers and joyous testimony were owned of God in the blessing of the congregation. She literally "sat at Jesus' feet and heard his word." The oracles of God were her especial delight during her last illness. When nearing the other shore, in answer to a message from her husband, with a light not of earth upon her countenance, and a joyous smile upon her face, she said: "Of course, I will go; of course, I will go. Don't you see, heaven is shining—heaven is shining." She seemed surprised and amazed at the ignorance displayed by many opposers of entire sanctification.

Five children—two girls and three boys—mourn her departure. Earth is poorer from her loss and heaven rejoices over her admittance. Her friend,

F. D. VAN VALKENBURGH.

MCCOY—JAMES P. McCOY was born June 5, [illegible]; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in 1863, and in the Fall of the same year was married to Miss Caroline Tillery, and died May 15, 1895, in Bleuville parish, La. He was the son of Gilbert McCoy, an old and useful local preacher in this country, who died a few years ago. He loved the church, and was a faithful Christian. He was for several years a steward. He was a useful, influential citizen. Only about ten days before his death he rode twelve or fifteen miles to attend the quarterly Conference of his circuit, and at that meeting gave a delightful experience.

The church, the community, and especially his family, have sustained a great loss. The widow especially is sad and desolate, as they never had any children. His death was very triumphant. He gave directions to his family about his business matters, described the exact spot where he should be buried, called the young people around him, gave them a good talk, and asked and received a promise from them to meet him in heaven; then told all present good by, and peacefully passed away.

His funeral was preached by this writer, at the late residence, to a very large congregation. It was a time of divine power, and many were the shouts of praise for the triumphs of divine grace. At the close of the service an opportunity was given, and three persons joined the church. God comfort the bereaved!

JNO. A. MILLER.

HOFFPAUIR—Died, May 6, at her home near Rayne, La., after a protracted illness, Sister LUCINDA HOFFPAUIR (nee Spell). She was born in Lefeyette parish on Oct. 10, 1815, and was married to Nathen Hoffpauir in 1833. To this union fifteen children were born, thirteen of whom survive her—of whom are to be found some of the best citizens of this country. She taught her children to serve God, and as a result all had professed religion, though some of them had suffered the tempter to lead them astray. But on account of the persistent prayers and godly admonitions of a dying mother, they professed reclemation and promised to meet her in heaven.

She joined the M. E. Church, South, early in life, and was a consistent member to her death. Some of the most touching scenes of my life I witnessed at her bedside when friends and loved ones would bid her good-by. Often when she was thought to be dying, and some one would start a song, she would join in the singing and shout praises to God. She never murmured, and admonished her loved ones to weep not for her. After a wedded life of sixty-two years she leaves her husband and two hundred and four of her posterity to mourn her loss.

A large concourse of relatives and friends followed her remains to their resting-place in Indian Bayou Cemetery. May God's comforting grace sustain the bereaved!

W. J. PORTER, Pastor.

ELLIS—Mrs. DIXIE ELLIS, wife of Prof. W. L. Ellis, of the Cooper-Middleston College, Doleville, Miss., calmly passed away; after lingering with consumption for several months, on Sunday evening, April 14, 1895. She was the daughter of Henry and Martha Mers, of Neshoba county, Miss., and had been trained religiously, and hence she joined the church when quite young, and lived ever after a consistent life. She was married to W. L. Ellis in the Fall of '82. There were born to them four children. The first-born died four years ago. Three survive to be reared without a mother's guiding hand.

The strongest tie that bound her to this world was her children; but divine grace enabled her to trustfully give them into God's hands several days before she died. She spoke of her departure as coolly and deliberately as one would speak of business. The prospect of a reunion with departed loved ones adds to the attractions of heaven.

J. H. MITCHELL, P. E.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

The Bible is a book to be read quietly, if possible, thoughtfully, and with desire a God-word for the illumination of the Holy Spirit every day. It is the source of spiritual strength, the divine manna for the soul. It is the guide of our steps, the lamp for our path, provided by the Creator of our souls. It gives peace, serenity, so necessary to the proper performance of duty. It contains the highest knowledge and wisdom, and makes men intelligent and sagacious as no other book does or can. It is the strong consolation of men in a world where divine discipline is administered; where loss, sorrow, sickness and death are constantly present. Clear seeing and right thinking, and lofty ideas and desires, are promoted by the Bible. Read every day in faith and love, as a message from God to the reader, as a little child reads a beloved father's letter. It will give all that it promises.—The Christian Intelligencer.

The Reason

why some dealers try to sell, and some painters use, other than genuine brands (see list) of White Lead is that their first cost is less. Quality should be the first consideration, and is the true economy.

For colors, the National Lead Co.'s tinting colors are especially prepared for tinting Pure White Lead to any shade required.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., June, '96. A little later it will be July, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

Hiram R. Gill, of Louisiana, sent as consul from United States to Nicaragua, died at Managua on June 6.

A campaign in the interest of silver is going on in Mississippi. Meetings were held, on June 8, in Meridian, Columbus, Brandon, Summit and McComb City.

Arrangements have been made to entertain 25 000 G. A. R. men at the Atlanta Exposition on Sept. 20 and it is expected that a much larger number will be present.

A free silver convention was held in this city on June 10. A large audience was present. Congressmen Bryan, of Nebraska, and Money, of Mississippi, made addresses.

Boston expects to have a great time at the coming convention of the Christian Endeavorers in that city, and is preparing two mammoth tents for the occasion, each of which is expected to accommodate 10 000 persons.

The United States cruisers "Columbia" and "New York" have sailed for the Baltic, in order to take part with the "San Francisco" and "Marblehead" in the ceremonies attending the opening of the Baltic Sea Channel.

Some notion of the extent and importance of irrigation in the West is had from the fact that seventeen States and Territories will be represented in the fourth National Irrigation Congress which is to be held in Albuquerque, N. M.

Senator John B. Gordon is out in a card announcing his permanent retirement from politics at the end of his present term of office. He says that this is a determination he reached a year ago. He will devote his time hereafter to lecturing.

Chairmen Carter, of the Republican National Committee, has been losing cattle with many of the papers of his party, and they have been denouncing him in good, round terms. The trouble seems to be that he has declared himself for free silver.

A committee of twelve leading citizens of Atlanta left last week in a private car on the Southern Road for Washington, where they go to invite President Cleveland and his Cabinet to be present at the opening of the Cotton States and International Exposition on Sept 18.

The blast furnace operators of the Mahoning and Shenango valleys, Ohio, have decided to advance the wages of their employees 10 per cent. to take effect June 15 This is the second 10 per cent. advance made in two months, or a restoration of wages paid before Aug. 15, 1893. About 2,000 men will be affected.

President Cleveland on Friday appointed Attorney-General Richard L Olney, Secretary of State, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Secretary Gresham. The vacancy caused by the transfer of Mr. Olney to the State Department was filled by the appointment of Hon. Judson Harmon, of Cincinnati, to be Attorney General.

The case of the State of Louisiana versus John Fitzpatrick, mayor of New Orleans, in an action before the Civil Court to oust him from office for malfeasance, non-feasance and gross misconduct has been finally decided in the highest court in which it could be tried, namely, the Court of Appeals. It has been decided in favor of the mayor.

Over 2,000 residents of South Chicago assembled in an open air mass meeting to denounce "boodle aldermen," and protest against the action of the Chicago City Council in passing an ordinance granting to the Calumet and Blue Island railway a right of way through the residence portion of that part of the town known as the "East Side."

The village of Salins, in the canton of Vilais, Switzerland, has been destroyed by fire.

The United States sanitary inspector of Santiago de Cuba reports that he is informed that there are hundreds sick from yellow fever and other diseases among the troops in the interior of Cuba.

The evacuation of Corea by the Japanese will form the subject of negotiations between Russia and Japan as soon as the question of the evacuation of Liao Tung peninsula is definitely settled.

At the meeting of the International Miners' Conference in Paris, on June 6, the German, English, Belgian and French delegates adopted a resolution in favor of eight hours as a legal day's work for miners and surface workers.

The British Parliament resumed its sittings on June 10.

There was a tremendous cloudburst on June 6 over the Wurtenberg portion of the Black Forest district, Germany, causing great destruction of property. The downfall of water caused the River Evach to rise and many houses at Balingen, Frommern, Dierwagen and Lenfen were swept away. Many persons are missing, and it is feared they were drowned in the flood.

The situation of affairs, so far as the settlement of questions in dispute between the Turkish government and the representatives of the powers regarding reform in Armenia is concerned, shows considerable improvement. This improvement is undoubtedly due to the firm attitude of the powers in positively refusing to accept any modification of the programme which has been mapped out for the improvement of the condition of Armenia.

A special dispatch from Shanghai says that it is almost certain that a massacre of all of the persons connected with the French, English and American missions at Chengtu has occurred. Neither men, women nor children have been spared, according to the report. It is admitted that telegrams have been intercepted by the government, the object being to conceal the news of the massacre. A French gunboat is en route to Wuen Chang to investigate.

Daily Use of the Bible.

Many weary and heavy-laden with care live from day to day forgetful of the help and comfort so much needed by all. If we all knew the value of the Bible, and the importance of reading it daily, it would not be left on the table unopened for a week. Let busy, anxious women defer some other morning duty and take time to look at the way-bill given us to guide our erring feet through life. To attend to this matter at night, after the combat is over, is too late. We need strength and courage for the hour of duty and trial. It is by daily study of God's word that we receive benefit therefrom and learn the hidden meanings of that Word as applicable to ourselves. Often we are surprised and comforted in reading some familiar passage, the meaning of which we never saw before. Thus God often speaks through his word, and comforts our troubled hearts.

Thy Word can give a sweet relief
For every pain I feel.
—Hooker.

Don't make two bites at a cherry. What's the use of taking one thing for coarse, and another for fine, washing. Pearline will do it all. For washing wood-work, tinware, silver, marble, glass, dishes, carpets, or anything you can think of, Pearline is the best. It saves not only work, but wear. Let it help you in all these ways. You musn't think that the easy washing of clothes is all that Pearline is made for.

Send it Back Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 423 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The twenty-fourth annual camp meeting of Hennington Camp Meeting Association will commence Thursday, the first day of August, 1895.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the distinguished evangelist, is expected to be with us the entire meeting.

Ministers of the gospel are earnestly invited to attend, and will be provided for during the meeting.

A great gathering of the people is expected, and ample arrangements will be made for the accommodation of all who may come. The restaurant will furnish board at very moderate rates.

To meet the expenses of the meeting, the usual entrance fee of twenty-five cents will be required, to be paid only once during the meeting. J. W. MCNEIL, Secretary.

Our camp meeting at Bethel Camp Ground, Wilkinson county, Miss., will begin on the fifteenth day of August, 1895. We have no gate fees, but we have good order, large congregation, and good accommodations. We invite our brethren in the ministry to come particularly, and to come prepared to preach and work. There will be a hack running daily from Whitaker station, on the Y., M. and V. R. R., out to Bethel Camp Ground; distance, about six miles. Come one, come all; and Mr. Editor, too. P. H. HOWZE, P. C.

The seventh annual meeting at the Rapides Camp Ground will begin on Saturday, Aug. 3, and close on Sunday night, Aug. 11, 1895.

This camp ground is beautifully located in the pine hills, eight miles south of Boyce. Abundant supply of fine water. Ample hotel accommodations for the public at reasonable rates.

Hacks will meet all trains arriving over the T. and P. R. R., at Boyce, carrying visitors to camp ground from Boyce.

Quite a number of ministers from a distance will be present and assisting.

J. L. HOFFPAUIR, for Committee.

Half Fare to Chattanooga.

The Queen and Crescent Route will sell round-trip tickets from all points on its line, June 25 to 27, 1895, to Chattanooga and return, at half rates, with liberal limits and conditions.

Tokyo, Japan's capital city, thrives prodigiously. In 1874 her population was over twice that of Boston; now it is nearly 2,000,000. It is larger than Vienna. Only London, Paris, and New York surpass it; and at present rates it will soon catch up with our metropolitan city. Its journalistic productiveness is almost incredible. The first daily was established in 1872; now 400 daily newspapers are published, besides 300 other periodicals, including illustrated papers, magazines, reviews, trade organs, and the like. The Occident must look to its laurels, or the East will snatch them.—Zion's Herald.

The shipment of frozen milk from Norway to English cities has become an important industry. The process, as described, consists of solidling fresh milk, then freezing it by chemical process.

Centenary College.

Centenary is the only School for boys owned by the Methodist Church in Louisiana. It has done a good work for the church. All it asks in return is the liberal support of the Methodist people. It is easy of access by rail. The grounds and buildings are ample and beautiful. The course of study is thorough. The grade of scholarship is high. The moral influences are unexcelled. The community is noted for its refinement and culture. It is just the place for boys desirous of a complete education. For details, see Catalogues, which will be sent on application. Address,

A Little Serious Reflection

Will show you that it is always best to pay enough. Low-priced things are not always cheap. Low prices are sometimes dearly bought. There's such a thing as "extravagant economy"—that means on the price at the cost of the quality. We sell good groceries just as low as it is possible to sell them. We wont sell the other at any price.

We want you to come here because it pays you to do so, and because it pays us to have you.

SOLITUDE.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Laugh, and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone,
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own.
Sing, and the hills will answer;
Sigh, it is lost on the air;
The echoes bound to a joyful sound,
But shrink from voicing care.

Rejoice, and men will seek you;
Grieve, and they turn and go.
They want full measure of all your pleasure,
But they do not need your woe.
Be glad, and your friends are many;
Be sad, and you lose them all.
There are none to decline your nectar'd wine,
But alone you must drink life's gall.

Feast, and your halls are crowded;
Fast, and the world goes by.
Succeed and give, and it helps you live,
But no man can help you die.
There is room in the halls of pleasure
For a large and lordly train,
But one by one we must file on
Through the narrow aisles of pain.

From Jerusalem to Shechem.

BY BISHOP CHAS. B. GALLOWAY, D. D.

Returning from Jericho, we spent nearly two days in Jerusalem, walking about Zion, making some deferred observations, and completing arrangements for our long horseback ride through Judea, Galilee, and Samaria. A barker had to be consulted and the bazaars visited in order to secure a few curios and souvenirs for friends from the city of the great King. But the most important preparation for that interior journey was an additional passport. Although I had one from the State Department at Washington, D. C., properly viseed by a Turkish consul, I was compelled to get another, called a "Teskarie," written in Arabic, for which the hungry official asked the sum of seven dollars. This serves two purposes—filches from the infidel tourist and pays tribute to the ignorance of interior officials who are unable to read any foreign language. The average Turkish officer, whether in the customs, police, or other department, is without conscience and corrupt to the last degree. His one aim in life is to get backsheesh. Though there may not be a dutiable article in your baggage—and certified to by another officer—he will go through it slowly and endanger your getting aboard the ship, in order to compel the payment of tribute. But a little cash in advance will pass any tourist anywhere without "Teskarie," or any dutiable article through the customs without examination. They are robbers in uniform, whose efficiency is measured by their capacity, and where promotion is conditioned on dishonest earnings. For unblushing venality and cold-blooded brutality, the representatives of the Turkish government have no equals in modern history. The poor natives, Mohammedans in faith, who have become convinced of the truth of Christianity, dare not publicly profess it. In a few days or weeks the new convert would be "missing," and not an official could ever be able to find a trace of the lost. An earnest Christian woman in Nazareth, who has a large class of girls under her instruction, told us that some were true disciples of Jesus in heart, but dared not, on penalty of death, make public announcement of the fact. These and other considerations forced the conclusion that all Palestine—the "land of promise," so rich in places and associations dear to the disciples of the Son of God—should be under the joint protectorate of the several great Christian nations.

To the American consul at Jerusalem, an accomplished and most agreeable young Presbyterian minister, we are much indebted for official and personal courtesies. Through him our passports were secured from the Turkish office.

On Friday afternoon, Jan. 11, we bade Jerusalem good-by, and our cavalcade started northward in Galilee. Our route was along the ancient Roman road toward Damascus—the way made sacred by the feet of the Holy Family returning to Nazareth, and memorable by the persecuting expedition of Saul of Tarsus, "breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." A little north of the Damascus gate we passed what is known as "The Hill of Ashes," a heap formed by the ashes of the burnt-offerings, and claimed by some as the actual site of our Lord's crucifixion. How expressive were those remains of the sacrificial fires! Multiplied thousands of the best and most costly offerings—lambs "without blemish"—expression of Israel's eager expectation of the coming of the great King, were there joyously turned to ashes. What marvelous history, and waiting faith, and longing hope, and anxious solicitude, were recalled by that pile of rubbish!

A few minutes' ride brought us to the "Tombs of the Kings"—vast subterranean chambers out in the solid rock, and in which royalty is supposed to have slept through the centuries. Although we had crawled into many dark passages where historic bones were long kept, we dismounted and examined these, the most elaborate and costly of all the catacombs in Palestine. Their history, like themselves, is shadowy, but they are the best-preserved remains of the old style of Jewish sepulture. One gets here the most satisfactory idea of how the heavy stone is rolled against the door of the sepulcher and securely sealed.

On the top of Mt. Scopus we lingered for a last near view of Jerusalem. From that summit victorious Titus watched the destruction of the sacred city, and saw the stately Temple crumble to ashes. But our hearts were sad, and when we thought of those blessed shrines being in Moslem hands, we felt somewhat of our Lord's pity when on neighboring Olivet "he beheld the city, and wept over it."

Passing on over the roughest, rockiest, so-called road that was ever trodden by the hoof of an Arabian horse, and scarcely relieved by the shade of a single tree, we were soon in sight of ancient Nob, where the ark of the covenant was removed after remaining twenty years in the house of Abinadab. It was there David recovered the sword of Goliath—the memorial of his first and most brilliant achievement—and there he ate the shewbread and was the innocent cause of eighty-five priests being slain by the command of King Saul. The next place of interest, and but a short distance beyond, was Gibeah of Saul, the stronghold of Benjamin, and associated with some of the most tragic passages in the history of Israel. It was on that height the wrathful fury of King Saul sought the extermination of the Gibeonites, and in after years it witnessed the revenge of history—the hanging of seven men of the sons of Saul, only Mephibosheth, the son of Jonathan, being spared, and that "because of the Lord's oath" between David and Jonathan. From that elevation we had a magnificent view—Jerusalem was behind us; off to the right were the distant mountains of Moab, the Dead Sea mirroring the afternoon sun, and the sinuous river hurrying to the depths in which nothing can live, and from which no roaming current ever returns. To the right, only two miles distant, was Mizpeh, where Saul was chosen king, and clinging to the hillside on the north was Gibeon, where the young King Solomon began his reign by bringing a thousand burnt-offerings unto the Lord. His first act as king was a religious act. It was on that very spot God came down and spoke into the young king's dreaming ear, and there heard the prayer which tested the fiber of his faith and determined the character of his early reign. In a little less than an hour we passed the village of Ramah, the scene of as beautiful a story as is found in all the romance of the centuries. Here Samuel was born in answer to prayer, and forth from this village the devout mother made her annual pilgrimages to the Tabernacle at Shiloh to see the child she had "lent to the Lord," carrying the little new coat her busy fingers and praying heart had made. And here at last, after an honored and honorable life, this noble son of his mother, "the last of the judges, the first of the order of prophets, and the founder of the Hebrew monarchy," was laid to rest.

We were shown a large caravansary in the village built by the Saracens, and the ruins of a church erected by the Crusaders on the spot where the Holy Family is supposed to have rested. On account of the bitter hostility between Christians and Mohammedans in this place, neither church nor mosque has been built on those sacred ruins. In numbers they are about equally divided, and are in relentless antagonism. So fierce is this spirit that they have separate waterspouts at the village fountain, and separate troughs for their donkeys and other animals to drink. Alas! that others than Moslems have thus discounted the gentle, patient brotherliness of the Son of man. What a travesty that men should contend to the hilt for the traditional spot where the mother of the Prince of Peace rested for a night!

From Beeroth we turned aside to the village of Ramallah, and spent the night in a Greek monastery. The red-headed monk was very courteous, and extended genuine hospitality, albeit we had little conversation, not speaking the same tongue. The night was quite cool, and most comfortable were the hours around his modest stove. The inhabitants of the village are Christians, nearly all being members of the Greek Church. There are a few Roman Catholics, an English Church, and a congregation of Quakers. The Quakers have a boarding-school, a hospital, and an English surgeon.

In the early morning we resumed our journey, and in an hour were at the village of Bethel—"but the name of that city was called Luz at the first." We "lighted upon a certain place" where it is supposed Jacob tarried all night, and in his dreams had the vision of the "ladder set up on the earth," the top of it reaching to heaven, and crowded with ascending and descending angels. In that little valley near where the stone pillow was set up for a pillar, we stood and meditated; and as that gorgeous scene unrolled before our imagination, we felt like exclaiming with the great patriarch, as he awoke out of sleep: "How dreadful is this place! This is none other but the house of God, and this is the gate of heaven."

We were also shown the supposed site, on the hill between Bethel and Ai, where Abraham set up his altar. And that spot is also memorable as marking the place where Abraham and Lot separated, the latter turning toward the green Jordan valley which looked so inviting in the distance. It was at Bethel that Jerobeam built one of his altars which was rent in twain, and thus sought to divorce the heart of the ten tribes from their attachment to the temple worship at Jerusalem. He had the shrewdness to discern the intimate connection between the political and religious faiths of a people. He knew that the revolt could only succeed by stopping their annual pilgrimage to the great city. And very near that hill we were shown the place where tradition says Elisha commanded the bears to destroy the mocking children. It was difficult to imagine that those barren hills and rocks were ever the hiding-places of wild beasts. But if all the impertinent and irreverent youngsters of the country were again liable to a like fate, the she bears would have to sharpen their teeth and get ready for a big engagement.

Journeying northward, we noticed in the distance the village of Ophrah, supposed to be the Ephraim to which our Lord quietly retired with his disciples for awhile, when he "walked no more openly among the Jews." There the brave Gideon was born and lived, and had his faith and courage strengthened by the vision of the fleece. In a little while we entered the "Valley of Figs"—a narrow table-land filled with small fig orchards—and, dismounting, led our horses down the most dreadful road in the world, into the "glen of robbers," and halted for awhile at Robbers' Fountain. Doubtless many a pious pilgrim in ancient times fell by this wayside.

We lunched that day at Shiloh, or rather on the site of that historic city, and that very spot where the Tabernacle stood. The ruins of an old church mark the place, and from its failing walls a tree has grown, beneath the shade of which we ate our paschal feast. There Eli ministered at God's altar and sat in the gate of judgment; there Samuel heard the voice of his Lord, received the grateful visits of his devout and beautiful mother; there the Tabernacle stood, and the ark of the covenant rested for years, and from it was carried into battle and captured by the Philistines. Now there is nothing but desolation—Jeremiah's prophecy has been literally fulfilled—"Go ye now unto my place which was in Shiloh, where I set my name at the first, and see what I did to it for wickedness of my people Israel."

Passing through the valley of Shiloh, and near ancient Lebonah, we soon rejoined the beaten highway, and had Mounts Gerizim and Ebal in full view before us, while in the distance snowy Hermon leaned his head against the evening sky. In a hill to the right we saw the tomb of Eleazer "in Mount Ephraim," but had not time to stop and lay a flower upon the resting place of the son of Aaron. Descending from this range of hills we entered the plain of Moreh, now called Mukhna. Growing crops made the valley like a well-cultivated garden, and here it was our Lord said to his disciples: "Lift up your eyes and see, for the fields are white unto harvest." Before reaching Nablous—ancient Shechem—we stopped for awhile at Jacob's well, one of the few sites about which there can be no doubt. By the side of that very well the Lord sat and taught the Samaritan woman who came to draw water. It is situated down in the valley, and at the entrance of the narrow gateway between the lofty mountains of Gerizim and Ebal. Once a large church was built near and over it, but is now a heap of ruins. We had pieces of burning paper dropped into it, and ascertained its immense size and great depth. It is seven feet in diameter, and about seventy-five feet deep. In 1838 Robinson found its depth to be one hundred and five feet.

But a short distance from Jacob's well is Joseph's tomb. The patriarch, when dying in Egypt, "gave commandment concerning his bones," and when Israel came out under the guardianship of a pillar of cloud and fire, the embalmed body of Joseph was carried by tender hands and finally laid to rest in the parcel of ground given by his father Jacob.

From these patriarchal relics and scenes so beautifully connected with the ministry of our Lord, we rode into old Shechem, now called Nablous. It was late Saturday afternoon, and the shadows of the high mountains had already wrapped the little city in darkness. We supposed that arrangements had been made for us in the home of a Baptist missionary, but his house was full, and we had to go elsewhere. A Samaritan gentleman—the good Samaritan to us—opened wide his doors and bade us welcome. Under his roof we abided for a little while, being served with coffee by the thoughtful housewife; but our dragoman at length had us removed to a Roman Catholic monastery. With many a gracious bow we bade the good Samaritan good-by, and found a pleasant home with two Latin fathers for two nights and a holy Sabbath.

A Danger in Fiction.

Is there not a growing danger in the character of fiction supplied by some of our periodicals specially intended for the young? It seems to us that a very unreal world has been created and peopled by writers for our boys and girls. Of course, there are exceptional cases; but we can not help feeling that much of the literature referred to has an unhealthy flavor. Indeed, some of the most popular writers for the young are those who are mainly responsible for the unreal world to which we have called attention. Under the influence of these writers, our boys and girls are brought up with tastes so abnormal that when they enter the real world they are wholly unfitted for the task of fighting the battle of life. We could easily give examples of what we mean, but we think our readers will be able to find these without our help. We may, however, have to give a picture of this new, unreal world, in order to warn the parents against its insidious influence upon their children. —Christian Commonwealth.

The Scientific American criticises the lack of wisdom which the State shows in enlarging its prisons and reformateries and asylums for the insane, instead of enforcing truant laws preventing the opening of dens of iniquity, and forbidding the housing of human beings where disease festers and spreads with the very breeze which keeps the tenants from stifling. Among the many signs that changes for the better have begun, it mentions that "That work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union in inducing the State Legislatures to introduce into the public school instruction on the effect of alcoholic and other stimulants upon the system is probably the most telling work that organization has done—telling because preventive."

Whitworth College Commencement.

The commencement exercises just closed at Whitworth College were of the highest order of excellence, from first to last.

On Sunday morning, June 9, notwithstanding the inclement weather, a large and appreciative audience assembled in the college chapel to give devout attention to the baccalaureate sermon by Rev. R. W. Bailey, A. M., of the Mississippi Conference. The preacher discussed "The Human Side of the Kingship of Christ" in a most charming and impressive manner. He held his audience with a firm grasp, from the opening sentence of the introduction to the last word of the peroration. His thoughts, fresh and vigorous, were clothed with the purest diction. His style was unostentatious; his spirituality, deep and fervent; while, ever and anon, with impassioned eloquence, his burning words easily reached the heart and conscience, and awakened a hearty response. The sermon well merited the meed of praise it received.

Sunday night Rev. R. M. Evans, of the North Mississippi Conference, preached the annual sermon for the college Epworth League. His theme was, "A Chain of Incentives to Noble Womanhood." His sermon was unique, deeply spiritual, and captured the girls completely, as was evidenced by the hearty handshaking at its conclusion.

The exercises of Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday were of a superior quality, and gave eminent satisfaction and pleasure to the friends of the college.

The attraction, Monday morning, was a medal contest in the department of elocution. After the music of those silver tongues had died away, it was shown by the appointed judges that Miss Ethel Smith, of Jackson, Miss., had won the closely contested prize. At eight o'clock P. M. the Literary Society was addressed by Mrs. Mary R. Baldwin, of Sioux City. Her address on "The New Woman" was admirably prepared, and graciously received by a multitude of eager listeners.

The annual meeting of the Alumnæ Association was held Tuesday morning. There was seated on the rostrum quite a large number of the members, representing various classes. This splendid array of cultured ladies added a deeper intensity to the pardonable pride already felt by the friends of this time-honored institution. After a short and well-arranged programme, in the execution of which the highest type of musical and elocutionary talent was displayed, the Hon. T. Dabney Marshall, of Vicksburg, addressed the Association on "The Trend of Modern Literature." The speaker was at his best, and his address showed a familiar acquaintance with the leading literary writers of the world.

The enthusiasm which had been increasing from the very first exercise reached its highest degree of intensity Tuesday evening, during the execution of the programme arranged for the grand annual concert. To say that the concert was a success would but tamely express the enthusiastic verdict of that cultured audience. Miss Bibbins, the musical directress, was highly commended for the skillful arrangement of this most excellent programme. The young ladies acquitted themselves in the most charming manner, and received multiplied tokens of delight, and liberal expressions of appreciation from their appreciative listeners.

Wednesday morning the spacious chapel was well filled with people from afar and near to witness the graduating exercises. Nine young ladies received the degree of M. E. L.; Miss Janie Watkins taking the first honor, and Miss Sallie Cooper the second. The baccalaureate address of President Chambers was short, eloquent, pathetic, wise, and was listened to with rapt attention. The class will long remember his wise words of earnest counsel and encouragement.

The annual meeting of the Board of Trustees was harmonious. The affairs of the college were carefully looked into, and the president highly commended for the success he has achieved and his untiring efforts to promote the interest of the college. The following gentlemen were elected to membership on the Board of Trustees, viz.: Judge R. H. Thompson, B. F. Morris, Dr. J. T. Butler, W. A. Gunning, and B. F. Jones.

At the conclusion of the exercises President Chambers made some very encouraging and gratifying statements. The future is full of encouraging promise; the mists are clearing away, and the dawn of a brighter era is already shedding its light upon this center of Christian education. Surrounded by a competent faculty, and backed by friends, President Chambers is rapidly verifying the wisdom of the trustees in placing upon him the leadership of Whitworth College.

It is confidently expected that there will be an unusually large attendance next session, which begins on Sept. 11.

A Beautiful Church.

If the former pastors could visit West End and see our beautiful new church, with everything in perfect taste, they would exclaim, "What hath God wrought!"

We now have a church with an elegant Sunday-school room, which, together with the auditorium, will seat about 550. There is not a more beautiful building, in many respects, in Mississippi. Put this down as a great victory. Great credit is due Bro. D. S. Harmon, and the Building Committee: D. S. Harmon, H. J. Gregge, S. Baxter, M. E. Gilbert, C. W. Westbrook, B. J. Nelson, W. J. Hendrix, and B. F. Miller. The ladies come in for their share of the honor.

On the fifth Sabbath in this month Bro. R. J. Jones will preach our opening sermon, and later we will have our dedicatory services, to which we will invite all former pastors whose work has made it possible to honor the Lord with such a beautiful and commodious church. Let the good work go on.

In the Living Present.

In the land of the Northmen there is trouble. The Norwegians desire severance from Sweden. King Oscar has been endeavoring to conciliate the opposing faction; but the revolutionary spirit is still extant. The sons of the old Vikings want a republic.

Idolatrous love of our opinions is the prolific source of most contention. Such love is the height of conceit. In these opinions the sun rises and sets. Soon these opinions are denominated principles and become the guide of life. Disputing their correctness is looked upon as the unpardonable sin.

Ecclesiastical boycott is the latest. The Presbyterian Assembly has concluded to boycott Union Seminary because of its devotion to Prof. Briggs, the reputed heretic. Graduates from that institution are to be debarred from Presbyterian pulpits. Dr. Parkhurst, a leading trustee of said seminary, declares that the boycott will do little harm.

Robert Grant, in Scribner's, asseverates that in discussing church union profit and loss should not be considered. Insistance on prevention of wastage of vital force and of money beneath our dignity. Don't want church monopoly. Trusts in church more harmful than in business. We do not expect dividends from church enterprise.

The Bible is not our idol to be worshiped—not a charm, a talisman, to be securely hid away. It must be read, studied, understood. Its precepts must be heeded, practiced.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton, chief editress of "The Woman's Bible," sneeringly states: "The Jewish Lord, taught in the Old Testament, sanctioning the petty immoralities of the people, but inflicting severe punishment for personal neglects, is not worthy of our admiration and love." Thus it appears that the old lady is making rapid strides toward atheism.

The Cuban revolution will probably terminate as its predecessors. Failure inevitable. The London Times charges that the people of the United States are aiding and abetting the malcontents. In due time Spain would insist on payment of indemnity. Now, tardily, though, President Cleveland by proclamation warns our people against overt sympathy with the revolutionists. A man of war has been dispatched to prevent filibustering expeditions sailing from our country.

If you can not cross the ocean
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find the heathen nearer,
You can help them at your door.
If you can not speak like angels,
If you can not preach like Paul,
You can tell the love of Jesus
You can say he died for all.

"Gilderoy" Reviewed.

In the first article "Gilderoy" proceeds upon the hypothesis that perfection of knowledge is a thing of the past. What we must do in the discussion of this subject is to exercise our senses, and not trust in some one's else sense expressed at a time when there was less light on the subject than now.

Some one has wisely said: "The 'standards' of yesterday are thrust aside to-day; those of to-day shall be as ephemeral." Or, as our good Bishop Keener, at the last session of the North Mississippi Conference, expressed it: "The Salvation Army have something you Methodists have not got. I do not know what it is, but you will do well to find out."

It is not best to color our ideas too much with "books" that make no claim to inspiration. "Gilderoy" cites some good "books," but has unwisely omitted "the Book" to which all others must bend. In the article under review there is not so much as a single allusion to the Scriptures in all he offers as a solution of this all-absorbing theme, and yet some are satisfied with his solution of it.

We desire to notice some of his positions. He says, speaking of infants dying in infancy, regeneration is not predicable of them—meaning, I suppose, that it expresses too much, or not enough; and that sanctification can not properly be affirmed of persons so young. Then infants are neither regenerated or sanctified. How, then, are they saved. I have always preached that "adults" (Matt. xviii, 3) must be "converted" in order to "become" as "little children," i. e., without actual sins—that is, justified, which is coetaneous with regeneration and adoption; that "a man," not a child (John iii, 3) "must be born from above" to enter heaven. Neither "little children" or "regenerated adults" have sins, acts of transgression, as no state of grace will admit of the commission of sin. Both, however, have "sin"—depravity—moral defilement, and, as there is an eternal antagonism between sin and holiness, or between the "flesh"—carnal mind—and the Holy Spirit (Rom. viii, 7), both must be made absolutely holy to enter heaven. So far then as regeneration not being predicable of them, my Bible bears me out in believing that they are both regenerated and sanctified when dying in infancy—not unconditionally, but because they are "in the condition" of justification, etc., which is the earnest (surity, pledge) of sanctification. "Except ye," adults, "become [get into the state of] little children, ye can not enter heaven," is the divine standard (John. iii, 3, and Matt. xviii, 3).

One other point "Gilderoy" says he gets from his books, "that the present state of man is a gracious state"—that a man may be sanctified wholly throughout, soul, body and spirit, and that the "sin" that was regenerated in him will remain; that there is no state or condition or operation of grace that will ever take it [sin] out of him while the world stands.

An incident that came within our observation best illustrates this position. A learned Baptist divine, with open Bible, was trying to convince an unlettered Methodist that there was no such thing as a "second work" of grace. The Methodist waited patiently until the preacher had exhausted his arguments, and then put the following questions to him:

"Did I understand you to say that you did not get rid of the carnal mind in regeneration?"

"Yes," replied the preacher; "regeneration does not rid us of the carnal mind."

"And you say death won't take it out of you?" inquired the Methodist.

"Certainly not," replied the preacher; "that would create eternal confusion."

"Then," said the Methodist; "will you tell me what becomes of the 'carnal mind.'"

The preacher hated to say that it was buried with him in the grave, and would not admit a "second work;" so he said, "I don't know what becomes of it."

Is not this the trilemma "Gilderoy" has inadvertently run into. He says, "There is no state or condition or operation of grace that will ever take the 'sin,' i. e., carnal mind that remains in a regenerated man out of him while the world stands."

Now it follows, if we can't get rid of it—remaining sin—in this world, we do so in some other world—may be, purgatory—and as no "state," "condition," or operation of grace will ever take it out, grace does not save us.

All this grows out of a lack of faith in a God that can create out of nothing, bring a clean thing out of an unclean thing, save a sinner when there is nothing left but sin, regardless of environment, etc. Is it possible, after all, that "man whom God has set his heart upon," the chief object of Christ's redemption, has a "something" in him that exhausts all the resources of grace, and that His grace is not sufficient? Not a very gracious state after all to think that we must go through eternity with a kind of "evil-favoredness" (Deut. xvii, 1), or else something outside of grace must come to the rescue.

It is a well-known fact that two things can not occupy the same space at the same time; that as long as there is a cork on the inside of a jug that jug can not be said to be full of water—it is full except the space displaced by the cork. How a man can be sanctified, wholly throughout, soul, body and spirit, "filled with the spirit," all the fulness of God, and have "sin" remain in him, is about as abstruse and difficult of elucidation as that a jug can be literally full of water while a "cork," however small, is occupying some of the space. The man is full except the space that is displaced by the "sin" that "so easily besets him." J. M. DEAVENPORT.

Preaching the Word.

The greatest calling ever given mortals is that conferred upon those whom God calls to preach. There is no calling so holy or so profound as preaching. There is nothing so far-reaching as the constant preaching of the Word. God has chosen preaching as the method of converting the world. "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel," said Christ. It is the preaching of the gospel that brings conviction and conversion of sinners.

We do not need sensationalism in the pulpit, nor pepper and vinegar, but the bread of life broken to the famishing multitudes. Oh, brethren, let us preach the word, persuasively and convincingly!

In John Bunyan's "Holy War," where Diabolus has Mansoul tied hard and fast, with no desire for King Shaddia, Emmanuel storms the city with his nine captains and ninety-thousand warriors; Ear-gate is stormed and battered down by the brave Captain Boanerges, whose escutcheon was three thunderbolts. Mansoul is taken and Diabolus is expelled. So let us be veritable sons of thunder, as our fathers were, preaching the Word. Ear-gate may be barricaded, but the battering rams of Captain Boanerges break it open! PREACHER.

"Some Points of Methodist Doctrine."

"My old books teach me that original sin, or natural depravity, is in no way affected or changed by regeneration. I am sure this will surprise some of the younger brethren; but this is true. I saw this in my books when a beardless boy."

This is the hold way Bro. "Gilderoy" leads off in his last article under the above caption. Bro. G. adds new light pertaining to his researches in the old books by his careless declaration, "I saw this in my books when a beardless boy." The gist of his articles are then, perhaps, the interpretations of a tender mind, and not the mature conclusions of his riper age; for it is quite evident from the above excerpt that he has not reviewed, at least, a few of his old books. How does he make the above doctrine harmonize with the following plain comment from Wesley's Notes on Romans vi, 6: "Our old man—coeval with our being, and as old as the fall, our evil nature; a strong and beautiful expression for that entire depravity and corruption which by nature spreads itself over the whole man, leaving no part uninfected. This in a believer is crucified with Christ, mortified, gradually killed, by virtue of our union with him; that the body of sin—all evil tempers, words, and actions, which are the members of the old man, might be destroyed." Now, this is the teaching of the Bible and Wesley's Notes on this mooted question, two old books which Bro. G. admits as Standards, and it seems to me to conflict with—yea, to be in direct contradiction to his strange and novel theology. Our standards teach the removal of the old man or original sin through Christ; only Bro. G. interprets language a little different from most people.

Again, a very ingenious stroke is discovered in his confounding original sin with the idea of one's privilege or possibility or aptness to sin. Adam in his purity was not without this prerogative or possibility, yet he was without even original sin. Thus a man, even though perfected in love, is by no means beyond the possibility of sin, yet through the precious blood of Jesus he may be saved from original sin, which Mr. Wesley explains as natural depravity, corrupt nature, which comprehends as a never-failing consequence an idolatrous inclination, inordinate love of the world, self-will, pride, envy, covetousness, to which St. John refers in this passage, "The lust of the flesh, the lust of the eyes and the pride of life;" and this he teaches is to be eradicated from a believer's heart at sanctification. Consult Wesley's Sermons on "Original Sin," "Of Sin in Believers," "Repentance of Believers" (especially III., ¶ 2), "Christian Perfection," on text, "Not as though I had already attained, either were already perfect;" and "Christian Perfection," on text, "Let patience have her perfect work," etc. Also read his "Plain Scriptural Account."

I could give other references to the old books; but it is not for me to controvert the theories of Bro. G. or any one opposing the second-blessing movement since "I have not (myself) already attained, either were already perfect." I have indeed been surprised that none have risen to champion the second-blessing brethren against Bro. G. when he leaves the bars down behind him and browses here and there in their precious garden lot without any protest or disturbance from them. Bro. G.'s fallacy is discovered in the remote, far-fetched and "vanishing," incomprehensible something, or might be which his fancy creates and musters on parade as the much-discussed inbred or original sin, which creation is a veritable ghost. Let us hear from some of our brethren from among the second-blessingists; there are many eager readers interested in this subject and are craving light.

Something to Read.

Barbee & Smith, agents Methodist Publishing House, Nashville, Tenn. have just issued a pamphlet (price, fifteen cents) called, "Entire Sanctification, by Lovick Pierce, D. D., father of the late Bishop Pierce, of the M. E. Church, South." It was called for by the General Conference of Atlanta in the form of a sermon, and to preserve it, it was placed in its present form. As he has been dead several years, it can be read by that class of preachers and laymen that will not listen to any present advocate of this Methodist doctrine. You can note the advanced views, if any, now prevailing. It may convince some that, perhaps, after all, this "sanctification craze," as some term it, is not of the devil, but has for its object the glory of God and the happiness of believers. Get it, and lend to your neighbors. It has helped me. Oh, for a revival in the Methodist Church, South, of pure and undefiled religion!

The "Second-Blessing" Theory.

There is real philosophy, genuine common sense, in the doctrines of the Bible. It really ignores mere theories. Translators have, in some instances, confused the reader by using such terms as holiness, perfection and sanctification as synonyms. Writers of this day, especially on the doctrine of sanctification, are confounding these words to a degree that is astonishing. Christ says of himself, "I sanctify myself"—that is, I set myself apart for this purpose. He did not become holier in so doing, for he was infinitely holy in himself. This expression of Christ should be the guide in the use of the word "sanctify." It, as a doctrine, should mean nothing else at any time. I, as a sinner, chose Satan as my master. I set myself apart for his service. Under conviction for sin by the Holy Spirit, I set myself apart for Christ's service. On choosing Christ, he accepted me, pardoning all my sins, and regenerating my soul. I was a "new creature in Christ Jesus," "a babe in Christ." I then began a holy life, in so far as I obeyed the laws of spiritual life. I lived a holy life as a moral agent; sometimes more, sometimes less holy, as I more or less thoroughly used the means and obeyed the laws of spiritual life. The more thoroughly I used these means of grace, the more rapidly I grew in grace; the more rapidly I grew in grace, the more rapidly I went on to perfection, or approximated the moral likeness of God. When I asked God to save me, he did save me, or else he deceived me, for he says, "Ask, and ye shall receive;" "Believe, and you shall be saved." If I am saved, I am entirely cleansed from sin; not only pardoned of past sins, but purified from inbred sin—a whole child of God, a "new creature in Christ Jesus." Now I see the theory of the "second blessing" makes God a liar. I am conscious that I asked God to save me, and did, at that moment, "believe in him with all my heart;" and to say he did not fully save me is to make God a liar. There is blasphemy in the "second-blessing" theory, awful blasphemy; and it is simply wrong to allow our pulpits and churches to be used for this purpose. If God can not save me at one effort of his power, authority and grace to save, then he is not omnipotent, or omniscient, or infinite in grace. It requires no more effort upon God's part to pardon one sin than to pardon a million, or to cleanse all the soul than a part of it. It requires the same faith, as a condition, in the pardon of one sin as in thousands, and for the cleansing of a part of the soul as for the cleansing of the whole. Strange God these "second-blessing" theorists make our God! Pardons all the transgressions, but only cleanses a part of the moral nature, leaving the subject neither fit for heaven or hell. God can't send him to hell, for he is not under condemnation; he is pardoned. He can't take him to heaven, for he is not wholly pure. The system of salvation is simple. I am a moral agent; therefore, have a moral nature. I am told "to ask, and I shall receive; to believe, and I shall be saved;" that "now is the accepted time." I now ask, now believe, now am saved, and God's veracity guarantees it. The "second-blessing" theorists are doing much harm in that they are making an omnipotent God unable to do what he says he will. Their subjects are either unconverted men or backsliders; nothing else.

Bro. Needham's Call for Help for the West.

MR. EDITOR: In your paper, of May 30, Rev. George Needham, of the Denver Conference, presents what seems to him the claims of our work "in the West," to the patronage of our General Board of Missions.

At the late meeting of the Board, about which Bro. Needham writes, Dr. Hoss very seriously doubted the propriety of keeping up our appropriations to that section of the country. There are four Conferences in that far-away Northwest, viz: Columbia Conference, with 20 pastoral charges, 1,177 members, and reports a "net loss" of 86 members. Denver Conference, with 14 charges, 928 members; "net loss," 205 members. East Columbia Conference: Charges, 22; members, 1,473; "net gain," 174. Montana Conference: Charges, 13; members, 768; "net gain," 101. Total: 4 Conferences, 69 charges, 4,346 members; net loss, 16. The appropriation to the four Conferences is $14,285. Of this amount, the Denver (Bro. Needham's) Conference gets $4,940—a fraction over $353.80 to each pastoral charge in the Conference. Exclusive of the "stations," the appropriation to the four Conferences averages more than $255 to each of the "charges" in the Conferences. What return has the $15,000 put into those Conferences last year given us? A clear loss of 16 members!

About one-fourteenth of all our collections for foreign missions goes into these four Conferences among Christian people—and largely Methodist people—giving us a return of 16 below zero.

Now that we begin to inquire into the cause of the failure there, we are calmly informed that "one cause of failure is the opposition in the home church."

The Denver Conference has absorbed about $100,000 of our missionary funds, and reports 14 pastoral charges, with 928 members!

If you figure on it a little, you will see that it costs us about as much to sustain our church up there among the civilized people of that region as it does to plant and train it among heathens.

The M. E. Church is there, and firmly established. It costs too much to keep our people from that church.

Give this money to heathens.

Butterfly Sins.

Sin as a caterpillar is bad enough; but sin as a butterfly is a thousand times worse. The butterfly, for all its gorgeous coloring, is only a caterpillar with wings. The swallow recognizes it as a worm, and makes his dinner off it in spite of the wings. So sin is the same disgusting thing at bottom, however much concealed under some pleasant, attractive name.

In the interests both of truth and of virtue the circumlocutions and euphemisms at present so much in vogue ought to be sternly discarded. Not many comprehend the power of words. To change the name of a thing is equivalent with most persons to changing its character. The true name of a sin is the best exposure of it, strips off its seductiveness, and sets it forth in the glaring light of its own grossness. The effort to do away with these plain, homely words and gild over wickedness must be resisted.

He who loosely alludes to the devil as "the old Nick," or "his satanic majesty," has done something to put out the fires of righteous indignation against the Evil One. The smooth, fair phrases under which crimes are so frequently alluded to in the public prints do much to debauch public sentiment. Adultery is an unfashionable word; so is lying and theft; but if these terms were faithfully applied to what are pleasantly called "marital infidelities," "commercial inveracities," "financial irregularities," it would be much better for the moral health of the community. Conversation is educational. Let us keep to the strong Anglo-Saxon words wherein yea is yea and nay is nay, lest we fall into condemnation.

Little Things of Life.

Why is it that we so easily forget that the little things in life are what make it easy or hard? A few pleasant words, a warm hand-clasp, a cordial letter, are simple things, but they are mighty in their influence on the lives of those about us, adding a ray of hope to many disconsolate hearts, giving a bit of courage to disappointed, weary ones, and helping to make our own lives sweeter at the same time. Few people realize how much the little attentions of every-day life mean to their associates in the home, the church, the business place. It is generally a lack of consideration which makes one forget the tiny pleasantries, but lack of consideration is really one form of selfishness, and selfishness is not considered a desirable quality. Remember that the little things in life, either good or bad, count for more with those we love than we ever know, and we should be watchful of our actions and our words.—Selected.

The Secret of Peace.

Accustom yourself gradually to carry prayer into all your daily occupations. Speak, act, work in peace, as if you were in prayer, as indeed you ought to be.

Do everything without eagerness, in the spirit of grace. As soon as you perceive your natural impetuosity gliding in, retire quietly within, where is the kingdom of God. Listen only to the leadings of grace; then say and do nothing but what the Holy Spirit shall put in your heart. You will find that you will become more tranquil, that your words will be fewer and more effectual, and that, with less effort, you will accomplish more good.—Fenelon.

When Pilate washed his hands in the presence of the Jews he really thought that he was throwing off all responsibility for the crime he was about to commit. How many people to-day fall into the same awful mistake! Get a man to the point that he feels he must do wrong for the sake of his party or his business, and he enters a formal protest against the act and then goes and does it as if he had purchased the right to do it. Get a hundred men into a fever for making money fast, and they will organize a corporation in which they can break the commandments at pleasure because the basin and water are always at hand to wash off the blood.

Most words grow old with years, but they change so little in appearance that we are easily deceived with regard to their strength. As when we comfort ourselves with the thought that we are bearing our "cross" like Jesus—when we are in the habit of calling every trifling annoyance, or burden, or thorn-scratch, or simple duty, a cross.—Richmond Advocate.

The angels must witness with wonder the ingenuity for uselessness which some mortals display throughout their whole lives. To do nothing aggressively seems the right of some men's ambition.—The Observer.

The same spirit of enterprise put into the work of the church which Americans generally put into their business would work out a wonderful harvest for the Lord.—Religious Telescope.

If only for an hour, man gets at least a glimpse of the larger, nobler life, the grind is taken away from life, and visions of peace stir the energies of hope.—Berry.

I know not how many more Sabbaths God may give me, and it would be a poor preparation for my first Sabbath in heaven to have slighted my last Sabbath on earth.

Life can be a failure by thinking it so. Moreover, your failure will cause failure in others, by suggestion. Don't set loose the vibrations of failure.

Do little things now; so shall big things come to thee by and by asking to be done.—Persian Proverb.

MRS. BEN L. JONES, Dist. Sec.
Sunny Side, Miss.

A most interesting and encouraging work is being done by our Mississippi Dr. Anne Walter in the hospital at Suchow. She said: . . . "If all the missionary auxiliaries and Epworth Leagues, and even the Board of the Home Work, could see the myriads of little children in need of hospital care, I am sure they would help me with a children's ward. We need it, oh, so much! . . . The medical work, . . . a key to unlock the doors of homes otherwise closed against the gospel. . . . In the hospital untiring effort has been made to teach the patients of the great Physician. Under Mrs. Campbell's direction services are held regularly in the chapel, while the Bible women and nurses do constant and beautiful work in the wards. It is our great desire to be able to follow each patient to her home and keep them always under our influence. . . . I am going to have a children's ward, if it is possible, and I believe it is. Even more than this, I want and urgently need another physician. This work has always been imperfectly managed, and the opportunity is surely ours for trebling the work done this year."

If it be true that "by placing children for the first ten years of life under infidel teachers" makes a nation of infidels, what a powerful incentive is given to stress this beautiful, promising work!

Dr. Walter made $1,000 outside of her appointed labors, and gave it to the Board. She was not in the regular employ of the Board, and they justly returned it to her.

"David Livingstone's prayer: 'God had an only Son, and he was a missionary and a physician. A poor imitation of him I am, or hope to be. But in this service I mean to live, and in it I wish to die.'"

Striking facts: . . . "Medicine and religion go together in the thought of the non-Christian man. He is ready to receive them together from the Christian missionary. 'The recovery from disease is the kindliest exhibition of divine power, and the Christian medical missionary occupies a lofty vantage-ground in his work.' Of the twenty stations in the regions of the English Presbyterian Hospital at Swatow, China, seven or eight are said to owe their origin to hospital patients. In the hospital of the London Missionary Society at Amoy it is said twelve or fourteen thousand towns are yearly represented. . . . All these instillinions illustrate the power of medical missions to lessen the anti-foreign feeling, to diminish the power of superstition, and to exhibit the unselfish character of the Christian religion. Medical missions have opened the way into many countries where prejudice otherwise shut out all Christianity. It was so in Jeypore, India, and in Korea. The story is the same in every land whither the medical missionary goes as to the effects in winning the people."—Medical Missionary Record.

Bishop Thoburn tells us that Dr. Clara Swain was the first female physician who ventured to offer her services to the women of India. "She arrived in India as late as 1870, and still remains engaged in her noble work. About the same time Dr. J. L. Humphrey made the first attempt to give Indian women a training in medicine. In this work he was ably seconded by Dr. Swain, and in due time it was fully demonstrated that the women of India could not only be persuaded to receive treatment from physicians of their own sex, but that they themselves could be trained for the medical profession, and thus a lucrative employment be found for them, and at the same time a service of unspeakable value rendered to the secluded women of India, who previously had been shut off from all medical aid. Other women physicians soon followed Miss Swain. . . . It thus happened that the way was prepared for what is now known as the 'Dufferin movement.' A returned woman missionary was honored with an audience by Queen Victoria, and ventured to speak to Her Majesty of the need of medical help for the women of India; and when Lord Dufferin was appointed Viceroy, the Queen warmly commanded the subject to Lady Dufferin, who chanced to be admirably fitted in every way for taking the lead in such a work. . . . It ought not to be forgotten, however, that but for the missionary women the 'Dufferin movement' would most certainly never have been inaugurated."

"A medical missionary has been termed 'a missionary and a half.' May I not say that a trained nurse, well developed in Christian character, versed in the Scriptures, and consecrating herself and her opportunities to Christ, is a double missionary?"—Life and Light.

Is it not the will of our heavenly Father that some of our consecrated Christian women prepare to become medical missionaries?

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. J. C. Park, Booneville, Miss.: "The greatest meeting Booneville ever had just closed. It embraced from May 17 to 31; was conducted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh under his gospel tent, and resulted in the salvation of nearly all the town. Bro. McIntosh preached a plain gospel—repentance, faith, obedience, consolous change of heart—and, as a result, the conversions were clear, bright, distinct. Two hundred claim regeneration; one hundred and twelve go to the different churches of the town; others will join in the country and adjoining towns. Men were converted who had not been to service in fifteen years—converted in their places of business all alone (guess this was excitement). Many gray-haired men, who had spent threescore and ten in sin were brought to Christ and now revel as new-born babes. Nine old Confederate veterans—brave soldiers—enlisted (volunteers) under the banner of our Captain and have become terrors to the enemies of our Lord. Sheriff, mayor, postmaster—men of age and influence—were saved; leading business and professional men have changed their lives; twenty-four fathers have claimed the fatherhood of God; five mothers have turned with their precious ointment to Jesus. Seventy-five family altars have been erected; all the older of the town ponred into the streets; dancing discarded, and Booneville is a new town. Many preachers of the district came and worked with us. We give all instruments due credit, but when we get to heaven we will tell the angels, 'Jesus did it all.' Corinth district is taking fire. Corinth, Iuka, Booneville have had great revivals; the brethren of the other charges are planning, trusting and expecting, and, under the leadership of our own presiding elder, Rev. H. R. Tucker, Corinth district will make her best report this Fall."

TO MY DEAR BRETHREN.

(In the Ministry Especially.)

My health has been very poor ever since about the middle of September. The latter part of last year my trouble was of a malarial nature, which toward the close of the year was attended with sciatica. I arrived here Jan. 19 (late owing to family and personal affliction); started the next day to an appointment and made one round. Have not attempted to preach since the second Sunday in March, having been confined to bed more than two months, scarcely able to stand or even sit. During these long days and weeks and months when I was not too much under the influence of pain or morphine (for quite the greater portion of the time that I was not in the custody of the one I was in that of the other), I read some and thought more. My reading was somewhat promiscuous; but, next to my Bible and "Rays of Light in the Valley of Sorrow," I delighted to get the ADVOCATE. While one in my condition could scarcely be expected to enjoy all of the contents of the ADVOCATE—for example, one brother will diddle his presiding elder, and others (not the editor) try to riddle their fellows—yet, in the main, it is good. While I am virtually ineffective—can only hobble a little with crutch, and am not able to attend to the work of the Master—I very much like to hear good reports from the brethren. I would be glad indeed to hear from any of the brethren of this or of my old Conference by private letter. I have had very limited social intercourse during my sickness. There is one local preacher near me who has called upon me once, also a Baptist preacher, who has called twice. My physician has visited me from one to three times in each twenty-four hours, and still comes. If my spiritual interest has been looked after as well as my physical, I would doubtless be on a higher spiritual plane.

May the Lord specially bless our dear editor and all the faithful representatives of our beloved church!

BRO. N. B. NORWOOD.

As the many readers of the ADVOCATE have heard of the sudden death of Bro. Norwood by drowning, on June 3, between the hours of one and two o'clock P. M., I think it my duty to give them the full particulars as to how it happened.

Bro. Norwood was a great lover of sailing; so much so, that soon after coming to this charge he bought him a skiff and sail, and most always when he visited his parishioners he went in his skiff, especially when the wind was favorable. So it happened the day of his death. He had gone down about a mile below the parsonage on foot, intending to return in his skiff, which he had loaned to a brother the day before to take his family home from church. After going out in the bayou with a brother to get some oysters, and visiting some of his people, he got in his skiff to return to the parsonage. The wind blew very hard that day, and the river was very rough. Bro. Wash Harris fixed his sail for him by taking out the sprit, making it perfectly safe from upsetting; but after he had gotten up the river about one-fourth of a mile he was seen to get up and go forward apparently to fix something about the sail. By this time the skiff had gotten out about 300 yards from shore, where the swells were running high, making the skiff toss very rapidly; so much so that when he turned around, going back to the stern, he was thrown out into the river. The skiff immediately sailed out of his reach, leaving him nothing to catch hold of until help could reach him. He cried for help, but, before he could be reached by two men who were in another skiff some distance off, who immediately went to his rescue, he sank in about 100 feet of water, never to rise again, only as a lifeless corpse. Friends immediately went to dragging the bottom to recover the body, but to no avail. There was a vigilant watch kept day and night, but, notwithstanding all this, the body was only found the following Saturday eighteen miles below where he was drowned, where it had drifted ashore. A party of friends immediately went after it, and brought it up to the parsonage. After the inquest was held, and verdict given as accidental drowning, it was given a decent burial, in Wesley Churchyard, Sunday morning, at 8:30 o'clock.

Only one little mound alone
Marks the spot where his body lies;
But, thanks to God! his spirit is gone
To dwell with Jesus beyond the skies!

MRS. MOLLIE M'GEHEE SNELL IN GLOSTER, MISS.

On May 11 Sister Snell commenced a series of meetings in the Methodist Church at this place, and we had hoped ere this to have seen her work here reported by a more able pen than ours; but, inasmuch as no such report has come to our notice, and with a desire to contribute something in the way of gratitude for the wonderful good she has effected in this town, we have undertaken, though with much reluctance, to report the meeting as best we can.

On her arrival here she found the religious status of the people sadly in need of a revival, and, besides this, there was a manifest division in public sentiment as to the propriety of women appearing in a ministerial capacity. Nevertheless her gentle and unostentatious manners, her entire freedom from bigotry or vanity, and her unmistakable earnestness and devotion to the Master's cause, very soon swept away all traces of opposition and curiosity, and prejudice vanished from the hearts of the people like mist before the rising sun.

God has owned and blessed her labor here, for in the short space of eight days she stirred this community as it has never been moved before. She did much in bringing about a reunion of our Methodist forces in Gloster. Entire unity and fellowship now abound in our church, and a new glad song seems to be in every heart. We can not view her in any other light than as the chosen medium of God in the accomplishment of this wonderful work. We consider it one of our highest privileges to have been permitted to attend this meeting. Each service was attended with a power that was beautiful and wonderfully grand. We will not attempt to tell the amount of good that she has been instrumental in doing, for eternity alone can do this. Her visit to our town will long be remembered with delight, not only by Methodists, but by all denominations. Her labor as a Christian, and the unflinching zeal with which she grasped the situation here, and the high and noble courage which she exhibited in the performance of her work, has won for her a warm place in the hearts of the people of Gloster, not only as a philanthropist, but as one who stands out as one of the purest messengers that ever carried the glad news of a full salvation to a dying world. May God speed her in her mission of love, and send her back to us at Gloster just as soon as possible, is the sincere wish not only of your humble subscriber, but hundreds of others who are hungering for the bread she is ever dispensing.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The twenty-sixth annual session of the Aberdeen District Conference convened in Okolona, Miss., May 24, 1895; Rev. S. M. Thames, P. E., in the chair.

The representation was good; all the pastors except two were present, and a fair representation of delegates. Among the visiting brethren were Revs. J. A. Bowen, of Macon, Miss.; J. W. Malone, of Grenada Collegiate Institute; G. W. Gordon, G. W. Bachman, our Sunday-school agent and colporteur, and others.

Bro. Thames, to the manner born, presided and very closely questioned each pastor about his work on important lines. The reports as made by the pastors indicate a good work as being done. Some of the pastors have held revival meetings in which souls were born unto God and the church strengthened. The finances of the district are better than at the same time last year. The connectional claims are being taken earlier this year than usual, and are being pushed with faith and earnestness by the presiding elder and preachers. A resolution was passed by the Conference that nothing less than one hundred cents on the dollar is expected on all the collections ordered by the Annual Conference. So mote it be.

Prominence was given to divine worship. The preaching was all good and full of the Holy Ghost. Sunday was a day long to be remembered by many. Dr. W. T. J. Sullivan preached the eleven o'clock sermon from John 1, 1: "And the word was God." The power of Christ as brought out of the text thrilled all hearts and many souls were made happy. The Doctor is a master workman.

The next District Conference goes to Aberdeen. We discussed the propriety of leaving out Sunday in our next District Conference, so that all the preachers can attend the Conference to its close instead of leaving the Conference on Saturday to fill their pulpits on Sunday.

The good people of Okolona entertained the Conference royally. May the blessings of the good Lord be theirs!

J. M. BARNES, Sec.

The assistant secretary, Thos. H. Dorsey, sends us a report of this District Conference which contains the following items not embraced in the above:

Rev. J. W. Raper was recommended to the Annual Conference for admision on trial in the traveling connection.

Rev. W. D. Wendall was recommended for deacon's orders. Bros. Geo. J. Leftwich, F. J. McDonald, E. L. Sherwood and J. A. Mayfield were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Bros. S. T. Harkey and F. M. Street were elected alternates.

When you want to know what Christianity is, look at Christ, not at the hypocrites in the church.

The devil is not throwing many stones at the man who is not as religious in business as he is in prayer meeting.

Commencement at Millsaps College.

The third annual commencement at Millsaps College was inaugurated on Friday morning, June 7, at eleven o'clock, by the "Oscar Kearney Andrews Declamation Medal" contest, in which six young gentlemen, all members of the Freshman class, took part. The contest was spirited and close, the declamation of the participants unusually good, and the selections of such character as to command unabated interest throughout the entire program.

Mr. J. M. Alford; Mr. C. G. Andrews, Jr., of Vicksburg; Mr. A. H. Cauthen; Mr. W. H. Hargrove, of Sardis; Mr. J. P. T. Stevens, and Mr. W. C. Wells, Jr., of Jackson, were the contestants. The medal was awarded to C. G. Andrews, Jr.

The weather on Saturday afternoon and Sunday morning compelled a change in the place of the delivery of the commencement sermon, and at eleven o'clock, on Sunday morning, in spite of the rain a large congregation assembled in the auditorium of the First Methodist Church to hear Bishop Hendrix. The great preacher was at his best, and for nearly an hour commanded the undivided and delighted attention of his cultured audience.

His text was Hebrews xiii, 8: "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to-day and forever." His theme was the greatest that human minds have ever studied or that angelic intelligences ever pondered. It was a masterly discourse.

The editor of the ADVOCATE had been invited to preach the evening sermon, and many of his old parishioners and friends were disappointed that he could not be with us. A very acceptable substitute, however, was found in Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, of Yazoo City, who preached a very fine sermon from Psalms viii, 3-6, and his subject, "The Dignity of Man." Dr. Featherstun by this sermon has added to his reputation as a scholarly and forcible preacher.

At nine o'clock, on Monday morning, the Board of Trustees were called to order in the college library by the president, Bishop C. B. Galloway. Almost the whole Board was present. The report of the college was read and referred to a committee. The report shows a most gratifying state of things. The grade of scholarship has been improved; morals of the students have been generally satisfactory, and the religious sentiment of a large part of the student body is pronounced. The matriculation during the session has reached 205, of whom 60 have been preachers and preachers' sons. The treasurer's report then read shows the gratifying fact that not a dollar of indebtedness of any kind exists against the institution.

At eleven o'clock the spacious college chapel was filled by a sympathetic and expectant audience assembled to hear the annual address of Dr. J. H. Kirkland, the chancellor of the Vanderbilt University. This distinguished young educator, of whom our church is justly proud, delivered a scholarly and instructive address on the "Status of American Institutions and the Duties of American Citizens." It was discriminating and clear, and calculated to inspire the young men to whom he spoke with a conviction of the importance of enlightened, high-minded and unselfish patriotism.

At 4 P. M., while the Board of Trustees were in session in the lecture-room of the First Methodist Church, a fair audience was assembled in the college chapel to witness the contest of a number of young preachers for the "W. A. Gunning Prize Medal" for Scripture reading. This medal was awarded to R. A. Clarke, of Kosciusko.

Realizing the importance of good reading and "proper pulpit deportment," Mr. W. A. Gunning has offered a medal for the reading of the Scriptures, a hymn and the making of announcements. The contestants for this medal assembled at the hall in the afternoon at four o'clock. There were five of these young preachers seeking for better equipment for service in the vineyard of their Lord. Mr. J. M. Combs read Romans xii, and Hymn No. 578. Mr. R. A. Clarke read Psalm xxvii, and Hymn No. 522. Mr. H. B. Hines read Romans v, and Hymn No. —. H. P. Lewis read Luke xv from the fifteenth through the thirty-second verse, and Hymn 345. G. D. Purcell read Psalm ciii, and Hymn 43. This contest is one of the most interesting of the college exercises, and so well did these young men acquit themselves that more than one person was heard to congratulate himself that he was not on the committee to award the medal, as he would not know how to bestow it.

The young men have good voices, had beautiful selections in both Scripture and hymn reading, and made their announcements concisely and gracefully. They will go from Millsaps College into the pulpit as trained men—"workmen that needeth not to be ashamed." Truly such young men are the hope of the church.

For the above report we are indebted to the facile pen of Bro. A. F. Watkins.

We reached Jackson, Monday, a little after noon. The Board of Trustees held an afternoon session. Leave of absence for one year was granted to Prof. Swearingen, of the chair of Latin and Greek. He will spend the time in Germany and Italy studying his specialty. His place will be filled during his absence by Prof. Hanna, who has filled the chair of Natural Science during the session just closed. The occupant of this chair, Prof. Muckenfuss, has been absent during the year, spending a considerable portion of his time in university work in Germany, where he has taken the degree of Ph.D. The lofty aspirations of these young men will appear in a clearer light when it is remembered that each of them has already two diplomas — one from a college and one from a university.

Prof. Weber, of the chair of English, also a university graduate, will spend the Summer in Chicago, pursuing studies connected with his specialty The Board heartily approves the course of these young men. The public will not be slow to appreciate the merits of an institution whose faculty manifest such devotion to their profession, and such a determination to keep themselves abreast of the age.

On Monday night the Lamar and Galloway Literary Societies held their annual debate. The representatives of the Lamar Society were T. S. Scott and Walter White. The Galloway was represented by J. M. Stevens and W. B. Jones. The medal was awarded to Mr. Walter White. The speeches were highly creditable, showing elaborate preparation and considerable oratorical ability.

Tuesday was commencement day. There were three graduates — H. M. Austin, of Hinds county; J. G. Lilly, of Pontotoc, and H. S. Stevens, of Perry. Their subjects were of a practical character and were treated with great good sense. So thorough a mastery of the subject is rarely displayed on such occasions. Their diction was choice. What is usually known as "sophomoric" or "school-boy" rhetoric was conspicuous by its absence. Their thoughts were expressed with clearness, force and elegance, without any meretricious ornamentation. Their oratory also was above the average of such occasions. This is especially true of Mr. H. S. Stevens, who won the medal for oratory. His address both in its matter and in its delivery was highly creditable. Millsaps has cause to congratulate herself upon the character of her first graduating class. We predict that they will reflect honor upon their alma mater.

The baccalaureate address of Dr. Murrah was excellent. The remarks of Mr. C. H. Alexander who presented the medals were very appropriate and were received with great applause.

We were domiciled during our brief stay in Jackson in the hospitable home of Bishop Galloway. The Bishop seems none the worse physically for his wanderings in many lands. A number of preachers were in attendance upon the commencement from Mississippi and North Mississippi. Millsaps grows upon us. We had a high appreciation of the importance of this enterprise from its incipiency, and each successive year has only intensified our faith in it as one of the mightiest agencies for the upbuilding of the church of God in our midst.

To the Methodists of Mississippi.

At the request of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, we state a few facts which, it is hoped, may prove an effectual appeal. The term just closed has been the most successful in the history of our college. There was a gratifying increase in the number of students, and the character of the student body is worthy of high praise. The college owes not a dollar, the faculty has been fully and promptly paid, and all the current expenses met. Provision has been made for increasing our equipment in the science department.

But one fund is in arrears—a most sacred fund—and for that we make appeal. This is the fund to be raised by the Conferences for the education of young ministers and the sons of ministers. We had sixty of such students the past term, to provide for whom requires the expenditure of $1,800. To meet this the Conferences raised last year $1,064,—$478.50 from the North Mississippi Conference, and $585.50 from the Mississippi Conference. We urge our pastors and presiding elders to see to it that the full assessment be raised and forwarded to the treasurer. It is our desire to provide the church with a thoroughly trained ministry, and to give timely aid to meritorious young men of limited means; but in this purpose we will be stayed unless the church makes more liberal response to a cause so worthy. We plead for every dollar of the assessment and more. It is impossible to overestimate the importance of this fund. In a few years the church in Mississippi will begin to reap a large and rich harvest from this outlay. We send out our first class of graduates this year —splendid young men of whom the college will have occasion to be proud. The numbers will increase until these boys will soon be prominent in the pulpit and all other public and private walks of life. We have a great opportunity. May the enlightening spirit give us a clear vision to discern it, and the courage, even to sacrifice, to meet it!

Commencement at Silliman.

On Sunday, the ninth, we had the pleasure of preaching the commencement sermon at Silliman Institute, Clinton, La. The exercises were held in the new college chapel just completed—an admirable auditorium. It is of good size, and seated with handsome opera chairs. The acoustics are unusually good. A large audience greeted us in spite of a continuous rain. The college choir furnished choice music. On account of having to attend a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Millsaps College, we could not remain to take in the commencement exercises, which ended on Wednesday. Five young ladies received their diplomas. The school is in a very prosperous condition, and is doing excellent work. It is located on a lot of fifteen acres. It has, therefore, plenty of room. It is surrounded on three sides by a beautiful grove of oak, beech, and other native forest trees. The buildings are of sufficient dimensions to accommodate, perhaps, a hundred boarders, and are in fine condition, a considerable sum having been spent recently in putting them in order. Our Presbyterian brethren are to be congratulated on having at the head of the institution such a wide-awake, progressive man as Prof. Ramsey. The institution has steadily increased in patronage since he took charge of it. During our stay in Clinton we were delightfully domiciled at the Institute.

Good Seed in Fertile Soil.

The most auspicious day in the annals of Southern Methodism was the day when it began the publication of juvenile missionary periodicals. Hitherto the cause of missions has hardly touched the great heart of the church. Our contributions to the missionary cause come from the few, not the many. Hundreds of thousands of our members give nothing at all for the spread of the gospel. Moreover, we fear that only a small percentage of those who do give to this cause do so from the proper motive. Many give from a feeling of church pride, or because they are assessed, or from some other similar motive. A few only, we are constrained to believe, give from a sense of gratitude to God, or out of pure, disinterested love to their fellowmen. This will be changed in a large measure when a new generation comes upon the stage that has been fed from infancy upon such pabulum as is furnished in the periodical literature now sent out from Nashville. "Early impressions are the most lasting." "Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

Such seed-sowing as we are now doing in a virgin soil can not fail to produce a bountiful harvest. The extent of the harvest depends upon the extent of the sowing. Every pastor and every mission worker should aid in the sowing. Every single family in the church should be supplied with one or more of these periodicals. This is no Utopian dream. The prices of these periodicals are so low that their universal dissemination is possible. We are rejoiced to know that many of our pastors are bestirring themselves in this matter. Let their example prove contagious. Laymen also can do much. We know of no way in which a small amount of money can be spent more advantageously than in sending this literature into the homes of those who are unable to pay for it.

BOOKS.

GROWTH IN GRACE. A Sermon by Atticus G. Haygood, Sr., preached before the District Conference of the Oxford District, North Georgia Conference, M. E. Church, South, held at Covington, Ga., July 18, 1885, and published by formal request of the Conference. Price: Single copy, ten cents; per dozen, seventy-five cents; by the hundred, six dollars. Atlanta, Ga.: The Foote & Davies Co. 1895.

The above pamphlet by Bishop Haygood was published about ten years ago, and several thousand copies were sold. The present edition is just from the press in response to a popular demand. The work is written in the author's best vein. The text is II. Peter iii, 18—"Grow in grace," etc. In its elucidation large use is made of the Holy Scriptures. It is full of soul food. A careful, prayerful perusal of it can not fail to be strengthening to every true child of God. It merits, and no doubt will have, an extensive circulation. Pastors will do themselves and the church a service by placing it in the homes of our people. The price is such as to place it within reach of all. Those desiring it should write to Mrs. A. G. Haygood, Oxford, Ga.

NOTES.

Mrs. J. W. Lambuth left San Francisco for Japan, July 3.

The postoffice of Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E., of the Louisiana Conference, has been changed from Mansfield to Pelican.

Miss Willard has published a denial of the statement that she is a participant in the work of making a new translation of the Bible.

Rev. T. B. Pierce, editor of the Texas Advocate, and Rev. James Campbell, ex-editor of the same paper, have had their divinity doctored by the Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas.

Under the auspices of the New Orleans Church Extension Society the preachers of the city are now holding open-air meetings in McCarthy Square. The outlook is thought to be encouraging.

Cable dispatches announce that a large number of the pulpits of London, including City Temple, were occupied last Sunday by W. C. T. U. women. Lady Henry Somerset, Miss Willard and Miss Belle Kearney were among the chief speakers.

We are holding every doctrine of the Christian faith more firmly than in any century preceding; and there is not a doctrine that men will not hold more firmly in the next century, if they become possessed of the enthusiasm of humanity.—Phillips Brooks.

We will wait until after the next Presidential election before we join Dr. Hoss in singing the long-meter doxology over the grave of "the bloody shirt." The hateful thing may break the screws with which the amiable Doctor has fastened its coffin lid.

For the last two or three weeks the police of this city, under instructions from the police commissioners, have been making a vigorous effort to enforce the Sunday law. A halt has been called, however, by judicial authority. An organization known as the New Orleans City Protective Association, desiring to replenish its treasury by one of those mammoth Sunday festivals with which our readers are familiar, applied to a court for an injunction restraining the police from interfering with the sale of liquor at the said festival. The injunction was granted. It seems to us that if a court can enjoin the police from enforcing the Sunday law in this case, it can do so in all cases. We verily believe that the enforcement of the Sunday law in this city is a thing of the distant future. Public sentiment has been too much debauched by the Holy Roman Church. Rome must be dethroned before any permanent reform can be accomplished.

The removal of the time limit to the pastorate is one of the live questions in Northern Methodism. The New York Advocate thinks that those who favor the present system need to bestir themselves between now and the next General Conference.

Our prediction in regard to the South Carolina registration injunction has been fulfilled. The Court of Appeals has dissolved Judge Goff's injunction, and the election for delegates to the Constitutional Convention will be held at the appointed time. Not only South Carolina, but the entire nation is to be congratulated. A different decision would have produced sooner or later such internal troubles as this nation has never known.

At the session of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference, held last week at Crystal Springs, the election for officers resulted as follows: President, Miss Addie V. Marshall; vice-president, Mrs. R. R. Parker; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. B. Chatfield; recording secretary, Mrs. A. F. Watkins; treasurer, Miss Mary Andrews; auditor, Mrs. Anna Demoss; editor, Mrs. E. D. Jones. The next meeting will be held in Natchez.

Zion's Herald, in its issue of June 12, has an excellent likeness of the editor of the Nashville Advocate. It also publishes in full his baccalaureate sermon delivered at Lasell Seminary, Concerning the Doctor's visit to Boston, the Herald says:

Dr. Hoss received a most hearty and sincere welcome to Boston. He made a very happy impression as a man of marked ability and of the frankest and most fraternal spirit. Our ministers and laymen vied with each other in expressing their appreciation of his visit.

Sunday night more than half the churches in town were closed, and, with two or three exceptions, the congregations that assembled could have been packed in the ames corners. Reason given: Too hot to leave home. Monday afternoon, with the thermometer at 103 in the shade, several thousand sinners took a fifty-cent sweat bath under a circus tent, while a multitude of sinners and saints paid for the privilege of sweltering two hours on pine boards at the baseball grounds. Reason given: Too hot to stay at home.—Baltimore Advocate.

First Church, Shreveport, Dr. W. H. LaPrade, pastor, has decided to support a missionary in China, or Corea, in addition to the assessment for the year. The money for the purpose, $750, is in hand; and Bishop Hendrix has accepted the offer. The choice of the missionary is, of course, with the General Board. First Church will pay more than one thousand dollars for foreign missions this year, in addition to what may be raised by the Woman's Missionary Society and the children. Jordan Street Church, Bro. Lutz, pastor, will pay assessment in full, and, in addition, undertake something special for China. The visits and influence of Bishop Galloway and Miss Haygood have added much to missionary zeal at Shreveport. This is an example worthy of universal imitation. May it prove contagious!

Christ's way of treating the erring demands our most careful study. It is observable that he so treated such ones as, if possible, to bring them gently out of their error by leading them to apprehend the truth. He sought to make the truth so luminous, so attractive, so sweet, that the most ignorant, the most vicious, would desire it and accept it. He had hot words of reproach for all hypocrites, but never did he scold any other sinners, it mattered not how wicked they had been. This is why he drew publicans and sinners to him and into the truth. He never told such ones how bad they were, but he kept telling them how good wisdom was, how lovely truth was, how beautiful virtue was, how blessed eternal life was. His was a happily winning way, and it should be ours.—Zion's Herald.

The fourth annual session of the Louisiana Chautauqua will be held at Ruston, commencing July 1, and continuing five weeks. All the schools that belong to an up-to-date Chautauqua will be in operation under the management of thoroughly equipped specialists. Half rates will be given by the various railroads. Ruston is in the hill country of Louisiana, in a most salubrious region. The Chautauqua grounds comprise fifteen acres. Springs of clear, cool water abound; and there are mineral springs noted for their health-giving qualities. Ruston is free from the great pest of Southern Louisiana, the mosquito. Excellent boarding accommodations have been provided. A fine programme has been arranged. Among those who are to occupy the platform we notice the following: Rev. T. D. Talmage, Rev. S. P. Jones, Rev. Homer Wilson, Rev. J. F. Foster, Dr. W. S. Penick, Hon. W. J. Bryan, Minor Wallace, J. M. Levin. The attendance during the present session promises to be in excess of any previous session.

Rev. Robert Parvin.

DEAD.

Our dear brother went home from his residence in Gibbs, La., June 4, at 11.15 A. M., after an illness of about five weeks. His disease was phlebitis, commencing in the big toe of the left foot. At times the paroxysms of pain were excruciating, but he would praise God and sing: "How firm a foundation," or some other of soul-lifting melody, until he was shouting happy and would say: "The spiritual has triumphed over the physical." Often he was heard to say he was "nearing home." Until his death was sudden and unexpected. He had ate his breakfast, and, adjusting himself on the bed, with two or three gasps

"His spirit, at a bound,

We mourn him as a beloved brother and co-laborer, but rejoice at his coronation. He is with his Lord, whom he loved so ardently, served so long and faithfully. "He rests from his labors, and his works do follow him."

Who would we miss more at our Annual Conference sessions? Perhaps thousands of souls through his instrumentality have been led to Christ. He had a tact in this. Was unique. True as the needle, and as steel, in his itinerant career of more than forty years. Most of that time on the hardest circuits; short pay, long rides—an industrious and most successful worker. Many will be the stars in his crown. We (I) thank God for Bro. Parvin. We often took sweet counsel together. I have heard him say often, "I was a shouting Methodist ever 40 years, but I have gone away up on the mountain where the spring of full salvation flows," etc. Our brethren know just how he could say a thing, especially such as pertains to personal experience.) Nearly four years ago at Scottsville Camp Meeting, about 3 o'clock in the morning, he, by consecrating all on the altar, and faith, claimed Christ as his sanctifier. I tell you it was known among the denizens of that consecrated encampment. I was present, and shall never forget the clearly obtained experience as told by himself. He was a "witness to these things" at all times and under all circumstances, not only by his words and spirit, but by a consistent, sanctified life to the end. He was cautious and slow in his movements as to this doctrine and experience that was "turning the world upside down." We met together much in prayer, and spoke with the utmost confidence, until he became convicted and obtained the great and inestimable blessing of entire sanctification. He was ardent and earnest in his espousal; he never flinched or retrogaded, although the severest ordeal tests were passed through. Hallelujah! he stood the test. His charity and love for his brethren, who differed with him, was unlimited. He was always on the right side in every question, never faltered in the hottest fight where temperance and Christian principle was involved. His town and community will miss him. Generous, hospitable, almost to a fault. It has always seemed marvelous to me how a man with such meager resources could dispense such large liberality. He was sixty-six years old. Of him it may be said: "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

"O may I triumph so
When all my warfare's past;
And, dying, find my latest foe
Under my feet at last."—Chas. Wesley.

I beg to submit this humble tribute to the memory of our co-laborer and beloved brother in the Lord.

How Mrs. Wm. Henry Makes Money.

I have been so successful in the past few months that I feel it my duty to others by giving them my experience. I have not made less than $18 a day for the last five months, and have not canvassed any. I put a notice in the papers that I am selling the Iron City Dish Washer, and people send for them by the dozen. They give good satisfaction that every family has one. Dishes washed and dried in two minutes. I think any person can easily clear $10 a day, and double that after they get started good. I don't see why anyone should be destitute, when they may just as well be making lots of money if they try. Address the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A. Pittsburg, Pa., and they will give you all instructions and testimonials necessary to succeed.

Martha Washington College.

COMMENCEMENT.

The Abingdon Virginian, of June 7, reporting the commencement of Martha Washington College, says:

"The annual missionary sermon was preached by Rev. R. G. Porter, 'Gilderoy,' of the North Mississippi Conference. The audience expected an able sermon from this noted divine, and they were not disappointed. He took for his text St. Luke xxiv, 45-48. The sermon was a clear and strong exposition of the divine injunction to preach the gospel to all men, and of the methods to be employed as the instruments of God in the world's redemption. The large congregations, as well as the young ladies of the college, gave earnest attention throughout this earnest and eloquent sermon."

* * * * * *

"The address before the graduating class was made by Rev. R. G. Porter, of Mississippi. The speaker considered the elements of true Christian womanhood, and was directed almost entirely to the graduating class. While it contained many humorous veins, it abounded with much timely advice and wholesome truths, and was delivered with force and fervency. He urged upon the young ladies, standing, as it were, upon the threshold of life, the importance of preserving their health, of reading sound literature, good judgment and a strong, but not stubborn will; that the way of promotion was that of self-sacrifice and personal heart purity."

Pastoral and Theological Institute.

The Preachers' Meeting of the Kosciusko district was held in the town of Ackerman, Miss., June 5 and 6, 1895. The Institute was held in the Methodist Church, presided over and conducted according to a well-arranged programme by our beloved presiding elder, Bro. John H. Mitchell. The writer was made secretary.

The town of Ackerman, situated on the Aberdeen branch of the I. C. railroad, about thirty-one miles from Kosciusko, is noted for its hospitality. Bro. W. C. Lester, P. C., is doing a good work, pleasantly situated in a parsonage belonging to the work, and he has the esteem and confidence of his people and the town generally.

There were twelve preachers present belonging in the district; one local preacher, Bro. J. H. Barentine, and one supernumerary, Bro. A. T. Buck, from the Columbus district.

The subjects on programme were all pleasantly and profitably discussed; so much so that the brethren resolved to hold one Institute a year, and selected Kosciusko as its place of next (fourth) meeting.

The subject of Epworth League Mission was made a special theme for Wednesday night, and presented in a very acceptable manner to the audience, by Bros. T. G. Freeman and G. W. Bachman.

Sermon, at 11 o'clock, on Wednesday by Bro. J. A. Poe. Text: I. Cor. ix, 12; and on Thursday, at 11 A. M., by Bro. Thos. Cameron. Text: Phil. i, 14 and 15. The presiding elder having been declared president of the Institute, the following additional officers were elected for the ensuing year: T. G. Freeman, vice-president; J. T. Murrah, secretary; G. W. Bachman, treasurer. The treasurer made a brief, but a very satisfactory report, showing some money on hand.

Winona District Conference.

The Winona District Conference, North Mississippi Annual Conference, will be held at Carrollton, Miss., July 19 21. Bishop Galloway will preside.

The Southern railway has granted reduced rates between Winona and Indianola of one and a third fare on the certificate plan. Tickets will be sold July 16-20, good to return till July 22. When buying your ticket ask railroad agent for certificate showing you have paid full fare to Carrollton, and you can buy return ticket for one-third fare. Trains going west arrive at Carrollton, 8 A. M.; going east, 7:24 P. M.

Let all who will attend the District Conference, and also the Missionary and Parsonage Societies, send in their names at once. J. R. BINGHAM.

There will likely be much confusion and exciting rumors as to cutting of rates, etc., just before we get off for Chattanooga. Rest perfectly assured that Mississippians who go by the official route, over Y. and M. V., I. C., or M. and O., and M. and C., will have the benefit of the lowest rates named by any line and the very best accommodations every way. One fare for the round trip is the maximum rate. The probability is that it will be much lower. Have your grips packed ready to go, for I think you will be able to go cheaper than you can stay at home.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to June, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1.65.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-fourth Annual Camp Meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 10, next, and continue for eight or ten days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the Camp Meeting to begin their journey on July 1, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 1 to 27, inclusive. All trains to stop at Camp Ground station from July 8 to 29, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The Camp Ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet, and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush at the opening of the Camp Meeting, should address communications to Dr. M. F. Tucker, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, Mobile, Ala. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to E. P. Mackie, chairman, New Orleans, La.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the Camp Meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. No gate fee will be exacted on the Sunday of the Camp Meeting. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees is gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to visit the Camp Meeting.

REST.

[An anonymous poem found under the pillow of an American soldier who died in a hospital.]

I lay me down to sleep
With little thought or care,
Whether my waking find
Me here or there.

A bowing, burdened head
That only asks to rest
Unquestioningly upon
The loving breast.

My good right hand forgets
Its cunning now;
To march the weary march
I know not now.

I am not eager, bold,
Nor strong—all that is past;
I am ready not to do
At last, at last.

My half day's work is done,
And this is all my part;
I give my patient God
A patient heart.

And grasp his banner still,
Tho' all its blue be dim;
These stripes, no less than stars,
Lead after him.

A Step Higher.

The principles of business that can be taught are not many; those that can be learned are almost without end. A clerk very soon reaches the place where he has been told all that is actually necessary that he should be told about the details of the business; he falls into the ruts of the house, understands the run of trade, the variations in people and prices, and how to get in and send out goods to the best advantage. But all these details, while they are necessary to be learned, only fit the young man for that particular place, and if he is ambitious he is always looking to something better. Others have been teaching him; it is necessary that he should now teach himself.

A clerk who remains in one position all his life advertises himself lacking in one of two things—ability or ambition. There undoubtedly are instances where a clerk is kept so constantly and continually employed at one task that he has no opportunity to learn anything but his present work, but such instances are very rare. As a general rule, every clerk has some time at his disposal, either at intervals during the day or in the evening. These are hours that he can not afford to throw away. Not that it follows that he must deprive himself of every pleasure, or must desert every form of entertainment. All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, and dullness does not lead to success. But let him have his entertainment as recreation, and not seek it as business, and then he will still have many valuable hours for self-improvement.

One of the prosperous merchants of this city began life as an errand boy in an office. Most boys, and most men, too, for that matter, would say that his position offered but little hope of advancement. The men in the office were busily employed, and saw or spoke to the boy only when they had an errand or order for him. He had no accounts to keep, no writing to do. But the desire being there, the opportunities came. He carried the mail to and from the post-office; watching the letters that passed through his hands, when he found an envelope unusually well addressed he saved it from the waste-basket, and with this before him he began to try to imitate it.

It was his duty to copy the letters in the copying-press, and he read and remembered the phraseology and the style until he could have sat down and, with the topic given him, have dressed it up in the same form.

He was so ready and willing to do any and everything asked of him that the men sent him on many private errands of their own, and in return they could not but answer his questions when he asked about the books or the business. A chance offered where he might do a little writing, and he did the work before anyone there knew that he could. There was some surprise at the good hand he wrote, still more at the good form of his matter, and then he told them how he had learned. He was given a place at the desk, while another boy ran the errands, and before he had ever thought of studying to be a bookkeeper he was one, and a good one.—On the Road to Riches.

Early Impressions.

Let your child always go to sleep with a glad thought in its heart and a smile on its face. The next morning, as it springs from its bed, the glad thought will burst out in songs, and the smiles in shouts of laughter. If a wrong has to be reproved, let the child be assured of forgiveness and let the mother be assured that forgiveness is accepted before the eyes shall close. Let the child fall asleep loving all and assured of the love of all. Then, after the little prayer has been said, the child, at peace with all on earth and with the smile of heaven's love on its face, will drop away into peaceful slumber with its soul all unruffled and unsoiled, as white and smooth as a freshly washed and ironed piece of snow-white linen.

It is always a solemn thing to fall asleep. We can never know where the waking may find us. Any night the rosy child or the healthful mother may sleep into the sleep of death. Then always let the good-night kiss be accompanied with a word of peace, a word of love, and sweet tranquillity. It is a piece of downright cruelty, one of the crimes which law can not reach, for a thoughtless and fretful mother to scold her children away from her presence at night and to drive them to bed with sharp and angry words. Of all the sad sounds ever heard in this sorrowful world of ours, the saddest is the suppressed sob of a little child, the smothered cry of a wounded heart, coming from beneath the bed-clothes, as it weeps itself to sleep because of a mother's unkindness.

The mother may be worn and weary, and the children may be tired and cross, but let no mother ever so far forget herself as to lead her children to forget that she is their mother. Let her remember that not only her words, but the tones in which they were spoken, will, at that most solemn moment, make the deepest and most lasting impression on their tender souls, and that they may determine their weal or woe for eternity.—From "At a Mother's Knee," by J. M. P. Otis, D. D.

Don't Hurry, Young Man.

Many young men are very anxious to get into business. They think they know about all there is to be known. They want higher wages than anyone is able to pay them, and so set up in business for themselves, put in their little savings, run in debt for more, fail to meet their obligations, and soon have the sheriff's flag run out of their window, and find themselves bankrupt in purse, dishonored in the walks of business, and glad to go back and take hold of such service as they had despised and too hastily abandoned.

Many a man has gone into business, failed and gone back again to his old place, if he could get back, long before he was old enough to be trusted with the charge and care of the business which he undertook.

If he had kept out of business, been content with moderate wages and bided his time, he might have had a good reputation of steadiness, prudence and sobriety, which would have stood him in good stead when he was ready to enter business for himself. All these advantages he has flung away for the privilege of seeing his name in gilt letters on a sign, and finding himself posted in the list of bankrupts.

Young man, make haste slowly. The world was not made in a day. Reputation is worth something, and a man who is "a little too previous" in his undertakings may in after years find that he has lost in time and in reputation much more than he has gained by making haste.—Selected.

The Home Life of Children.

It behooves parents to give the public school teachers full authority over the children during school hours.

Our public school teachers, as a class, are humane, considerate and well qualified for their supreme task. Standing as they do, in loco parentis, they can not suffer undue interference from the parents whose place they take. Order, discipline, progress in study and habits of obedience in school depend largely upon the pupil's conviction of the absoluteness of the authority in the class-room.

The home life of the child should emphasize the right lessons it learns abroad, and correct the wrong ones. Nowhere so easily and naturally can a child be taught correct habits, neatness, politeness, respect for age, modesty and gentleness as at home. Here, above everywhere else, a child learns to speak properly; to know the meaning of words, the use of the voice, the grammar and possibilities of the English tongue.

The voice of a child is almost a sure indication of its home training, and parents and all the elders of the home circle can not too anxiously strive to set examples of "living wells of English undefiled." Every well-trained child is sent to a Sunday-school, and here again is danger suggested. The time has passed when religious habits were so undeviating and loveless and rigid as to make their observance a terror and an exasperation to the wandering minds and restless limbs of the children of the household.

But unless a healthy, wholesome piety prevails, and devotional customs are maintained, the child grows to believe that religion is for Sunday only, and the absence of it fitting for the other days of the week. Parents who have grown careless or indifferent in observance with age or multiplying cares are apt to forget the lasting influence of early impressions on children. Until they are fit to walk alone, it is the right of children to be guided. Example is the best guide.—New York Press.

The Mother's Spirit.

When the mother's spirit is impatient, petulant, and fiery, can she expect her children to be gentle? When she governs by shouting, scolding, and threatening, can she expect them to speak gently one to another, or even to herself? Will she not see in the carriage and demeanor of her children a reflection of her own spirit and life? If a mother is worldly-minded and fond of ornamental dress and show, can she expect her family to grow up in humility?

If a mother is in the habit, in her common conversation, of coloring facts, of exaggerating what she hears and relates, can she expect her children to grow up with a love and reverence for the truth?

The tempers and dispositions of parents, whether good or bad, whether lovely or hateful, make such impressions on the souls of their children that they are like seeds implanted within them, which shall take root, and grow, and form part of their future character. Many an angry, fretful, passionate mother is propagating these evils in her children; she does not wish to do so; she does not intend to do so, and she is frequently trying to check these unhappy tempers when she sees them springing up in her children; but so long as she herself manifests these tempers she is transmitting them to her offspring by a natural law. She is breathing into them her own unchristian spirit. They are living in an atmosphere infected with moral depravity. They are taught to be impatient and passionate by example. And sometimes the mother will try to beat out of them with the rod what she is daily infusing into them with her own spirit.—Selected.

HYGIENE.

A Much Neglected Article of Diet.

There is one article of food altogether too much neglected in these modern days. It is atmospheric air. While a majority of us eat too much we at the same time take in too little of that wonderful combination of gases. We think we get strength from our food, but it is from the air also. Food without air gives no vigor. When the elements of food and air combine, energy is set loose and we call it strength. I remember in my boyhood a good illustration. There were twenty head of steers on the farm; ten were put in the barn and fed well on corn and hay and grew fat and, as farmers say, handsome. Ten were sent to an open field where the hay was in stacks, and here, out of doors, they lived all the long, cold Winter. In the Spring all were turned into the same pasture to feed. When they first met they had a fight to see which was to be master. Those which had been out in the cold breathing fresh air, though not so heavy in weight, had little trouble in vanquishing the others. Don't forget it, air is a food, and if your life is indoors take systematic out-door exercise daily, such as will bring plenty of air into the lungs and blood. Without it, no matter how well you are fed on the foods of your table, you will not grow strong.—Journal of Hygiene.

Pure Air In Fevers.

"In the year 1837 the ship 'Phœbe,' which had arrived with 400 immigrants packed in close quarters, where their breath had poisoned the air, was drawn ashore at Perth Amboy, New Jersey, with eighty-two persons sick with ship fever. There were more than could be sheltered in the hospital. The best that could be done was to set up cots on the lawn and put the patients in them covered by an awning. What a shout went up from the newspapers! Inhumanity unparalleled! But it turned out differently. The patients that were under the friendly shelter of the hospital died; those who lay out in the free air recovered." This simple experience taught the doctors a lesson, but they have not quite mastered it, the lesson that pure air and cold water are absolutely necessary in fever. They are what nature demands, craves and ought to have.—Journal of Hygiene.

Pure Air in Pneumonia.

A friend relates to us this incident. His wife was very ill with pneumonia. It was in the Winter season. The doctor ordered quilts to be hung over the windows to keep out the fresh air and all drafts. She grew worse and worse and finally they thought her dying. Her husband noticed the air of the room seemed close, and tore off the protection over the windows and opened one of them wide. The fresh air swept in freely, and the patient revived and got well and still lives. She was dying for want of oxygen. How many others have died under like circumstances?—Journal of Hygiene.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

POTATO SALAD.—For a nice potato salad, boil four good-sized potatoes until they are just done, no longer. Drain off the water, sprinkle them with salt, and stand them over the stove until dry and mealy. While the potatoes are boiling prepare the dressing. Put a teaspoonful of salt and a half teaspoonful of pepper in a bowl. Add gradually three tablespoonfuls of oil. Stir until the salt is dissolved, then add three more tablespoonfuls of oil, and then beat into this two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Cut into this one good-sized onion. The onion must be sliced as thin as possible. Now, as soon as the potatoes are dry take them in a napkin and slice them while hot in with the onion and dressing. Mix lightly with a fork and turn out on the serving dish. Garnish with cold boiled beets and parsley. Serve cold.—Exchange.

In answer to this, quite a number of most valuable experiences from different parts of the South have been sent to me. It has been a benefit and privilege to myself and family to read them, for which I am grateful.

Many have inquired when the book should be published. I would reply, that it is my purpose to have it ready for print as soon as possible, consistent with my duties as presiding elder of a large district. I prefer to take all the time necessary to make the book a useful one. I would appreciate the kind co-operation of friends in this enterprise in sending me statements of their own rich experience, and in forwarding this request to others who might grant me a like favor. Together, we may hope to benefit many.

A Voice from "Gilderoy's" "Heresy Coffin."

Hebrews xi, 14: "He being dead, yet speaketh."

I am so glad, as "Gilderoy" drives the nails in the "heresy coffin"—preparatory for a funeral—to hear him singing the song we love so well. Though dead, let us arise in the "strength which God supplies," and join him in the triumphant song taught us in the blessed Word of God, and quoted by him from his old books.

"Sanctification is perfectly distinct from regeneration, and has its own peculiar office in the work of grace. It is in no way like regeneration. It is a free gift, and is given, or imparted, to us by the Spirit just as soon as we are ready for it. It comes instantaneously. No matter how long we are in getting ready for it, it is given by the Spirit at once."

We rejoice with exceeding joy that his "old books" have led our brother in one step of this blessing, "which he has more or less earnestly, and more or less steadily, sought since the fifteenth day of February, 1847." We regret that in over forty-eight years he has not gotten ready to receive it. He affirms, "It is given by the Spirit at once as soon as we are ready for it." Further adds, "God does not tarry, does not delay."

Bro. John W. Crisler says, "His articles are timely, to the point, and unanswerable."

Yes, Bro. Gilderoy, we who have tested the great and precious promises will add, "The Lord is not slack concerning his promise."

Brother, turn from the old books to the Book of books. James i, 5: "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and it shall be given him."

James i, 6: "But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering." "More or less steadily, more or less earnestly," is like a wave of the sea, driven with the wind and tossed. "Let not that man think that he shall receive anything of the Lord."

"Blind unbelief is sure to err,
And scan his work in vain:
God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

I. John v, 14, 15: "This is the confidence that we have in him, if we ask anything according to his will, he heareth us: and if we know that he hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petition that we desired of him."

That our sanctification is "according to his will," read John xvii, 19, 20: "For their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth. Neither pray I for these alone; but for them also which shall believe on me through their word."

Now, brother, if you "are honest in the spirit of holiness"—and we doubt it not—let self be crucified. Your old books have taught you sanctification means the death of self. Let your "profound, sound philosophy, with all your preconceived ideas and prejudice," be thrown down at the foot of the cross. Take your eye from "Gilderoy," and fix it steadfastly on Christ. Stand on the promises of God, and claim the "gift" at his hands. Matthew xxiv, 35, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall not pass away."

"If our faith were but more simple,
We should take God at his word,
And our lives would be all sunshine
In the glory of our Lord."

Praise the Lord! He "is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him."

Luke xi, 13: "If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?"

If I were a poor sinner seeking pardon, nothing would be more discouraging than your experience. To believe that you had sought in vain for forty-eight years at the hands of our God, who promises no good thing to withhold from them that walk uprightly, would, I'm sure, cause me to lose faith in your God.

Brother, be careful; cause not one of these little ones to stumble. As to professing it, or giving God the glory when he does reward us with the "gift unspeakable," let us go to the same old Book.

Luke xvii, 12-17: "And one of them, when he saw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God. Jesus answering, said, Were there not ten cleansed? but where are the nine?"

Let us give God the glory for all he does for us. If Christ called it sanctification let not the crucified self arise to suggest "aspiration" as a better word and more in accordance with our views.

Read I. Thess. v, 23, 24: "The very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it."

OBITUARIES.

HAMLETT—Mrs. E. A. HAMLETT, daughter of Jeremiah and Matilda Elder, was born near Macon, Fayette county, Tenn., Feb. 10, 1837; died at the residence of her son, J. E. Hamlett, Love Station, Miss., May 13, 1895. She was happily married to S. B. Hamlett, May 22, 1856; this union being blessed with five children, three of them preceding her to the glory land.

Being reared by deeply pious parents, who spared neither time nor effort to impress upon the mind of their daughter the importance of early consecration to God, and, as a consequence, at a very early age she gave all to Christ, joined the Methodist Church at Palestine, near the place of her birth, and remained a devout and consistent member of the church militant till that bright May morning when God sent his angel and took mother up to the church triumphant.

Oh! it is so sad to give up mother, who has been the dearest friend on earth and the greatest treasure under heaven. The first thing we can remember was the little evening prayer learned at our mother's knee. She also taught us to shun evil companions, honor her and father, love and obey our Savior. We tenderly laid her to rest in the cemetery at Coldwater. We are parted now, dear mother; but it is only by a narrow stream—"the narrow stream of death." We confidently expect to meet in the land of unclouded day.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., June, '96. A little later it will be July, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

By an explosion of a boiler in Fall River, Mass., last week four persons were killed.

Hon. Felix P. Poche, the distinguished judge, lawyer, citizen and soldier, died on June 16.

The new Maxim gun, it is said, will furnish an output of ten bullets a second, warranted to kill at a mile distance.

A fund is being raised in Pittsburg to build a monument to Stephen Foster, the author of "Way Down Upon the Swanee River."

John D. Rockefeller's wealth increases, it is said, at the rate of $15,000,000 a year. He will soon have the $500 000,000 which it is his ambition to possess.

The Navy Department is now about prepared to let the contracts for the construction of the three torpedo boats provided for by the last session of Congress. As much as $175 000 was allowed for the construction of each vessel.

A fatal boiler explosion took place at the Union Cotton Press, of this city, on June 17. The intending purchaser from Mississippi came down to inspect the machinery, and during the trial the boilers exploded and demolished the building. A number of workmen and spectators were injured, and one man was killed.

Dr. B. M. Palmer, of the First Presbyterian Church, preached the commencement sermon, at the Home Institute for Young Ladies, in this city, on June 16. His address was to the "new woman." He thinks her noblest mission is to build Christian character in the homes of the world, and to be the guardian of the Christian religion.

According to advices from Washington, the government has determined to remove the old iron monitors which, for more than twenty years, have been laid up in the James river, below Richmond, to the League Island Naval Station, at Philadelphia. The purpose of the removal is to concentrate all the unused vessels of the navy at one point, so that they can be better cared for, and such of them as are fit for further service maintained in condition to be made available for service at short notice.

FOREIGN.

Fourteen mourners were killed by the collapse of a building in Ausirle.

Spain is reported to have paid $18,000 for Marti's assassination. He was one of the leaders of the revolution in Cuba.

During the past twenty years the consumption of alcoholic liquor has fallen off one-half in England, and has doubled in France.

The United States cruiser "Marblehead" is the great attraction in the Hamburg harbor, and is visited and admired by thousands.

Chili is to coin 10,000 000 silver dollars per annum and issue gold in $10 and $20 pieces. Silver is not to be a legal tender in amounts above $50, but the mint will exchange gold for silver.

In England there are 30 000 barmaids! Lady Henry Somerset is organizing a league of women for their rescue; but it has been discovered that they do not want to be rescued at the expense of their means of living.

The proposal of the English government to erect a statute of Oliver Cromwell, was adopted, on June 13, in the House of Commons by a vote of 152 to 137. The passage of the motion was only secured by the support of the Orangemen.

All the accounts received from Germany indicate that the beet sugar interests in that country are experiencing a period of severe depression, and the problem of maintaining the industry on a paying basis is seriously agitating the government.

To-day is the anniversary of Queen Victoria's accession to the throne of the United Kingdom. She has reigned fifty-eight years, which is longer than any other occupant of the British throne, except George III., who reigned something over fifty-nine years.

According to the latest advices from Europe, the Sultan of Turkey has not receded from his refusal to agree to the reforms demanded in Armenia, and the powers backing up the demand upon the Porte are anxiously considering the next move that must be made.

The Salvation Army now numbers among its officers the smallest man in the world. Gerrit Keyzer, the celebrated Dutch dwarf and the legitimate successor of General Tom Thumb, may now be seen in Amsterdam and The Hague parading the streets in uniform and leading the army meetings, in which he is said to have been singularly successful.

There can be no doubt but that France confidently counts on the support of Russia in any complication which may in the future arise with her European neighbors. Although there exists at present a reasonably cordial entente with Germany, the desire to recover the lost provinces of Alsace and Lorraine will, sooner or later, lead to trouble with that country, and Russia's aid is counted on in that emergency when it arrives.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

By Rev. Henry H. Ahrens.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE WAYS OF THE WICKED, AND THEIR END.

(Job xxiv, 1-25.)

Job was a poet. Like St. Paul and Dr. Martin Luther in later years, though capable of profound at thought, he was eminently gifted in clothing stale matter of fact in charming phraseology; commonplace in bewitching narrative.

1. In his own inimitable way he gives a long, dark catalogue of prevailing iniquities.

(1) The wicked enrich themselves at the expense of others. Remove landmarks, etc. Our age is not much given to honesty.

(2) Minors and widows were defrauded with impunity. In our age it requires stringent legislation to protect specially the former. In most States, specially in Louisiana, the laws in this respect, are excellent.

(3) They are cruel to the needy. Heed not their cry. When Christ says that we have the poor always with us, he means to indicate that it is our duty to provide for them.

(4) The wicked are very Shylocks. Insist on their pound of flesh. Take away the sheaf from the hungry.

(5) He charges the wicked with murder and adultery. In pursuing their vices, they disguise their face. The same as robbers, thieves, whitecaps, etc., in our day.

2. Seemingly, Job holds God is unconcerned about the course of the wicked. Says in verse twelve, "God lays no folly to them." Gives no indication of his displeasure.

(1) True, God curtails not the opportunity of the wicked to repent and be converted.

"While life's lamp shall burn,
The vilest sinner may return."

(2) Yes, God permits the wicked to enjoy this world without molestation. Says Abraham, in the parable to Dives, "Remember, my son, that thou hast received thy good things on earth," etc.

(3) The Judge of the quick and dead defers final settlement of human affairs to the last day. Then it shall be meted out to man according to his works here below.

3. As an inducement to speedy repentance, Job sets forth the uncertainty of life. That the course of the wicked may suddenly terminate.

(1) Says the patriarch: "They are exalted but a little while. Soon they shall be precipitated from honor to dishonor, from opulence to indigence, from happiness to misery.

(2) They shall be brought low. Death, like the woodman, spares no tree. He fells them all. "How are the mighty fallen!" Lo! to the bottomless pit.

(3) As the parched earth absorbs the liquid, so the grave all men. The wicked can not escape. All living men shall soon be spoken of in the past tense.

(4) As if to ridicule the godless, who regards not the hereafter, Job says, "The worm shall feed sweetly on him."

League Dots.

The monthly meeting of the New Orleans Epworth League Union, on June 13, was well attended. Louisiana Avenue Church, where the meeting took place, was beautifully decorated by the young people. Dr. Sawyer spoke wisely and well on the duties of the Committee on Help and Charity.

Nearly all the Leagues in Louisiana and Mississippi have elected delegates for the Epworth League Convention, which will convene in Chattanooga on the twenty-seventh of this month.

It has been decided that the Louisiana State Epworth League Convention will convene in New Orleans during the month of October. We promise ourselves good attendance and gracious results.

It is supposed that not less than 14,000 Leaguers will attend the Chattanooga Convention. Board will range from $1 to $3. The choir is expected to number 1,000 voices.

Nearly all our New Orleans preachers intend to attend the Chattanooga Convention. Fully five hundred daily papers will have representatives at the grand gathering.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Topisaw Camp Meeting, located nine miles east of McComb City, will begin on Aug. 8, 1895, and run eight days.

Preachers generally are invited, and will be provided for. Hacks will run daily from McComb City to Camp Ground.

H. P. Lewis, P. C.

The twenty-fourth annual camp meeting of Hennington Camp Meeting Association will commence Thursday, the first day of August, 1895.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the distinguished evangelist, is expected to be with us the entire meeting.

Ministers of the gospel are earnestly invited to attend, and will be provided for during the meeting.

A great gathering of the people is expected, and ample arrangements will be made for the accommodation of all who may come. The restaurant will furnish board at very moderate rates.

To meet the expenses of the meeting, the usual entrance fee of twenty-five cents will be required, to be paid only once during the meeting. J. W. McNeil, Secretary.

Our camp meeting at Bethel Camp Ground, Wilkinson county, Miss., will begin on the fifteenth day of August, 1895. We have no gate fees, but we have good order, large congregation, and good accommodations. We invite our brethren in the ministry to come particularly, and to come prepared to preach and work. There will be a hack running daily from Whitaker station, on the Y., M. and V. R. R., out to Bethel Camp Ground; distance, about six miles. Come one, come all; and Mr. Editor, too. P. H. Howes, P. C.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

A Little Serious Reflection

Will show you that it is always best to pay enough. Low-priced things are not always cheap. Low prices are sometimes dearly bought. There's such a thing as "extravagant economy"—that means on the price at the cost of the quality. We sell good groceries just as low as it is possible to sell them. We wont sell the other at any price.

We want you to come here because it pays you to do so, and because it pays us to have you.

EARNESTNESS.

The hurry of the times affects us so
In this swift, rushing hour, we crowd and press,
And thrust each other backward as we go,
And do not pause to lay sufficient stress
Upon that good, strong, true word, Earnestness.

In our impetuous haste, could we but know
Its full, deep meaning, its vast import, oh,
Then might we grasp the secret of success!
In that receding age, when men were great,
The bone and sinew of their purpose lay
In this one word. God likes an earnest soul—
Too earnest to be eager.
Soon or late
It leaves the spent horde breathless by the way,
And stands serene triumphant, at the goal.

A Bride's Account of St. Bartholomew.

BY SCOTT F. HERSHEY, PH.D.

V.

I have met with an exceedingly interesting report of the horrible night of St. Bartholomew. It is from the pen of Margaret, the bride of Navarre. Accounts of personal incidents, given by Roman Catholic writers, aid in framing opinions of the unexpected-ness and severity of the massacre. Margaret of Valois was the bride of a few days. She it was who had married the Prince of Navarre, and whose wedding was the opportunity for getting the Huguenots to Paris. She gives a most interesting experience connected with the slaying of her fellow-countrymen. "The Huguenots," she says, suspected me because I was a Catholic; the Catholics because I had married the King of Navarre; so that I heard nothing of what was going on till the evening when, as I was sitting on a chest in my mother's room by the side of my sister, the Duchess of Lorraine, whom I saw to be very sad, the Queen Mother noticed me, and told me to go to bed. As I was courtesying to my sister laid hold of my arm, and burst into tears, saying, 'For God's sake, sister, don't go.' I was greatly frightened, and seeing this, the Queen, my mother, spoke very sharply to my sister, and forbade her to say anything to me, adding that please God no harm should happen to me, but that come what might, go I must, lest something should be suspected. I did not hear what was said, but again, and very roughly, my mother told me to go.

"As soon as I was in my room I threw myself on my knees and prayed God to protect me, though I knew not from what or against whom.

"Meanwhile the King, my husband, had gone to bed, surrounded by thirty or forty Huguenots, whom I did not then know, for I had only been married a few days. All night long they remained talking of what had happened at the Admiral, and determining, as soon as day broke, to ask for redress against M. De Guise; and if it were not granted, then to seek it for themselves. As for me, the tears of my sister weighed on my mind, and I could not sleep for fear of some unknown evil. At dawn the King, my husband, said he would go and play tennis till King Charles was awake, having made up his mind to ask him at once to do justice. He then left my room, and his gentlemen with him. Seeing that it was light, and thinking that the danger of which my sister had spoken was past, and being heavy with drowsiness, I told my nurse to lock the door, so that I might sleep undisturbed. An hour later, when I was fast asleep, some one came beating with hands and feet against the door, and shouting, 'Marguerre, Navarre!' My nurse, thinking it was my husband, ran to open the door. It was a gentleman wounded by a sword in the elbow, and his arm was cut by a halberd, who rushed into my room, pursued by four archers, seeking to slay. He threw himself on to my bed. Feeling this man clutching me, I threw myself into the space between the bed and the wall, where, he still clinging me, we rolled over, both screaming, and both equally frightened.

"Fortunately, the captain of my guards, M. de Nancay, came by, who found me in such a plight, that, sorry as he was, he could not help laughing, then drove the archers out of the room, and gave me the life of the poor gentleman, who was still clinging to me, for whom I caused to be tended and cured in my dressing-room till he was cured. While I changed my night-dress—for he had covered me with blood—M. de Nancay told me what had happened, but assured me that my husband was in the King's room, and in no danger. Making me throw on a dressing-gown, he then led me to the room of my sister, Madame de Lorraine, which I reached more dead than alive. Just as I was going into the ante-room a gentleman trying to escape from the archers, who were pursuing him, fell stabbed three paces from me. I, too, fell, half fainting, into the arms of M. de Nancay, and felt as if the same blow had pierced us both."

Boston, Mass.

In the Living Present.

We commend the wisdom of Gov. Greenhalge, of Massachusetts, in vetoing the bill which exempted veterans of the late war from the operation of the civil service law. If said veterans are needy, aid them; but offices of trust should be filled only by competent men.

One versed in sociology remarked that usually the "new woman" is not very new. Well, we dislike the term; despise what the term indicates. It is on a par with "New South." The two are dependent on each other. Let the "new woman" have her way, and the chivalry and gallantry of the old South will soon disappear.

Woful extravagance must prevail in our governmental circles. It seems incredible, but it is true, that the United States government pays for army, navy and bounty to veterans just as much as France and Germany combined for the same purpose. But the armies of the latter number more than a million of men, while the number of our soldiers is only 27,959.

Norway is the only civilized country devoid of monasteries and nunneries. In our country they increase to an alarming extent. The edifices are not only numerous, but costly. The wealth of the Romish Church in Louisiana is disastrously large.

It is well known in Mexico that the Roman Catholic Church favored Emperor Maximilian's venture. Hence, when it failed, the Republican leaders turned away from that church and favored Protestantism. Church property not occupied for purposes of divine worship was confiscated—the same as in Italy under Victor Emanuel. But said leaders, alas! did not embrace Protestantism, but atheism. The same as in France.

"Swans sing before they die." Well, the constantly diminishing factions of Quakers, the orthodox and Hicksites, have reunited. The Hicksites, at the time of separation in 1827, denied the divinity of Christ. The Quakers seem to share the fate of the American buffalo and the Swiss antelope.

Hide your face in shame, you boasted intelligence of the nineteenth century! It is officially announced that during the month of July the famous relics deposited in the noted cathedral of Aix-la-Chapelle will be on inspection for the faithful. Among these relics are hose and other garments of Christ, several thorns of his crown. Also undergarments of Mary, the mother of Jesus. Said relics are reputed to have been presented to Charlemagne by a patriarch of Jerusalem. Believing inspection is said to have wrought miracles. ICH DIEN.

Wayside Musings.

Now that the commencements are past, the school-men are abroad in the land—college presidents and employed agents "drumming" for their respective institutions. The tired and worn president, almost exhausted from a ten months of incessant toil and anxiety, has no time for rest or relaxation. He must, despite his longing for a few days or weeks of quiet and recuperation to prepare him for another year in the school-room, gird himself to redoubled efforts. Conventions, assemblies, Conferences, gatherings of all kinds, must be visited. Still hunts must be made, advertising and speech-making must be done, or the school will suffer.

This is not the case with the public school teachers of our country. When they close the school-rooms on the first of June, they may lay aside all care and give themselves to those recreations which rest and recuperate the body, and may seek those assemblies and literary gatherings which impart new ideas, beget new zeal, and invigorate the mind and spirits for more successful work.

Why this sharp contrast? Are our people lacking in confidence in their church institutions, and in those who have been placed at their heads? Can they not risk the trustees of these institutions to see that they are manned and officered by reliable, competent, trustworthy men and women? Must they be reminded from year to year of the existence of those right arms of strength to the church to which they belong? Certainly no one should be lacking at this point. Can it be that our people are seeking cheaper rates? Certainly not. Sometimes I fear that the rates have already been so reduced as to create a just suspicion in the minds of the thoughtful that our means are not sufficient to secure those teachers and give those advantages which we profess. And yet it can not be disputed that these faculties are composed of superior teachers, and the work well done. What shall we conclude then? That our people are lacking in loyalty to their own institutions? This I hesitate to believe, and yet there is a cause somewhere for this constant requirement on the part of college presidents and agents throughout the land.

If the Methodists of our State would only rally to their colleges, there would be no ground for this cry for endowment and cheaper rates. There is no better endowment than loyalty, and the rates could be reduced as the patronage increased. Why should not Mississippi Methodists maintain within their own State as high-grade schools as may be found elsewhere? Why need they send abroad? Can they not afford as comfortable buildings? Are first-class instructors averse to coming within her bounds? Can not all departments do as thorough, good work as is done elsewhere?

All these I suppose no one will deny. Then why this necessity for the repeated Summer campaign? I insist upon it, that to secure the best results, the college men should, instead of a Summer of incessant toil, be so freed from the thought and anxiety of the succeeding session that he might lay aside all toil and rest for a season. The weary body and tired brain need such recuperation to prepare for the work to be done. It is doubtful economy, to say the least of it.

Assured that he will not suffer loss, the teacher should be released from all duties and encouraged to give his time to those associations and studies that will aid in the better work for parent and pupil. Why may it not be thus?

The Commencement at Port Gibson Female College.

On the evening of June 11 Port Gibson Female College closed its fifty-first session, at which time seven bright young ladies received diplomas of graduation. The commencement sermon was preached by Dr. C. F. Evans, of Memphis, his text being the eleventh verse of the sixteenth Psalm: "In thy presence is fulness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore." It was a fitting text, and from all accounts was handled in a masterful way, everyone who heard the sermon being enthusiastic in its praise.

Monday evening the annual concert and calisthenic exhibition took place. The programme presented was thoroughly interesting, and of a high order. The young ladies who took part showed that they had received the very best of training. The art exhibit, which was visited by eager crowds on Monday and Tuesday, would have done credit, we think, to the salons of any art school in the land. Miss Sallie McGill, the mistress of this department, has done wonders in the way of developing and bringing to light latent talent in some of her pupils.

On Tuesday evening occurred the graduation exercises. The salutatory was delivered by Miss Laura Drake, who spoke of "The Woman of the World." Miss Annie Perry, the valedictorian, read a bright and thoughtful essay upon "The Christian Woman." These two young ladies were elected by their class to perform the offices mentioned; and the way in which they acquitted themselves showed that no mistake had been made. The pleasure and honor of delivering the literary address on this occasion fell to the lot of this writer, who wishes to express his appreciation of the kind forbearance and attention shown him by the large audience present. The task of delivering the diplomas was imposed upon Rev. H. M. Ellis, who, before distributing the long-coveted sheepskins, made a few happy remarks. Following is a list of the graduates: Misses Maggie Pearl Barber, Laura S. Drake, Ettie E. Jones, Mary Lou Jones, Annie L. Perry, Roberta M. Person, and Sarah F. Taliaferro. A prize was awarded to Miss Taliaferro for the best impromptu essay written an hour after the announcement of the subject.

During the coming session the school will be presided over by two accomplished ladies. Mrs. Meek, the queenly woman who was in charge during the session just closed, will have Miss W. L. Park, mistress of elocution and mathematics, associated with her as co-principal. Miss McGill will remain as art teacher. A full corps of teachers will be secured, and no pains will be spared to keep Port Gibson Female College in the front rank among like institutions of learning. Although the attendance the past year has not been large, the work done has been of the very best quality, and the outlook for another year is truly encouraging. Having a beautiful, healthful, and accessible location, good buildings, and well-equipped teachers, this school has, we think, a bright future before it. A more cultured and hospitable people than those of Port Gibson we feel sure can not be found in the State. We were the recipient during our stay in this delightful town of many favors and courtesies at the hands of the faculty of the college, and the family at the parsonage.

MCKENDREE M. BLACK.

Millsaps College Commencement.

As the representative of the North Mississippi Conference appointed by Bishop Keener, I attended the commencement exercises at Millsaps College. From the beginning to the close everything was of the very highest order. As an eminent lawyer expressed it: "Millsaps has set the standard so high that it will be difficult in the future to keep it up." Bishop Hendrix was at his best Sunday morning, and from the text, "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and to-day, and forever," he preached a sermon that thrilled the great congregation. One man said: "I was glad I was in the amen corner today. I could wipe the tears from my eyes without attracting attention."

Sunday night Dr. H. W. Featherstun sustained his reputation as a great preacher in a masterly sermon from the eighth Psalm.

Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, of Vanderbilt University, delivered the literary address, Monday morning, to a large and cultured audience. His subject was, "Some Needs of Our American Civilization." Everybody expected great things of the Chancellor, and nobody was disappointed. The audience manifested its appreciation by frequent and prolonged applause.

Monday afternoon five young preachers contested for the Gunning medal. This medal is given each year by Mr. W. A. Gunning to the young preacher who best reads a Scripture lesson, a hymn, and makes his announcements. Coming from a layman, it is suggestive to the thoughtful preacher. R. A. Clark, of Kosciusko, was awarded the medal this year.

Monday night four young statesmen discussed the question, "Should United States Senators Be Elected by the People?" Unfortunately, they had only four judges. These were equally divided in their opinion, and the great question is yet unsettled.

Tuesday Millsaps College conferred degrees on her first graduating class. Three promising young men—F. M. Austin, of Utica; J. G. Lilly, of Chesterville, and H. S. Stevens, of Augusta—now claim her as their alma mater. If we can judge from the looks of the young men and the reports we heard on every hand, they will make worthy representatives of this great institution.

The Board of Trustees was in session on Monday. They granted Prof. Swearingen leave of absence for a year. He will spend the time studying in Italy and Germany. Prof. Muckenfuss, who has been absent a year studying at Johns Hopkins, will take his place at the opening of the next session. The Board provided for putting an agent in the field just as soon as the man can be found. The report of the treasurer of the Board, Major R. W. Millsaps, showed that the expenses of the institution had been kept within its income.

We were glad to see that, notwithstanding the hard times, the work of improvement goes steadily on. The gymnasium is just ready for the boys to enjoy themselves. When completed, it will be one of the best equipped in the State. The cottage recently destroyed by fire will be replaced at once. One of the trustees, Mr. Peter James, gave one hundred dollars for the science department. Dr. Murrah, referring to the gift, said: "And the beauty of it is, that means two hundred for the college. Major Millsaps duplicates every donation." What an opportunity to make an investment that will do good when we are gone! We were delighted to find that the library had grown to such proportions. The speeches we heard from the students showed how well it had been used. We took particular pains to ascertain from sources in no way connected with the college facts in regard to the deportment of the student-body. Without exception, the parties to whom we applied spoke in the highest terms of praise of the students; and from every quarter came words of commendation for Dr. Murrah in his management of the institution. We were proud to claim him as a North Mississippian.

The large attendance of preachers and laymen from both Conferences shows the hold the college is getting upon the affections of the people of the State.

May Millsaps College have many such occasions, and may we be there to see!

J. A. RANDOLPH,
Visitor from North Miss. Conf.

Grenada Collegiate Institute Commencement.

It was my good fortune, as one of the Visiting Committee from the North Mississippi Conference, to be present at the recent commencement exercises of the Grenada Collegiate Institute. Rev. J. W. Malone, with his corps of distinguished assistants, have proven their fitness for their several places. Miss Eva Sadler is a graduate of the Texas State University, and was lady principal; Miss Boothe, a graduate of the University of Mississippi; Miss Lulu Williams, a graduate of the Institute; and Mrs. Kate Payne, a lady of rare culture, and for twelve years in charge of the primary department, with the worthy president, compose the faculty of the literary department.

The exercises began on Friday evening, May 31, with an entertainment, composed of dialogues and recitations, by the primary department. The little folks met the highest expectations of their friends, and added fresh laurels to those already won by their worthy teacher.

The commencement sermon by Rev. J. A. Bowen, on Sunday morning, from Philippians ii, 5, was a genuine gospel sermon. He was at his best, and delivered a message that honored God and edified the soul.

Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, in her usual happy vein, talked inspiringly to the Young Ladies' Missionary Society at the College Chapel in the afternoon, comparing their condition in our century of high Christian civilization with the women of Oriental Paganism.

On Monday morning, at ten o'clock, was the anniversary occasion of the Thalian Society. A varied program delighted the audience, a distinguished feature of which was the reading of the commencement edition of the college paper. The exercises closed with a superb address by Rev. T. W. Dye on "An Idea and Its Development." He talked skillfully and eloquently of the advance of civilization to its culmination in the glorious womanhood of the nineteenth century, and the prophetic indications of yet more glorious possibilities.

The grand concert on Monday night was, in this writer's estimation, an ideal school concert. The music was choice, admirably rendered, and within the comprehension of the audience. It certainly displayed the judicious exercise of rare taste and most careful training. Great credit is due Misses Cone and Nesbett, who have charge of this department. They have evidently done thorough work, and have thereby proved their eminent fitness for their positions. One of the most delightful features of this department was in the use of stringed instruments. Miss Ada Nesbett, the instructor, handles the violin, guitar and mandolin with perfect ease, and in a few months has trained an orchestra of young ladies, who can play with credit before any audience. President Malone may well congratulate himself on having such able instructors in the "art divine."

The graduating exercises on Tuesday morning was the occasion of greatest interest. Five young ladies received the degree of Mistress of English Literature, and two the degree of Mistress of Arts. A fairer, brighter vision of beautiful young womanhood one rarely ever sees. As pure and spotless as the garments of white which they wore (for they were all true Christians), they captured the great audience by sheer force of loveliness. The essays were much above the average, evincing careful preparation, and read so distinctly that they could be heard by the whole house.

Your correspondent left on Tuesday evening before Rev. J. S. Oakley delivered the address to the Alumni Association; but competent critics say it was up to his highest mark, which is a guarantee that it was a literary treat.

The art department is under the direction of Miss Dorman. More than two hundred pictures were on exhibition, in great variety of subject and class of work. There were pictures in oil, pastelle, water colors, and crayon. It is not extravagant to say that the exhibit was magnificent, and displayed rare genius on part of teacher and pupils.

The facilities offered here are equal to the best in any of our Southern colleges.

The accomplished wife of the president deserves special mention, for to her is due, in a large measure, the success of the college. Evidences of her wisdom and deftness are seen on every side. She not only presides over the college household, but gives instruction in music.

Rev. W. M. McIntosh, the financial secretary, has done a fine work in soliciting patronage and raising money to help worthy girls through the course. We are pleased to note that he will remain another year in the field.

Dr. Malone has demonstrated his fitness for the responsible place he fills by the decided success of the year just closed. He is an affable gentleman, a wise manager, thorough business man, and a consecrated Christian. May greater success crown his efforts in the future, for he is worthy!

T. Y. RAMSEY,
For the Visiting Committee.

Kosciusko District.

We have just finished our second round on the Kosciusko district, North Mississippi Conference. We feel encouraged. There is marked improvement along the line. Some good houses of worship are being built, and others are being repaired. There is much to be done in this way yet. Bro. J. A. Leeon is planning to build a new parsonage at Eupora.

Sunday-schools are emerging from their Winter-quarters, and are now at work. Some of them are doing good work. But the time they work is so short. Four months' Sunday-school in twelve is better than no school at all, but a poor substitute for the whole year. Many of the pastors have observed Children's Day, and others will yet observe it. It has been my privilege to attend just one of these services, the one at Ackerman—W. C. Lester, pastor. This service was highly gratifying to those who had it in hand, and entertaining and instructing to all who attended. They used the program gotten up by our Sunday-school Committee, which is fine indeed. It is educating as well as entertaining. I hope our preachers have used it everywhere. What a blessing to have such a program carried out in all our schools! One brother remarked to me after hearing this program gone through with, "I knew the Methodist Church was a mammoth concern, but I had no idea it was as large as it is;" and then it is so simple that any school can use it if they will try. Our church acted wisely in inaugurating Children's Day. It is destined to be a great power among us.

There is improvement in the finances of the district. All we need is to have system, and this question is solved. The amount of money our people are asked to raise annually is a mere pittance, if all could be educated to cast in their mite.

The pastors are planning for revivals throughout the district. I trust that the results may exceed those of last year, which were about a thousand additions to the church in the bounds of the district. Our pastors are a faithful band, and are doing their best. Pray for us.

J. H. MITCHELL.

BY LUCY LARCOM

I say it in the meadow path,
I say it on the mountain stairs—
The best things any mortal hath
Are those which every mortal shares.

The air we breathe, the sky, the breeze,
The light without us and within,
Life with its unlocked treasuries,
God's riches, are for all to win.

The grass is softer to my tread
For rest it yields unnumbered feet,
Sweeter to me the wild rose red,
Because she makes the whole world sweet.

Into your heavenly loneliness
Ye welcome me, O solemn peaks!
And me in every guest you bless,
Who reverently your mystery seeks.

And up the radiant peopled way
That opens into worlds unknown,
It will be life's delight to say,
"Heaven is not heaven for me alone,"

Rich through my brethren's poverty—
Such wealth were hideous! I am blest
Only in what they share with me
In what I share with all the rest.

The Distinctive Doctrines Which Differentiate Methodism from Other Creeds.

The theological doctrines of Wesleyan Methodism are with, perhaps two or three modifications, the same as those which, by common consent, are at present deemed evangelical. The Articles of Religion drawn up by Wesley for his immediate followers, and substantially adopted by all Methodist bodies since, are but slightly modified from those of the Established Church of England. They were originally prepared for the churches in the States, which we can see by referring to the Twenty-five Articles of Faith. The sermons of John Wesley, and his Notes on the New Testament, are recognized by his followers in Great Britain and America as the standard of Methodism, and as a basis of their theological creed. The unity of the Godhead, and the co-equal divinity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; the death, resurrection, ascension and intercession of Jesus Christ; salvation by faith, the sufficiency and divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures; a final day of judgment, and the eternity of future rewards and punishments, are doctrines held in common with other evangelical branches of the church of Christ.

Maintaining man's total depravity through the fall of Adam, and his utter inability, unless aided by divine grace, to take one step towards his recovery, Methodists hold that this grace is free, extending itself equally, by virtue of the atonement, to all the children of men. Hence they deny the doctrine of special election, with its counterpart, reprobation. They believe that Jesus Christ, "by his oblation of himself once offered, made full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world." They recognize two sacraments as ordained by Christ—baptism and the Lord's Supper. Infant children and believing adults have a right to the former; and penitent seekers of salvation, as well as professing Christians, are invited to partake of the latter, both being regarded not only as badges, or tokens, of Christian men's profession, but as certain signs of grace, and God's good-will towards us, by the which he doth work invisibly in us, and doth not only quicken, but also strengthen and confirm our faith in him. As to the mode of baptism, so that the ceremony be performed by an authorized minister in the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost, it is optional whether the water be applied by sprinkling or pouring, or by the immersion of the candidate; and although kneeling is the usual mode of receiving the elements at the Lord's table, those who prefer may partake of them in a standing or sitting position.

We deny the doctrine usually styled the "perseverance of the saints," believing that a true child of God may fall from grace and finally perish; but we hold the doctrine of assurance, in the sense that it is the privilege of the justified sinner now to know his sins forgiven. The Holy Spirit, we teach, bears witness of the fact of present pardon and acceptance; but this is deemed to be the privilege of believers, not the indispensable evidence of regeneration. "It does not follow," says Wesley, "that all who do not know their sins forgiven are children of the devil." Methodism teaches also that it is the privilege of believers in this life to reach that maturity of grace and that conformity to the divine nature which cleanseth the heart from sin, and fills it with love to God and man; the being filled, as Paul phrases it, with all the fulness of God. This we call "Christian perfection"—a state which we declare to be attainable through faith in Christ. Wesley says on this subject—and none of his authorized followers have gone beyond him—"Christian perfection implies the being so crucified with Christ as to be able to testify, 'I live not, but Christ liveth in me.'" It does not imply an exemption from ignorance or mistake, infirmities or temptations. "I believe," he adds, "there is no such perfection in this life as excludes these involuntary transgressions, which I apprehend to be naturally consequent on the ignorance and mistakes inseparable from mortality. Therefore, 'sinless perfection' is a phrase I never use, lest I should seem to contradict myself.'" "I believe that a person filled with the love of God is still liable to these involuntary transgressions." "Such transgressions you may call sins, if you please; I do not, for the reasons above mentioned."

This doctrine Wesley calls the grand depositum of which God has given to the people called Methodists, and gives it as his opinion that God raised them up chiefly to preach, exemplify, and propagate it.

Whatever else may be believed by the Presbyterian, Baptist, Lutheran, Congregationalist, Episcopalian, every one of these believes all that is in the Twenty-five Articles; or even if there should be anything here which he can not heartily endorse, he can unite with his Methodist brethren upon the simple terms upon which the Methodist himself becomes a member—"desire to flee from the wrath to come, and be saved from sin." The Baptist brother may believe in his immersion and close communion, the Presbyterian and Congregationalist in the election and decrees of Calvin; the Episcopalian in his prayer-book and forms; Methodism is so broad and stands upon such strong foundation that these all may be admitted without either the widening of our doors or requiring them to leave behind any belief they would bring along with them.

Hear Mr. Wesley: "One circumstance is quite peculiar to the people called Methodists—that is, the terms upon which any person may be admitted into their society. They do not impose, in order to their admission, any opinions whatever."

But most of the other churches admit members now without inquiry as to their doctrinal peculiarities. Methodism has not been in the world in vain. For a century and a half she has spread her principles abroad, and every day she is assimilating to her own broad charity the beliefs of the people of God throughout the length and breadth of Christendom. The great heart of the world beats in harmony with those glorious, vitalizing truths which make up Methodist faith; and while the fact may not willingly be confessed by many, the fact is none the less real, that; with the exception of those whose special function is to proclaim the peculiar doctrines of the churches, if expressing themselves freely, would not substantially affirm the faith that makes up Methodism. Undesignedly, almost unconsciously, the churches are coming together, and the coming is all toward the Methodist Church. If the positions taken in this article have been sustained, we may believe that Methodism is so thoroughly grounded upon the essential, saving truths of the gospel that she need fear no danger from oppositions or indifferences, either within or without the church, unless such oppositions or indifferences succeed in subverting the cause of Christ itself. So long as the New Testament stands as the accredited Word of God, and the foundation of the church of Christ, so long may we expect Methodism to hold her place in the world. Other creeds or confessions may need revision, or may be abandoned with the worthless rubbish of mediæval theology, but this will be only to substitute in their place the principles upon which Methodism has heretofore wrought her way in the world. We can not conceive it possible for Methodist doctrine ever to disappear from the world of religions thought unless Christianity herself should be obliterated. Macaulay's "New Zealander" may stand on London Bridge and view the mighty changes that time may work; but those great ideas which Wesley taught of life and salvation, and of the love of God and Christ, are living forces which the heart of man can not be imagined willing to modify or surrender, so long as man is rational and worships God. Other churches may live on through the ages if they open their creeds to the expanding, advancing thought of the world; Methodism must live if she retains intact the creed she now has. Ours is the only church that can stand still and see the salvation of the Lord.

REJOINDER NO. 5.

Bro. H. still contends that we require no change of moral character as a condition of membership in our church. Here are some of his effusions: "The whole process of receiving members into the Methodist societies is repugnant to the Word of God." In speaking of the paragraph containing directions for receiving members, he says: "The vilest sinner in the world can comply with every requirement in it; and Bro. Carley knows that good and well." This is refreshingly fraternal. Of course, he means the "vilest sinner" without any change of moral character.

To support his assertions, he quotes, first, from the General Rules of the early Methodist societies as found in our Discipline. "There is only one condition previously required of those who desire admission into these societies—a 'desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins.'" Then he quotes Mr. Wesley as follows: "One circumstance more is quite peculiar to the people called Methodists—that is, the terms on which anyone may be admitted to membership into their society. They do not impose, in order to membership, any opinions whatever. Let them hold particular or general redemption, absolute or general decrees. Let them be Churchmen, Dissenters, Presbyterians, or Independents—it is no obstacle. Let them choose one mode of baptism or another. It is no bar to their admission. One condition, and only one, is required: A real desire to save their souls. Where this is, it is enough. They (the Methodists) desire no more."

Now, what has all this to do with the conditions of admission to membership in the Methodist Church? Just nothing at all. These General Rules were drawn up and signed by John and Charles Wesley, as an epitome of Scripture truth, for the use of the Methodist societies before a Methodist Church was ever thought of; and they are in our Discipline to-day simply because of their history and the wholesome truths they contain. To regard them as conditions of admission into the Methodist Church is to ignore historical sequences, and to mistake the whole matter. I know Bro. H. is sustained by some Methodist authorities, but he is wrong nevertheless. The definition of these societies is very different from our definition of a church. Let us put the two side by side.

"Such a society is no other than a 'company of men having the form and seeking the power of godliness, united in order to pray together, to receive the word of exhortation, and to watch over one another in love, that they may help each other to work out their salvation.'" Such a society is a "company of men having the form and seeking the power of godliness." Bro. H. himself says: "The Methodist society"—societies—"was formed for sinners, and never was intended to be regarded as a church." Now notice the definition of a church as found in our Thirteenth Article of Religion: "The visible church of Christ is a congregation of faithful men, in which the pure Word of God is preached, and the sacraments duly administered according to Christ's ordinance, in all those things that of necessity are requisite to the same." There is a very manifest difference between the two institutions. The one is "a company of men having the form and seeking the power of godliness;" the other is "a congregation of faithful men." Now, when we remember that these General Rules were not put into the Discipline for five years after the organization of the societies into the Methodist Church, it is as clear as light that the condition of admission into one was not adopted as the condition of admission into the other.

But suppose we admit that Bro. H. is right in regarding "a desire to flee from the wrath to come and to be saved from their sins" as the only condition of admission into the church, is his statement that "the vilest sinner" can be received without any change of moral character a legitimate conclusion? By no means. Dr. Hudson, in "The Methodist Armor," says: "This condition implies a willingness to be saved. This willingness to be saved implies also a readiness to be all and to do all that the gospel requires of those who become partakers of salvation—a willingness to accept of salvation 'from sin.' To be willing to accept of salvation, therefore, implies a desire to be delivered from the dominion of sin. It implies such repentance as hates sin and desires purity of heart and a fixedness of purpose to use the means of grace prescribed by the church in order to attain actual salvation."

Surely, where all this exists there is some change of moral character. These experiences are not found in "the vilest sinner." Such a man is not utterly lacking in faith. He goes far beyond many whom Baptists pronounce converted to God, because they have a "spark of hope."

Bro. Deavenport's Anguish.

MR. EDITOR: Allow me just a few sentences for Bro. Deavenport's relief. As he draws his doctrinal supplies from "Wesley, Watson, Clark, Fletcher and others," I need refer him only to them. Nothing is more common among these old writers—as every student knows—than the distinction between salvation from sin and salvation in heaven—"initial" and "final." If it be wrong to speak of the salvation which a regenerate man enjoys in life as initial salvation (from which he may lapse), and that salvation which the saints enjoy in heaven as final, or "ultimate," salvation (from which there can be no lapse), the wrong results from my following Bro. Deavenport's "Standards;" and he is estopped from complaining, or even dissenting. He says: "This idea"—of ultimate salvation—"is entrenched, . . . especially" (among) "those opposed to salvation from all sin in this life."

Why Bro. Deavenport says the above, I am unable to guess. I know I have never written or spoken one word which means what he would thrust into my mouth by the above-quoted words. On the contrary, I have everywhere preached and written that in regeneration we "are cleansed (saved) from all sin" (I. John iii, 9); and when we cross the celestial threshold, we pass beyond the contingencies of time, and raise the shout of a salvation ultimated.

Yours through the blood of the Lamb,

"An Interrogation Point Interrogated."

In the ADVOCATE, of June 6, Bros. Henry and Ahrens explain their personal position in reference to the Rawls' meeting. With that I have nothing to do. I maintained, and still maintain, not as a "champion," but in simple justice, that when—as Bro. Ahrens declares—Bro. Rawls "was not wanted" there, and the pastors took no personal interest in the meeting or its converts, it is unfair to judge of the results by the fact that there were no accessions to the churches.

I will step aside to say that refusing to have anything to do with a meeting simply because the man who conducts it is "unauthorized," sounds a little like an incident recorded in Luke ix, 49, 50. Fraternally,

Character, Not Bulk of Service.

Rank in the kingdom of heaven is based upon character, and not upon the bulk of the service performed. So that a man might come to God, and say, "See all that I have done and all that I have given up for thee," and yet find that, measured by God's standard, he had done almost nothing. No, you can not measure up Christian service in any such way as that. Those who are first here may be last there when the great account is made up. Perhaps there is some Christian here in this congregation looking me right in the face, of whom everybody is saying: "Oh, what a worker he is! How much he is giving up, and how much he is doing for Christ!" And yet there may be in his conduct that subtle spirit of self-consciousness and selfishness which will spoil it all, and he may find himself away back among the last in heaven. And others who have, perhaps, very little to show in the way of outward bulk of work done, so little that they will look at it in sorrow, and say, 'Oh, I have done nothing for Jesus!" And yet there may be such humility and disinterestedness pervading it all, that in the eye of God that little will be of great price. Some obscure sufferer in a tenement-house, some servant who sweeps a room as to God's laws, some widow who unobserved drops her last mite into the treasury, though last here shall be first there.—Edward Judson.

Intrusiveness.

One may be gentlemanly and yet be a Christian worker. It can not be necessary to bore people or intrude offensively on their privacy in order to be faithful to their souls. There is an element of honor and delicacy in dealing with these private subjects that a well-bred person will appreciate. We are not at liberty to invade roughly another's personality. He has certain reserved rights which we are bound to respect. To get a man into a corner and thrust an unwelcome subject upon him is a good way to make him hate you and keep carefully out of your neighborhood. It will not impress him with your good taste or good sense. To show a proper interest in another's spiritual welfare, to open the way for him to speak if so inclined, to make it impossible for him to say that nobody cared for his soul, is well, extremely well; but all this can be done without violating the laws of politeness. He that would win souls has great need of wisdom.

The out-and-out Christian is a joyful Christian. The half-and-half Christian is the kind of Christian that a great many of you are—little acquainted with the joy of the Lord. Why should we live half-way up the hill and swathed in mists when we might have an unclouded sky and a visible sun over our heads if we would only climb higher, and walk in the light of his face?—Doctor Maclaren.

If you have just won a great victory over Satan, don't imagine that he will never return to trouble you again. He has only gone off for reinforcements. Even when he left Jesus in the wilderness, it is said that he departed only "for a season."

Life is a building. It rises slowly, day by day, through the years. Every new lesson we learn lays a block on the edifice which is rising silently within us. Every experience, every touch of another life on ours, every influence that impresses us, every book we read, every conversation we have, every act of our commonest days, adds something to the invisible building.—J. R. Miller.

If you are cold, you will realize it; but if you are freezing, you will feel comfortable enough to go to sleep. It is so in the Christian life. When we begin to get cold we are painfully conscious of it; but when we get so far from the Son of Righteousness that our hearts are nearly frozen, we are conscious only of a comfortable drowsiness.

The priest and the Levite did nothing but "pass by on the other side." Dives did nothing to harm the beggar at his gate—just let him starve. The man with the one talent did nothing, only just digged in the earth and hid his talent. Lots of people spend life in digging and burying themselves.

The grand difficulty is to feel the reality of both worlds, so as to give each its due place in our thoughts and feelings, to keep our mind's eye and our heart's eye ever fixed on the land of promise, without looking away from the road we are to travel toward it.—Augustus Hare.

One evidence of grace in the heart is a teachable disposition. There is meaning in the word "disciple." Jesus Christ was the great Teacher. Those who follow him will be learners. To know more of him and of his doctrines will be their constant aim.—Christian Inquirer.

Fidelity in trifles and an earnest seeking to please God in little matters is a test of real devotion and love. Let your aim be to please our dear Lord perfectly in little things, and to attain a spirit of child-like simplicity and dependence.—Jean Nicolans Gron.

Let us beware of losing our enthusiasms. Let us ever glory in something and strive to retain our admiration for something that would ennoble and interest us in all that would enrich and beautify our lives.—Phillips Brooks.

It would be as difficult to take an inventory of the benefits the world receives from the sunshine as to enumerate the blessings we derive from the Christian Sabbath. — H. D. Gause.

If you want to be miserable, think about yourself, about what you want, what you like, what respect people ought to pay you, and what people think of you.—Charles Kingsley.

A Call.

To the Women of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Foreign Missionary Society—

At the recent meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions, held in Meridian, Miss., seven missionary candidates were accepted, five of whom were from the Bible and Scarritt Training-school. Miss Willie Bowman, St. Louis Conference Society; Miss Eliza Perkinson, Missouri Conference, and Miss Umberger, Houston Conference, were all recommended for appointment to work in Brazil; Miss Hattie G. Carson, South Georgia Conference, to Durango, Mexico. Miss Ida M. Worth, St. Louis Conference; Miss Viola Blackburn, North Mississippi Conference, and Miss Lizzie Martin, to be sent at some future time to Mexico and China.

The inability of the Board to furnish funds for sending out the last three of these young ladies was a source of profound regret and solicitude. They are fully ready; have fine testimonials on all requisite points, and only await the money necessary for their equipment and expenses, being eager to answer the call they believe they have received.

The missionaries in the field are pleading for help. They declare themselves scarcely able to hold the ground already occupied, as several of their number are laid aside from failing health and overwork. Open doors are on every hand, and the nations call. Only the church lags behind, and fails to meet the measure of her responsibility. The church, my sister, means you. A little self-denial, a little interest on the part of those to whom are entrusted infinite possibilities of good, and these dear girls could go without delay to teach and win for Christ hundreds of China's weary-hearted and despairing ones.

When the matter was presented to the Board, and the want of means made known, the president, with trembling voice and filling eyes, arose before the immense audience which crowded the auditorium of Central Methodist Church, and said: "My heart is almost broken, dear sisters, when I hear Miss Haygood's appeal for help for China, and when I see these dear girls begging us to send them, and we can not. We must send them!" And with this, in burning words, she called upon the Conference secretaries to pledge their help in making up the required amount. Assured that you would do far more than she promised, your secretary pledged you for only $300 on this fund. It is suggested that the Louisiana Conference W. M. S. raise $750, or sufficient to send out a missionary of her own. The call is made, through this paper, upon every auxiliary in the State to do what she can towards the fund for out-going missionaries. We want every man, woman and child in the Conference to have a part in this, that each may have a sense of personal interest in the messenger we send.

The money must be in hand Sept. 1. Let each auxiliary communicate with the Conference secretary, giving amounts collected for this special fund; sending all money to the Conference treasurer, Mrs. S. B. McCutchen, labelled "Fund for out-going missionaries."

Let us do this work speedily, joyfully and with a bountiful hand.

Encouraging news comes to us from many parts of our Conference. Several secretaries have held their district meetings, and report most satisfactory progress. Other districts are planning to hold their meetings in the near future. Our corresponding secretary is constantly receiving reports of new auxiliaries, and we trust that at our annual meeting, in October next, our treasury may show a marked increase in funds over last year.

Only two out of our nine districts fail to show advancement in this Parsonage and Home Mission work. In one of these the difficulty seems to be in finding a district secretary, though we feel sure we will yet discover some woman willing to devote a part of her time and talents to this important cause, especially as we have had from this very district several applications for parsonage aid. In the other case—a district with a prosperous, intelligent population, and a splendid woman for district secretary—we can only account for the lack of growth by the supposition that because every charge in its bounds has a parsonage, its women can not realize the needs in other poorer districts, and have not yet opened their hearts to take in our Western work and home mission needs.

While I thank God for what he has already enabled us to do, I long for the day when our literature shall be more generally read; when our Cuban Mission in Florida and our mountain schools shall take a stronger hold upon the consciences of our women; when the families of our frontier preachers shall receive due consideration at the hands of the home churches, and when every charge in our land shall have a comfortable parsonage.

Occasionally some of our preachers think we are slow in giving them the help they ask; and sometimes it is hard not to feel disheartened ourselves when the demands upon us go so far beyond our ability to grant; but when we recall our small beginnings [illegible] years ago, it seems wonderful that we have accomplished so much, and we realize that our heavenly Father has greatly blessed our efforts to serve him. Ten parsonages assisted in our own Conference, besides the fifty per cent. of dues sent to the general treasurer, is not a bad record. In addition to this, our society has contributed liberally to the Cuban Mission and mountain schools, and several valuable barrels and boxes have been sent to the frontier. Our auxiliaries in many places are increasing in interest and zeal, and the outlook is most promising.

One of the most hopeful signs, to my mind, is the harmony and Christian fellowship with which the W. F. M. S. and the P. and H. M. S. work together, each society stimulating the other to better service.

In Macon, where there is one of the strongest P. and H. M. auxiliaries in the Conference, the W. F. M. auxiliary has recently made rapid advance, and the two societies work hand in hand.

May we everywhere do what we can to strengthen this bond, and may both of these great church organizations increase daily in love and good works!

FROM THE WORK.

INDIAN MISSION.

MR. EDITOR: Will you please publish the enclosed letter received from Bro. Cammack with regard to the Indian Mission in Mississippi? I want the people generally to see it, and especially the Methodists of Mississippi; and surely they will then come to the rescue, and, as we have waited so long, will not wait and let the work suffer for lack of means any longer. Will not some liberal man or woman give $50 to purchase the material to build that church that is so much needed? Bro. Cammack thinks $50 will buy the material, and he says they will do the work. Surely the Methodists will not allow them to worship in the woods any longer. God forbid it. If no one will give the $50, who will give $25, $15, $10 or $5 to help build that church? And surely the Methodist people will not allow Bro. Cammack to pay an assistant out of his meagre salary.

Brethren, sisters, please help now. Send as before by registered letter to Oak Ridge, Warren county, Miss., or money-office order on Vicksburg, Warren county, or Phœnix, Yazoo county, Miss., or check or draft on Vicksburg or Jackson. Always state where it is to go, or leave it to me, and I will do my best, with the advice of Bro. Cammack, with the means on hand.

Please everybody send something as soon as you read this, and be assured we will very highly appreciate any help given.

I have received the following amounts since the last report:

Mrs. R. A. Harris	$ 1 00
Mrs. Martha Broomfield	2 00
Mr. C. C. Stedman	10 00
Mr. Matthew Howes	1 00
Mr. R. J. Cammack	50
Miss Lizzie Howes	1 00
Miss Anna Howes	1 00
Rev. B. F. Lewis	5 00
Rev. J. H. Foreman	2 50
Rev. F. B. Ormond	1 00
And Rev. A. S. Lutz, of the Louisiana Conference, for his Sabbath-school	3 50

Many thanks to all the brethren and sisters, and now please let it come at a lively rate on salary, land or church building. Your brother in Christ,

A. D. MILLER.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

Teles, Miss.

Rev. A. D. Miller—

DEAR BROTHER: Our second Quarterly Conference was held yesterday (June 7). Bro. Jones, our presiding Elder, was present, and the Indians are delighted with him. My interpreter said to me, "Bro. Jones is a mighty good preacher." Bros. Foreman and Ormond were with us and rendered good service. We had a good meeting in every respect. We had one accession, a young man about twenty-one years old. He is a promising young man. This makes two received this year.

This is my fourth year among these Indians, and I have studied them closely and tried to find out all I could about them in order to be the better prepared to serve them acceptably and profitably. There are about 2,500 Choctaws in Mississippi. The Baptists and Catholics both have a mission established for them; the former have about 350 members, and the latter have about the same number of communicants. They also have schools where the youth receive instruction. We were late in commencing work among them; but not too late to do good. Beginning in January, 1892, with many difficulties in the way, with the odds all against us, we have slowly, but gradually planted the seeds of the Gospel of Christ from a Methodist standpoint, which is springing up and bringing forth fruit to the honor and glory of God and to the salvation of precious souls; and we are here to-day, provided we faithfully and promptly fulfill our promises and meet our obligations. To do this we must have money, and have it soon, or else the cause will suffer and precious souls will be lost.

1. We have bargained for a tract of land at Tallahulok, where I have a nice little church built and a prosperous school in operation. We are due about $200 on this land.

2. We are anxious to build a church at Cushtusa, about fourteen miles west of this place; but for the lack of means we have about decided to put up a log hut. I have six members at this latter place and about twelve others who are earnest seekers; but I have no shelter for them. We hold our services in the woods.

3. By some oversight the Missionary Board failed to make an appropriation for an assistant this year, and this has greatly crippled our preaching force and is working a great hardship on myself, for I am trying to get along as much as possible without an interpreter, and I am paying my assistant for half of his time out of my own salary.

Now, in conclusion, I would say for your encouragement and for the encouragement of all to whom you may present the cause of the Indian Mission, that since we begun this work we have baptized and received forty-eight adults and ten infants. We have established two public schools and enrolled twenty-six pupils. We have one Sunday-school with eighteen scholars, and have another place where the Sunday-school literature is distributed and studied, but have no one to conduct the school.

W. W. CAMMACK.

ROUND AND ABOUT.

This, so far, has been a good year for us, both in our college and also in our revival work. It seems to me that I have never seen the time when God seemed so willing to save the people. Our meetings in Coahoma county, Indianola, Booneville, and Jackson, Tenn., were especially fine. The meeting at Booneville was simply wonderful. I don't know that I have ever seen greater displays of God's power. So many old Confederate soldiers were converted in that revival. It was a very pathetic scene to see those grey-haired men rejoicing in each other's arms. They once fought for a "Lost Cause," but now, enlisted under the blood-stained banner of the cross, they have commenced their triumphant march which shall end at last in heaven.

The Rev. J. C. Parks, who is one of our most promising young preachers, had made great preparations for the meeting. I find that we need not expect big results in any department of church work unless we make big investments. God pays us for what we do.

We are now at Okolona, Miss., in the midst of one of the grandest meetings ever held in the town—so the oldest citizens say. Will tell you more about the results later. Rev. J. H. Shumaker is the preacher in charge, and he is a fine helper in a meeting.

The only thing I dislike about this college agency work, it keeps me away from home so much. It was very pleasant to be at home with my family during the interesting commencement exercises of the Grenada Collegiate Institute. It was delightful to have in our home such men as Thames, Harrison, Bowen, Ramsay, Dye, and Evans. Bowen preached a great sermon on Sunday, at eleven o'clock, and Ramsay a most eloquent discourse at night. I never saw Bowen appear awkward but once, and that was when he was standing on Sunday morning at the first of the service (just after the singing of the long-meter doxology by the choir) offering the invocation prayer. Bowen is evidently not accustomed to it, for we all know that, ordinarily, he is very gifted in prayer. I would suggest that he practice just a little along this line, as this seems to be the new order of worship in some of our fashionable churches.

However, I am told that Bowen succeeded better than Dr. Murrah did during the State Epworth League Conference. The people say that he failed completely, and that they sat down without hearing the invocation prayer.

Brethren, had we not better follow our own form of worship as laid down in the Discipline?

I pray the blessings of God upon the ADVOCATE and its readers.

W. M. MCINTOSH.

Okolona, Miss.

Rev. Eugene Johnson, P. C., Indianola charge, North Mississippi Conference: "Our church at Indianola has recently been blessed with a gracious revival of religion. A month ago Bro. W. M. McIntosh was with us, and preached eight days. His sermons were earnest, clear and powerful. Great spiritual awakening was the result of his efforts. His principal themes were entire repentance of all sin, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ that manifests itself by doing his will. These he stressed with much earnestness. The end of his preaching was to show what man must do to be saved, and well did he accomplish this end. Drunkards, gamblers and licentiates were pungently convicted and converted by the gospel of Christ as he presented it. He has faith in the efficacy of the blood of Christ to save from all sin, and he inspires faith in others. There will be thirty or forty accessions to the various churches through the influence of the meeting. I have received eighteen into the church on the charge since Conference. The ladies of Indianola have succeeded in putting pews and a new pulpit in our church here, and carpeted the aisles and rostrum. They will soon add other needed furniture. I know my predecessors will be glad to hear this. Our Children's Day exercises were quite enjoyable."

Rev. W. D. Bass, Tahlequah, I. T.: "I wish to tell the brethren that we are having a great religious awakening in Tahlequah, the capital of the Cherokee Nation. Bro. S. Q. Bass and myself have been preaching here for the last ten days, assisting Bro. J. S. Lamar, the pastor. Eternity alone will reveal the good accomplished. Brother will continue the work till Sunday night next. Many of the Cherokees are fine people indeed. Chief Harris is a very intelligent gentleman, and, best of all, he pledged himself last night to take up his cross and become a follower of the meek and lowly Jesus. I think he is the very man to stand at the head of his nation, and he adds grace and dignity to his responsibilities by accepting Christ as his leader. Glory to God! the kingdoms of this world are becoming the kingdom of our Christ. I leave to-day to spend a few weeks in the Chickasaw Nation. Any of my correspondents can always reach me by addressing me at Corinth, Miss. God bless all the brethren and the dear old ADVOCATE!"

A Visitor, Wesley Chapel, Phœnix, Miss.: "The Children's Day exercises were held at Phœnix, May 19. A large crowd was in attendance. The program was fine and carried out to the letter. Dr. A. K. Barrier, superintendent, reported a flourishing school with some sixty names enrolled; Mr. T. A. Holloman, Bible teacher. Services began at half-past ten o'clock. The marching of the armies was grand; Mrs. E. T. Gildart leading the first division; Mrs. L. J. Abel, the second, and Prof. R. Gildart, the third. Each was presented with an appropriate banner. Mr. Holloman carried the standard of this army. Mrs. T. A. Holloman presided at the organ. The music was as good as I ever heard from a city choir. We then had speeches from the little ones. They did well. Then the collection, which amounted to $20 or $30. The benediction was pronounced by Bro. Alexander, and then a grand dinner in the beautiful grove. We then had several speeches from visitors and a solo by Mr. T. A. Holloman. Benediction by Bro. A. D. Miller."

Rev. W. J. Burt, Kossuth, Miss., June 12: "Last Sunday was Children's Day with us at Kossuth. It was a splendid day. Children, parents, pastor and all enjoyed it. Mrs. W. C. Babb had trained the children. They were well prepared, and all did well. We liked the programme because it contained so many figures and so much information that our people ought to know. Our collection amounted to $4 83. Next Sunday we will have children's service at Rienzi. Pray for us, that the Lord may graciously visit us and many may be added to the church!"

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent nurse of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. She weighed but 78 lbs., and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved; could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I was cured by Mrs. M. E. O'Fallon.

and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 lbs., eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

HOOD'S PILLS cure liver ills, constipation, biliousness, jaundice, sick headache, indigestion.

Centenary College.

Centenary is the only School for boys owned by the Methodist Church in Louisiana. It has done a good work for the church. All it asks in return is the liberal support of the Methodist people. It is easy of access by rail. The grounds and buildings are ample and beautiful. The course of study is thorough. The grade of scholarship is high. The moral influences are unexcelled. The community is noted for its refinement and culture. It is just the place for boys desirous of a complete education. For details, see Catalogues, which will be sent on application. Address,

The Outlook.

Viewed from the standpoint of prohibitory legislation, the outlook for the temperance cause is decidedly cheering. A larger area is covered by prohibitory laws than ever before. Moreover, the laws for the suppression of the liquor traffic are more stringent and better adapted to the end in view than at any former period. It is also an undeniable fact that public sentiment in favor of prohibitory legislation is far stronger than ever before and is constantly increasing in volume. Notwithstanding all this, we shall deceive ourselves if we take an optimistic view of the situation. Powerful as prohibitory legislation is, it is only one of many weapons that must be used for the extirpation of the gigantic evil of intemperance.

One of the most prolific sources of intemperance the law-making power does not touch. We refer to the convivial customs of society. The wine cup must have the post of honor at every public banquet. So decrees Dame Fashion; and who will have the temerity to bid defiance to her authority? A city can not honor a distinguished guest without inviting him to quaff "the dark beverage of hell." (We may owe the devils an apology for this last expression. If so, we are ready to make it.) The college boy, with diploma in hand, must share the same experience. And no marriage feast, or other private banquet, would be in good form without the cup that inebriates. So the ultra-fashionable tell us. Who is so blind as not to see the result of all this? Does the worm of the still lose his venom by changing his habitat? Is alcohol one whit less poisonous when served by the jewelled hand of beauty? Does that jewelled hand take away from the vile poison its strange power to beget a thirst which naught but another poisonious draught can quench? He is blind who says that the saloon is the only drunkard factory in our midst. Fearful as are the ravages of the American saloon, it has a formidable rival in the American home. The wine-glass on the table is making drunkards by the wholesale. Who has not witnessed this diabolical process from its seemingly innocent beginning to its awful consummation? This evil, however, is not confined to "society" circles. Thousands of homes that care little for Fashion's behests are pursuing the same suicidal policy. If the wine-glass is not on the table, the decanter is in the cupboard; and the contents of the decanter are thought to be a sovereign panacea for almost every disease that human flesh is heir to. Is some member of the family indisposed—suffering from indigestion, headache, toothache, or toe-ache? If so, then there is a sovereign remedy in the decanter. Not only so; but the notion prevails that alcohol is a preventive as well as a cure for disease. Hence an occasional sip from the decanter is thought to be good for the health even when there is no ache or pain, no symptom of disease whatever. The occasional sips after a while become regular; and the regular sips increase in frequency with each revolving year until the persistent health-seeker becomes a helpless infant in the hands of a giant. How strange that such ignorance concerning the physiological effects of alcohol should prevail in this enlightened age!

Off for Mexico.

At the recent commencement of Edward McGehee Female College, Woodville, Miss., a diploma was given to Miss Julia Filigonia Roldan, of Mexico. Miss Roldan became a pupil of Edward McGehee four years ago. Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, who was at that time president of Edward McGehee, had offered to educate free of charge a Mexican girl who would devote herself to mission work. This young lady having heard of Dr. Featherstun's generous offer, through Dr. J. M. Weems and his wife, who were then doing mission service in Mexico, joyfully accepted it. She applied herself diligently to her studies and made rapid progress. She took the first honor in her class. She now speaks English with admirable fluency and correctness. She is remarkably handsome and attractive. After a sojourn of a few days in this city she will enter upon her work as a missionary in her native land. She esteems it a great honor to be permitted to serve God in this way. We predict large results from her labor of love. Dr. Weems and his devoted wife never did a better service for the church than when they induced this gifted young woman to consecrate herself to this noble work in behalf of her countrymen.

Miss Roldan is, we believe, the first Mexican girl ever educated in the United States for the purpose of fitting herself for service in the mission field. She certainly displayed genuine heroism in leaving her native land and coming among strangers speaking a different tongue.

The Education Fund.

In last week's issue we published a communication signed by Bishop Galloway, Dr. Murrah and Maj Millsaps in behalf of the educational fund of the Mississippi and the North Mississippi Conferences. That appeal should bear much fruit. That fund is used partly for the education of young preachers and partly for the education of other worthy young men of limited means. Surely no urging should be needed to induce our people to give to this cause. It is a claim which the church can not afford to ignore. The assessment should be the minimum, not the maximum. What we have said applies to the Louisiana Conference no less than to the Conferences in Mississippi. Centenary needs and should have every dollar of the educational assessment.

C. H. Manship died at his home in Jackson, Miss., on the twenty-first, in his eighty-fifth year. He had been a citizen of Jackson for more than sixty years and had filled many official positions. He was a man of the strictest integrity, and was universally esteemed. He had been a loyal Methodist for many years.

The Heart Considered as Engineer of Power.

[The following article by Dr. C. H. Parkhurst, taken from the New York Independent, though written for Presbyterian readers, is none the less wholesome for Methodists. In our judgment, nothing superior to it has appeared recently in the periodical press. We are sure that many of our readers will be grateful to us for the privilege of perusing it.—EDITOR.]

We never do well anything that we do not love to do. Good work is with the grain, not against it. The first great question that a person has to settle with himself in determining his vocation is, What shall I most enjoy doing? The Bible says, "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily." And what we can not do heartily we can not do; that is, if it is anything of a kind that a machine could not do just as well as a man can. Success comes from self-expenditure, and we are not going to burn ourselves up for anything to which we have not given our heart. Success is the child of passion. No man ever did a great thing without getting into more or less of a fever over it; and it was not the doing of the great thing that produced the fever, but the fever that rendered possible the doing of the great thing. Along every line of large achievement enthusiasm is the road breaker. Ever man that succeeds is a hobby rider. In this is no disposition to slur over the element of intelligence involved in all these varieties of activity. Art, however fiery, must be bitted with discretion. Scholarship, however zealous and impetuous, requires to be held under restraints and to be bound down to certain well-determined lines of endeavor. But at the same time it is not because men have a head for these pursuits simply, that their achievements are so large, but because they have a heart and a passion for them. Head is apparatus for directing business passion; but when it is motive power that is being considered, that is inside the heart, not the skull. It is precisely as it is in the locomotive; the valves, cut-offs, and all that kind of thing make out the brain of the engine. But there is no work in a valve; there is no pull in a cut-off. The work is in the steam and in the fire that makes it.

All of this we can take over directly into the domain of Christian activity. Christianity is here to do something. Christianity is not an idea, it is not a picture, it is not a philosophy; it is a device for the accomplishment of palpable effects. It is not thought, it is not argumentation, it is not brain, although like all passion, properly amenable to the checks and restraints of brain. But it begins before brain. It is an impulse that brain does not produce, however much it may properly have to do in the way of regulating it. Christianity was first of all the divine passion of him who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life. In its very inception it was not a matter of divine omniscience nor of divine omnipotence. It was not an affair of God's brain nor of God's muscle; it was a matter of passion; it was love, not thought; it was heat, not light. It is the passion of love that is the energy which is driving all the gospel machinery the world over. Calculation does not do it. Ratiocination does not come within a hundred thousand miles of it. There is room for brain here, just as there is in our business; but Christian brain will not drive Christian enterprise any more than mercantile brain will drive mercantile enterprise. Brain can not drive; there is no drive in it. And the only passion that will fill the requirements of the case is the same passion that Christ had; the passion for God and for souls. The entire Christian matter Christ has himself focused in the single passion of love; not love as an idea, but love as a personal possession. Such impassioned devotement as Christ evinced may be at a discount, but sooner or later the church will have to come back to it. Calculation and argumentation do not touch it. Brain is the accessory and not any part of the true originary. We are not arguing for mania, nor putting in a plea for insanity, but men succeed in business because they are hot in their devotement to business. It is the impassioned men that have made history always, religious and secular both. They are torch to the heaped-up combustibles; they are pulse to the general body that is listless and waiting. No man has moved the world like Jesus Christ, because no man besides him has embodied so wide, so profound and so divine an enthusiasm. People are passionate in everything but their passion for men; and that is the one Christian passion; it is the one passion that makes a man Christian in heart, Christian in purpose, and Christian in his effects. If there were no more heat in business than there is in the church, half of the institutions of this town would be in the hands of a receiver inside of a week. Brain has been tremendously overworked as a means of evangelization. People have got to be loved into the kingdom of heaven, not thought into it. It is the heart that requires to be touched; heart is the only thing that can touch heart. An affection costs more than an idea. Our loves we coin from our own hearts; our ideas we make up as as we go along. Hence it comes from this and other causes, that Christianity easily degenerates from a condition of fervid love to men into a condition of highly intellectual interest in problems of Christian truth. It has always been so. So long as feelings remain feelings there is no disposition to analyze them or to classify them, or to mold them into a system. Molten shot are not gathered into canisters till they have cooled. It would have been as impossible to make a creed on the Day of Pentecost as it would have been for Peter to take a photograph of Moses and Elias on the Mount of Transfiguration. There was too much in the air. It has come about that a great deal of the part that Passion used to play in Christianity has now come to be played, or attempted to be played, by sheer, though cool, bloodless ratiocination. Let there be no words spoken in disparagement of brain. Brain is almost the best thing God ever made. And yet, at the same time, there is nothing that a man is more liable to trip over than his own head. We can not make thinking about doctrinal truth, no matter how philosophically and logically it is done, take the place of loving men's souls, and loving them with the same sort of intense fervor as that with which Christ loved them, and as that which cost almost every one of the original Twelve his comfort and his life. If we could have a real old-fashioned Wesleyan revival of Christian religion, and a shedding abroad of impassioned Christly love like that which came in the wake of the Pentecostal downpour at Jerusalem, all of our doctrinal problems would pass out of sight like raindrops falling into the sea, and melt into disregard and invisibility like darkness under a shaft of lightning, like frost-crystals before a breath of south wind. The disciples quarreled, but not when the Lord was by. There were no sects in the little upper room. Nobody was a heretic when the tongues of fire were in the air. "Minds differ, hearts agree." There may be a great deal of moisture in the air, but a breath of cold wind has got to strike it before it will condense the moisture into mist and shut out the stars.

Millsaps College.

It will be gratifying to the friends of Millsaps College to know that arrangements have been made for Dr. I. W. Cooper to canvass in the interests of the college during the Summer. He will visit as many sections of the State as possible, and I bespeak for him the hearty co-operation of all our pastors. We want at least three hundred students next session. I hope the Boards of Education being now formed throughout the bounds of our two Conferences will aid us in every way possible. Send to me list of names of persons to whom catalogues ought to be sent and help Bro. Cooper in his work when he visits your community.

W. B. MURRAH, Pres.

NOTES.

The second-blessing controversy will come to a close in these columns in about two weeks. No more communications on this subject are needed.

***

Rev. W. A. Clarke, of the Louisiana Conference, is making a brief sojourn in the empire of Texas. On his return he expects to bring with him an accomplished Texas girl to take charge of the Tallsheek parsonage.

***

When the crowd that has gathered in the saloon dispersed at 11 o'clock P. M., after exchanging opinions on the silver question, it was found that while they all had a job lot of confused opinions the bar-keeper had what little silver had been in their pockets at 8 o'clock.—Baltimore Advocate.

***

The Epworth League Conference at Chattanooga, this week, will be by far the largest ecclesiastical convocation of the year. An account of the proceedings will be given in our next issue. Those who desire extra copies of this issue should write us at once. Price, five cents per copy. Six copies, twenty-five cents.

***

The tent in which the Epworth League Conference is to be held was dedicated last Sunday. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Spencer, a missionary from India. The clergy of the city of all denominations occupied seats on the platform. The choir consisted of eight hundred voices. The audience numbered more than twelve thousand.

***

The Rev. H. T. Cunningham has been transferred from the West Texas to the North Mississippi Conference, and will assume charge of Tyro circuit, Sept. 1, in place of Rev. C. W. Perkins, who has been transferred to the West Texas Conference, and appointed to Sherman Street Church, San Antonio, Bro. Cunningham's late charge. For the next two months Bro. Cunningham's address will be Verona, Miss.

***

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, Courtland, Miss., June 21, writes: "We organized a fine Epworth League at Pope's station, last Friday, and to-night a well-arranged program will be carried out under the direction of the Literary Department. Last week we traveled this section in interest of International Conference, to be held at Chattanooga, and ascertained that this (Sardis) district will be well represented. Three or four will go from this pastoral charge. Of course, we shall expect to see the cheery face of the editor of the ADVOCATE in Tennessee's historic city. What a gathering that will be! While many are unfortunately engaged in a war of words about terms, Methododism, like the flow of a majestic river, moves onward, lifting the nations up into the light of millennial glory. 'All aboard for Chattanooga.' Amen!"

***

The Texas Advocate, of last week, has a column and a half editorial anent the Boston banquet in honor of Dr. E. E. Hoss. The following sentence is quoted from Zion's Herald:

"He (Dr. Hoss) expressed the hope that the movement towards federation would be a success, and frankly declared that his kind of federation would be some form of organic union."

This is commented on in the following fashion:

If Dr. Hoss intended to say either directly or indirectly that the M. E. Church, South, would ever consent to any kind of federation or union which would in the least affect its autonomy, its absolute independence of any legislative interference from any source whatever, he spoke without authority and does not represent his church. He will find himself unable to deliver the goods. He ought to know that our people never will consent to any arrangement which imperils, even to an infinitesimal degree, our sovereignty, institutions, and our traditional policy.

The congregation at Grape Street Church was favored, last Sabbath, with a strong, spiritual sermon from our senior Bishop.

***

Dr. E. E. Hoss has long been known to the public as an editor and an educator. The last issue of the Nashville Advocate, however, shows that he has been something else, viz., a pastor. That first-page editorial, "A Leading Steward," could not have been evolved from the inner consciousness of a student in his library. It was evidently born of experience in the pastorate.

***

The experimental use of Dr. Paquin's anti-tubercle serum by physicians of this city has proved highly satisfactory. Dr. H. S. Lewis, a leading practitioner, has published a report from which we glean as follows: One patient, in the second stage of consumption, has gained three and a half pounds of flesh in seven days. Another has gained four and a quarter pounds in nineteen days. In both these cases there has been a corresponding improvement in all respects. Several other cases are reported with similar results. The serum is now used in the Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital and in the Charity Hospital. It is also used by the following physicians of the city: Drs. Butterworth, White, Landried and Dupaquier. Should the new remedy prove as efficacious in the hands of these physicians as in the cases reported by Dr. Lewis, it is safe to say that consumption will be robbed of half its terrors.

***

The trustees of Millsaps College have elected I. W. Cooper, of Meridian, to canvass sixty days for the college. Rev. R. J. Jones, presiding elder of Meridian district, has appointed Rev. W. T. Browning assistant preacher at West End Station, Meridian, for sixty days. The canvass to be made for the college will be for students. Three hundred boys are wanted next session at Millsaps. Let every pastor send to I. W. Cooper, Meridian, Miss., the names of any boys who are contemplating attending school next Fall. Let pastors and other friends all over the State give Bro. Cooper invitations to attend meetings where the interests of the college may be advanced. We congratulate the Board of Trustees upon this arrangement. During his former agency Dr. Cooper made many friends for himself and the college.

***

Our next-door neighbor, the Dominion of Canada, has a novel sort of rebellion to deal with. About five years ago the Province of Manitoba inaugurated an educational reform movement which culminated in the establishment of a public school system somewhat like that of the United States, i. e., a secular system. Appropriations of public funds were no longer made to sectarian schools. This, of course, excited the ire of Rome, who appealed to the Dominion government for a restoration of the old regime. The Dominion government referred the matter to the Imperial Privy Council. That body granted the request of the petitioners and issued a peremptory order to the Manitobian Provincial Government to re-establish the old system. Final action has not been taken by the Provincial government, but the debate in the Legislature shows what the result will be. Manitoba proposes to coo her educational machine to suit herself. It remains to be seen what the Dominion and Her Majesty's government will do about it.

***

On April 15 a case of typhoid fever occurred in Stamford, Conn. This was followed by other cases in rapid succession. By the first of May there were 120 cases. Up to the present time the number of cases is 475. The number of deaths is thirty, and several other cases will no doubt terminate fatally. The local Board of Health instituted an investigation as to the cause of the epidemic. It was very soon ascertained that all the earlier cases were patrons of a certain dairyman of the name of Blackman. Following this clue, the health authorities subjected the milk of this dairy to a chemical analysis and found in it such a percentage of typhoid bacilli as no one would expect to find outside of a sewer. An inspection of the dairyman's premises revealed the fact that the water in which he washed his milk vessels came from a well in his stable within six feet of the stall occupied by his horse and within twenty feet of other outhouses. Here then was the cause of the epidemic. Blackman is now in the clutches of the law and will have to answer to the courts on a charge of criminal negligence. This case is a pointer. Not only in the crowded cities, but in the most salubrious rural districts, typhoid fever sometimes rages with fearful violence. We have long been convinced that in most such cases the source of the disease is impure water. In the country as well as in the city it is often the case that a well is so located as to be the receptacle of a vast amount of filth which drains into it underground. Better dig a new well in a different locality or build a cistern than to have an epidemic of typhoid fever.

A Chance for Women to Make Money!

I saw one of your subscribers tell in your columns a few weeks ago how she made money selling Dish Washers. I wrote to the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and obtained one of their Dish Washers and tried it myself first. It is just lovely; you can wash and dry the dishes for a family in two minutes, without touching your hands to a dish or putting them in hot water. I made the first day, $5 and everybody wanted a Dish Washer just as soon as they saw me wash their dishes. Since then I have made as high as $18 a day, and I believe that I can get enough money to keep my brother at school next Winter and have money in the bank too. Any lady or gentleman can do as well as I am doing, I am sure, as I had no experience. When everybody wants to buy, it is not hard to sell. Anyone can get information by writing the above firm, and I am glad to add my experience, because I think it is my duty to others to help them over the hard times.

MARTHA FRANCIS.

East Mississippi Female College.

A very interesting session of East Mississippi Female College has just closed. The commencement exercises were highly profitable, and were well attended by the citizens of Meridian and friends from a distance. Dr. Murrah preached the sermon; Dr. Jones, of the Presbyterian Church, and Dr. Hunnicutt delivered addresses. There were seven graduates. Their essays reflected credit on their institution. Everything passed off to the honor of the president, faculty and students.

I know of no more important location than Meridian, and no college which should demand the patronage of the Methodists east of the Pearl more than East Mississippi Female College. The faculty is first-class. The buildings are commodious and comfortable. The surroundings are very home-like. The charges are in keeping with the times. The president is a graduate of the famous Emory and Henry College, Virginia. He has been an itinerant in the Mississippi Conference for a number of years, and in every position he has proven himself worthy of the confidence and love of the church. He is a brother of such gentleness, sunshine and refinement that one who knows him well is compelled to see the fitness of things in his presidency of a female college. The college is doing thorough work in every department.

Mrs. Holloman (whose name in Hazlehurst, where she taught for several years, before she presided over the destinies of Dr. Holloman, is a synonym of kindness and thoroughness) is an important factor in this college. If the Methodists east of the Pearl are seeking a school where the health, the spiritual and mental life of their daughters will be sacredly guarded and developed, let them send to the East Mississippi Female College.

This college—mark my prediction—is on the eve of a greater prosperity than ever.

This letter is written con amore.

Jackson District Conference.

The Jackson District Conference met in the lovely little town of Yazoo City on the morning of June 13, with Rev. E. H. Monnger, D. D., that sweet-spirited presiding elder, in the chair. The attendance of the preachers and lay delegates was unusually good. Rev. J. G. Cammack, P. C., of Fannin circuit, preached the opening sermon to the delight and edification of all present. The first day was devoted to the interest of Sunday-schools.

The first night of the Conference was given to the cause of education. W. B. Murrah, D. D., president of Millsaps College, addressed the audience. The Conference was glad to welcome T. B. Holloman, J. W. Chambers and J. W. McLaurin, each representing his field of labor.

This indeed was a very interesting District Conference, and we report much improvement along all lines of church work in the Jackson district.

T. B. Cottrell was unanimously recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. C. C. Campbell, W. H. Cassell, Dr. F. Carruthers and R. L. Bennett were elected delegates to the Annual Conference. Yazoo City station and the Camden circuit are leading the district, with H. W. Featherston and R. A. Breland at the throttle.

Our Annual Conference has made a wise selection in Yazoo City for the place of her next session.

Brethren, we will be royally entertained. W. J. FERGUSON, Sec.

East Mississippi Female College.

We have just closed a most delightful, successful session at East Mississippi Female College. Dr. Murrah was at his best on Sunday morning, and doubtless our young ladies will carry with them through life profitable recollections of his earnest words.

All of our exercises from first to last gave great satisfaction, and our people think the college is on a boom. "So mote it be." Already we are getting calls for catalogues and soon we enter the Summer campaign.

Please permit me to say that if any of your readers desire to employ teachers for another session, I am ready to give them names and addresses of young ladies who, I think, are capable of filling positions in the school-room or in the family. T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Notice.

If any of the brethren desire my service in their protracted meeting, they can drop me a card where and when to come. W. F. SANDERS.

Mansfield Female College.

The Mansfield Female College has made another year of history and finished another year of usefulness.

The last scholastic year, though not one of financial success to the institution, has been one of earnest and successful work on the part of the faculty. With a smaller number of pupils than usual, the number of teachers has been equal to that of former years; and all who are familiar with the work of the college speak in highest praise of the character of that work, the standard of scholarship being higher than for years past.

The recent commencement exercises began with the commencement sermon by Dr. La Prade. I did not hear it, but heard of it as an effort of high order, and appropriate to the occasion. The specimens of "art work" which were on exhibition in the chapel evinced first-class teaching ability, together with patient and painstaking work on the part of the pupils. The concerts gave evidence of equal ability and care in the department of music. On Wednesday the president, after an appropriate address, delivered diplomas conferring the degree of M. E. L. to four young ladies. These were Misses Ruth Patterson, Anna M. Henderson, Josie Thompson and May Walker—two of them preachers' daughters.

The school will be reopened at the usual time in September with the same faculty as last year. The buildings are sadly in need of repairs. According to a provision in the deed, no debt can be incurred, and, therefore, cash must be forthcoming for needed repairs. Who will give it? J. M. BROWN,

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the sweeping reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain this price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to June, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1.65.

SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The twenty-fourth Annual Camp Meeting will be opened on Wednesday evening, July 10, next, and continue for eight or ten days.

Arrangements have begun for accommodating the multitudes that annually visit these delightful grounds. Reduced rates have been obtained from the various connecting railroads with the L. and N. system, enabling all persons desiring to attend the Camp Meeting to begin their journey on July 1, and remain on the grounds until the end of August. Tickets on sale from July 1 to 27, inclusive. All trains to stop at Camp Ground station from July 8 to 29, inclusive.

The three presiding elders of the three patronizing District Conferences have charge of the religious exercises, and eminent preachers will assist in the services.

The Camp Ground is located on the Mississippi Sound, having a frontage of nearly 1,400 feet, and a depth of nearly two miles. The Louisville and Nashville railroad trains pass through the grounds, and the station is about 100 yards from the enclosure. A fine artesian well furnishes the grounds with a bountiful supply of excellent water. The sea bathing in front of the grounds is unsurpassed by any other resort on the coast. An abundance of beautiful shade trees afford shelter from the Summer's sun, while pure, refreshing zephyrs from the Gulf of Mexico exhilarate and renew the panting and jaded visitor from our smoke enveloped and dust-stifling cities and towns.

Persons wishing to secure accommodations, before the rush at the opening of the Camp Meeting, should address communications to Dr. M F. Tucker, chairman Tent and Lodging Committee, Mobile, Ala. Communications concerning transportation should be addressed to E P. Mackie, chairman, New Orleans, La.

All preachers will be admitted into the grounds, and provided with lodging accommodations, free of charge. Board will be furnished them at half rate, as heretofore.

As the property of the Southern M. E. Church, only its members can own cottages on the grounds. Members of other evangelical churches may rent accommodations, under the rules of the Board of Trustees, and are heartily welcome.

Private boarding tents also furnish accommodations to visitors. Their addresses may be obtained by communicating with the chairman of the Tent and Lodging Committee.

The entrance fee exacted from each person, from ten years old and upward, is in the nature of an individual contribution toward defraying the expense of the Camp Meeting and caring for this valuable property with its extensive improvements. No gate fee will be exacted on the Sunday of the Camp Meeting. All the time and attention devoted to the grounds by the trustees in gratuitous, and in the interest of the salvation of souls. A cordial invitation is extended to all who would like to visit the Camp Meeting.

HOME CIRCLE.

"GONE HOME."

BY ARABELLE RICHARDS.

I had a little darling once,
A precious, blue-eyed boy,
He was the pride of my heart,
Of my life the light and joy.

He was perfect in form and feature
As ever a babe could be.
A "jewel of richest value," but God
Only lent him to me.

I loved my bright-eyed darling
As only a mother could love,
But he was too pure for this world
And God has called him above.

I was vain and sinful to think he
Belonged to me, and me alone,
For he belonged to the blessed Savior
And now he has taken him home—

Home to that beautiful land above
The "city where cometh no night,"
Where all is joy, love and peace,
And "God's own face is the light."

But I bless the Lord who gave
And the Lord that taketh away,
For lending me the little lamb
Tho' he only a short while did stay.

I feel that I have been made richer
By the precious little life;
For now I have treasure in heaven
In the land that's free from strife.

And I know, if I am faithful
To the charge that God has given,
I shall see my little one again
And live with him in heaven.

Advice to Young Men.

EIGHT EXCELLENT SUGGESTIONS BY THE LATE PROF. J. STUART BLACKIE.

1. Never indulge in the notion that you have any absolute right to choose the sphere or the circumstances in which you are to put forth your powers of social action, but let your daily wisdom of life be in making a good use of the opportunities given you.

2. We live in a real and a solid and truthful world. In such a world only truth, in the long run, can hope to prosper. Therefore avoid lies, mere show and sham and hollow superficiality of all kinds, which is at best a painted lie. Let whatever you are, and whatever you do, grow out of a firm root of truth and a strong soil of reality.

3. The nobility of life is work. We live in a working world. The idle and lazy man does not count in the plan of campaign. "My father worketh hitherto, and I work." Let that text be enough.

4. Never forget Paul's sentence: "Love is the fulfilling of the law." That is the steam of the social machine.

5. But the steam requires regulation. It is regulated by intelligence and moderation. Healthy action is always a balance of forces, and all extremes are dangerous, the excess of a good thing being often more dangerous in its social consequences than the excess of what is radically bad.

6. Do one thing well; "be a whole man," as Chancellor Thurlow said, "do one thing at a time." Make clean work and leave no tags. Allow no delays when you are at a thing, do it and be done with it.

7. Avoid miscellaneous reading. Read nothing that you do not care to remember, and remember nothing you do not mean to use.

8. Never desire to appear clever and make a show of your talents before men. Be honest, loving, kindly and sympathetic in all you say and do. Cleverness will flow from you naturally, if you have it; and applause will come to you unsought from those who know what to applaud, but the applause of fools is to be shunned.

Religion in the Home.

We are not angels; we are only men and women, and we share the imperfection of manhood. We are not perfect apples; we are speckled apples—all of us. I do not care how deep and sweet and tender and accordant love may render the home life, it can not but happen that in the close contact, in the every-day openness and disclosure of the home, our bad points will come out. No family is made up of perfectly straight sticks, but crooked ones. And when they are piled together in the closeness of home life the crookedness will appear. The man and woman married the most utterly, married along the whole line of their natures, must yet find some point where there is not complete contact. There is dissimilarity of temper, there has been dissimilarity of education. Before musicians can pour forth a perfect harmony, they must bring their instruments into tune.

Before two hearts can perfectly strike together; they must be keyed to the same note, and that can not be altogether done before marriage. The exact real self does not appear in courtship. It is the best self, the self dressed in the best wardrobe of manners and sentiment and sacrifice, that appears then. After marriage the self puts on its common habits for what it is. Then each real self must adjust itself to each real self; then must each bear and forbear. Then must any incompatibility be met and mastered by a mutual charity which suffereth long and is kind, which never faileth. Now it is just here in the closeness and disclosure of the home that religion is most needed. One must enter into the Christian method of finding life by losing it; the soul must possess itself with the sweetness of a Christian love, must put its foot upon the neck of any miserable pride of self-assertion and keep it there. A Christian confession of wrong must be as quick and spontaneous as the breath. Christ in calmness, in tenderness, in self-sacrifice, must dwell in the heart of each. Then shall that home be Christian.—Christian Work.

Facts for the Boys.

The chief official in a railway office, in one of our largest seaboard cities, recently advertised for a copying clerk at a salary of thirty dollars a month. He received over five hundred answers to his application, the large majority of which were from married men, the graduates of colleges, sons, in many cases, of working men, but young men also whose dress, habits and tastes were those of the wealthy and leisurely class.

At the same time, in the same city, "boss" builders were advertising in vain for carpenters, masons and painters to finish the work for which they had contracted. These workmen, when found, were paid from three to four dollars a day. Even the skilled cooks, chefs, in the hotels and wealthy private families of the same town, were paid one hundred dollars a month.

These are significant facts. What do they prove?

Not that the work of a man with an educated brain is less valuable and more poorly paid in this country than that of one with skilled fingers, but that the market is overstocked with the first class of laborers and not supplied with the last.

The chief reason for this is, as we all know, the action of the trades unions in barring out apprentices from their shops. The great industrial schools which have been, or are about to be, established in most of our large cities, will soon, it is hoped, remove this difficulty.

But the second difficulty will not be so easily disposed of. It is the silly prejudice among boys against labor with their hands as being "ungenteel." The clerk who copies letters for a dollar a day, with no possibility of ever rising to higher work, is nearer their ideas of "a gentleman" than the mechanic who designs and originates work, who controls other men, and for whom a wide path to usefulness and success is always open; or than the farmer or ranchman whose work demands all the forces of his mind and body, and brings him into contact with nature and his fellow-men. Is it not a silly prejudice?—Exchange.

A Thought for Mothers.

Talking the other day with one of the most sensible women I know, one, too, whose large family is so well ordered that there never seems to be a particle of friction in its management, I was pleased with something she said about children, and I determined to repeat it to a wider audience than the one my friend had at that moment.

"I never fret about the little faults of manner, nor even about transient irritability, in my children," said the lady. "Children as they are growing up, go through many temporary conditions, which, if apparently unnoticed, pass away. In fact, there are little moral disturbances to be expected, like whooping cough and measles in the physical life, and, if the general home atmosphere be wholesome and the trend right, I do not think it worth while to be too much distressed over occasional naughtiness."

Is there not comfort here for you, dear friend, who can not understand why John, carefully trained as he is, sometimes, in the eager heat of play, bursts into the room like a tornado, or forgets to put cap on nail and books on shelf, as an orderly boy ought? And if Sarah is not so patient as she should be with the younger ones, sometimes has mysterious fits of depression, or is hysterically gay with no cause that you can see, summon your own gentle self-possession to the front; remember that the period between childhood and youth, like all transition periods, is very trying, and while you pray a good deal about your darling, do not worry about her or talk to her too much. Above all, do not suffer yourself to be always censuring a sensitive boy or girl, to whom judicious praise now and then will be a tonic.

Line upon line, precept upon precept, we must have at home. But we must also have serenity, peace, and the absence of petty fault-finding, if home is to be a nursery fit for heaven-growing plants.—Illustrated Christian Weekly.

What Is In Your House?

When the long-buried city of Pompeii began to be uncovered, men were introduced into the very scenes of its home and business life in the days of its glory. The houses were opened to view, and the pictures and utensils and statuary and architecture and hundreds of things disclosed the character and habits of the life of the people, and the stranger now visiting the unburied city, and walking the streets, and going into the houses and shops and forums and temples and theatres that were crowded with a busy, active, pleasure-seeking population, can see for himself just how they lived and what was the nature of their pursuits.

It is a deeply impressive lesson to meditate upon—how, after lying for eighteen centuries in the grave, these things have been disclosed to us, and especially how, among the freshest of the things preserved, are numerous evidences of the sensual and vicious pleasures in which the people indulged. The very works of art which ministered to their vices now rise from the grave to testify against them. What was done in their houses is now brought to the light of day.

Suppose, now, that our home life could be put into some permanent form, and then our houses should be buried by a similar catastrophe, and at the end of eighteen centuries be brought to light. What would they disclose to the curious investigators of that day? If at the great judgment, when the world has risen from the grave, there shall be a revelation of all secrets and an exact picture of our homes as they are at present, what shall they see as they gaze upon it? What does God see there now?—Rev. J. Fewsmith.

"We have heard of a member of the church who is greatly troubled because members of his family do not seem to be interested in the church or its work," says the United Presbyterian; "and yet this man does not take into his home a single church paper. He has himself to blame for the careless condition of his family. One who does not patronize a grocery store must expect to go hungry." There are many such "greatly troubled" church members now-a-days, and their only solace seems to be sought in the very edifying 36-page Sunday morning blanket sheet. Was it Spurgeon or Moody who said that "the angel Gabriel couldn't preach to a man who had just been reading the Sunday paper"?

Mental and Moral Results of Strong Drink.

This loss of self-respect, the lowering of ambition and the fading out of hope, are signs of the progress of this disease in the character. It is a mournful spectacle—that of the brave, ingenuous, high-spirited man sinking steadily down into the degradation of inebriety; but how many such spectacles are visible all over the land! And it is not in the character of those alone who are notorious drunkards that such tendencies appear. They are often distinctly seen in the lives of men who are never drunk. Sir Henry Thompson's testimony is emphatic to the effect that "the habitual use of fermented liquors, to an extent far short of what is necessary to produce intoxication, injures the body and diminishes the mental power." If, as he testifies, a large proportion of the most painful and dangerous maladies of the body are due to "the use of fermented liquors, taken in the quantity which is conventionally deemed moderate," then it is certain that such use of them must result also in serious injuries to the mental and moral nature. Who does not know reputable gentlemen, physicians, artists, clergymen even, who were never drunk in their lives, and never will be, but who reveal in conversation and in conduct certain melancholy effects of the drinking habit? The brain is so often inflamed with alcohol that the functions are imperfectly performed, and there is a perceptible loss of mental power and of moral tone. The drinker is not conscious of this loss, but those who know him best are painfully aware that his preceptions are less keen, his judgments less sound, his temper less serene, his spiritual vision less clear, because he tarries every day a little too long at the wine.—Century Magazine.

Take Care of Your Eyes.

Rest is one of the important factors in treating diseased or strained eyes—rest of eyes, rest of body and mind. Avoid also wind, dust and smoke. Personal habits enter into the question of causation of eye disease, and their regulation becomes therefore a part of the hygienic treatment. Diet is important, chiefly through its effects upon indigestion and general health, which frequently have much to do with the condition of the eye. The first offense against the eyes is reading with a poor light. This requires the ciliary muscle to do extra work to sharpen sight. It applies to dim lights, twilight, sitting too far from the light. The second offense is one of posture—stooping or lying down congests the eye, besides requiring unnatural work of the eye muscles. Reading in trains is our third offense, the motion causing such frequent changes of focus and position as to tax the muscles of accommodation as well as the muscles of fixation. Reading without needed glasses or with badly-fitted ones is the last. Eye strain is certainly a factor in producing disease of every part of the eye. Old age is the time of retribution for those who have sinned against their eyes. Young folks, take splendid care of your eyes, and when you are old you will reap a rich reward.—Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

STRAWBERRY SOUFFLE.—Put a quart of berries over the fire with four ounces of sugar and a half pint of water; when the fruit is soft, take from the fire and press through a sieve; rub four ounces of flour smoothly with half a pint of cream, having previously rubbed butter, the size of an egg, well into the flour; put this with the fruit, return all to the fire, and when it begins to boil, add first the beaten yolks of six eggs, and next the whites whipped to a stiff froth. Fill the souffle mold at once and bake in a moderate oven.—Exchange.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM.—One quart cream, one pint milk, two cups of sugar, two eggs beaten light, five tablespoons grated chocolate rubbed smooth in a little milk. Heat milk to nearly boiling, pour in slowly beaten eggs and sugar, then chocolate; cook until it thickens, stirring constantly. Cool, beat in the cream, and freeze.—Selected.

518 ROYAL ST.,

New Orleans, La.

Memoir of Rev. Robert Parvin.

Rev. Robert Parvin died at his home in Gibbsland, Bienville Parish, La., on Tuesday, June 4, 1895.

At the last session of the Louisiana Conference, in New Orleans, he was appointed to the Valley circuit. He entered immediately upon his new field of labor; was kindly received by the people. He was making his arrangements for a vigorous and aggressive campaign against the powers of darkness when he was suddenly stricken down. He was from home, on his work, when attacked, but succeeded in getting home, and took his bed. He was down eight or ten weeks before the end came. His disease was obscure. The physicians were never able to diagnose the case. He suffered greatly, first with pains in his body. It finally settled in his left leg and foot. For some time he could not lie down in bed, but sat in his chair, with his foot in another chair. At times the pain was most excruciating, and would cause him to scream almost at the top of his voice. When the first paroxysm had passed, he would commence singing some favorite song, and would end it in a shout of praise. During his illness he was frequently visited by Bros. May and Harper. They always found him cheerful and happy—ready to live and battle on for the Master, or to die and go to his reward in heaven.

On the morning of his death he ate his breakfast as usual, served at his bed. After breakfast Dr. Cortney, an old friend, called to see him. Bro. Parvin seemed cheerful and even lively. The Doctor had been gone but a short while; there was no one in the sick-room except a young man who was nursing him. He heard Bro. Parvin give a slight struggle. Turning, he saw him gasping for breath, and before the family could get in the room the spirit of our noble brother and veteran in the ministry had passed to its eternal rest and reward.

Bro. Parvin was one of our oldest and most useful preachers. He was a chosen vessel of God. The church and the times needed him. He came at the call, and met his responsibility as a hero goes to the field of battle. He was sent to the outpost, where hardships were greatest and dangers thickest; but he flinched not. With sword in hand, "of heavenly temper keen," he met the enemy and conquered, planting the red cross colors far in advance.

He came to this Conference in the vigor of his young manhood. In the Fall of 1855, in company with the writer of this notice and quite a number of other preachers, he transferred to this from the Memphis Conference. Bro. Parvin's death leaves but two of that class of transfers as members of this Conference—Rev. [illegible] Scurlock and myself. Bro. [illegible] White is still living, but is [illegible] the local ranks.

Bro. Parvin laid the foundation of Methodism in the Calcasieu country. He preached the first Methodist sermon ever preached in Lake Charles. He was a man of considerable force of character. He always impressed people, and in the rural districts he drew large congregations, and was wonderfully successful in winning souls for Christ. He had power with God and with men. The seals to his ministry will be as great, if not greater, than any other preacher in this Conference in his day. His footprints are found all over this State and portions of Arkansas. His name was a household word in all the works he ever traveled. For forty years he preached the gospel of Christ amid the swamps and hills of Louisiana, and thousands of souls will rise up in the last day and call him blessed.

Bro. Parvin was a camp meeting preacher. He knew just how to get up a camp meeting, and how to run it successfully. He established and conducted more camp meetings than any dozen preachers in the Conference. He was liberal and hospitable to a fault. He gave more money to the Conference collections, according to his ability, than any other preacher in it. I have known him to run a whole camp meeting, feed and sleep all visitors, and sometimes do a great deal of the cooking; then preach in his turn, and manipulate all the altar exercises. He always won the hearts of the children where he preached, and thereby brought them to Christ. He was not a great preacher. His early advantages for an education were limited. He often told his congregations that he "graduated at Brush College." But he won a renown that many should emulate. He was a winner of souls. He was always found on the right side of all moral questions. He was a man of strong convictions, and he had the courage of his convictions.

The announcement of his death will carry a pang of sorrow to thousands of hearts throughout the State. His body was buried in the cemetery at Gibbsland to await the resurrection morn. The funeral services were conducted by the following ministerial brethren: Revs. J. D. Harper, Thos. J. Upton, T. B. White, H. W. May, J. White Davis, and this writer. A large concourse of mourning friends attended his funeral.

His afflicted widow needs the prayers and sympathy of the whole church. God bless the widow and two children!

DOUGLASS.—ELIZABETH DOUGLASS, wife of Mr. W. J. Douglass, was born March 12, 1825; died April 1, 1895. Sister Douglass was born near Lebanon, Tenn.; came to Mississippi at the age of nine years. She was married to W. J. Douglass, Feb. 22, 1844, and was the mother of several children, whom she left to mourn her death. A severe and prolonged illness was probably the cause of her failing health. Her trouble was a partial paralysis, which by steps deprived her of speech and the use of her limbs. While her suffering may not have been severe, yet it was constant and hard to be borne. With a Christian's faith and hope, she was never heard to murmur. A happy heart lets love's light shine out from a pleasant countenance all the while.

The funeral service, conducted by Bro. J. E. Thomas, was attended by many friends, who laid, with tender and loving hands, the weary body to rest in Mt. Zion Graveyard. May God bless the afflicted family, and unite all in the home beyond the skies.

Abbeville, Miss.

GRAHAM.—CORNELIUS P. GRAHAM was born March 4, 1854, at Abbeville, Miss., and died at his home in that place, May 24, 1895. Declining health for a year or so brought him very low, when it was discovered that he had cancer of the stomach.

He was married to Miss Willie K. Malone, Dec 5, 1877, which union was blessed with two children. Mr. Graham was converted at the age of about eleven years. He never attached himself to any church. This mistake opened the way to temptations and the world, in which his life was mostly spent. He had great faith in the prayers of Christian people. He stated repeatedly that he was not afraid to die. He said he put himself in the hands of God.

DOMESTIC.

The biggest cotton mill in America will be built at Adams, Mass. It will cost $1,000 000.

The disbursements to pensioners next month on account of the quarterly payment will aggregate $13 380 000

Police Inspector McLaughlin, of New York, has been convicted of extortion in office, and was sent up for two years and six months.

Wilberforce University, a negro institution of Washington, offered to make Mr. Cleveland a LL D. the other day, but he respectfully declined the honor.

During a race between two excursion steamers on Lake Michigan, on June 23, an explosion occurred on one of them, in which two men were killed and thirteen wounded.

The preparation of the exhibit of the Bureau of Education at the Atlanta Exposition is being actively pushed. The exhibit will be more complete than that made in any former exposition and will form a general display of educational methods in the country.

It is said that Cardinal Gibbons, who is now in Rome, carried a protest from the American bishops against the presence of Archbishop Satolli in this country. Archbishop Satolli will be made a cardinal as a recognition of the Pope's approval of his actions in this country, and, owing to this, it is thought the memorial will not be presented.

Eastern capitalists, it is said, are going West and buying up whole towns. Everything in the town of Morse, Wis., except the school-house, which no trust wants, has been purchased by a syndicate of Boston capitalists. The price paid is supposed to be in the neighborhood of $2 000,000. The syndicate will establish the largest tannery in Wisconsin, giving employment to nearly 1 000 men.

Mr. E. C. Johnson, chief of the old sugar bounty division of the Internal Revenue Bureau, and latterly engaged in the income tax work until the abolition of the tax, left for New Orleans on June 20. Mr. Johnson will have immediate charge of the execution of the regulations for paying the sugar bounty, and he comes to Louisiana to familiarize himself with the facts connected with the production of the last sugar crop.

The amalgamation of the International Pressmen's Union and the Typographical Union has fallen through, principally because the former union was opposed to such a step. After amalgamation had been knocked in the head, the representatives who met in Philadelphia, last week, drew up a report of a sort of co-operative system, which later in the meeting was adopted. The report is to the effect that whenever the typos want to inaugurate a strike they can call the book-binders and pressmen out, providing the local unions give their consent. But the expenses of the strike must be borne by the union inaugurating it. The same rule applies to all three unions.

FOREIGN.

A movement is on foot to move large numbers of the Christians of Armenia into the Caucasus, where they will be out of reach of the Turk.

The events of the past few weeks connected with the progress of the revolutionary movement in Cuba have unquestionably been favorable to the advocates of Cuban independence.

It was announced in the Houses of the British Parliament on June 24, that the ministry had tendered their resignations to the Queen, and that they had been accepted. It was also announced from London that Lord Salisbury, who had been summoned to Windsor on Sunday, to confer with the Queen as to the formation of a new ministry, had consented to accept office and would at once proceed to organize a ministry.

With much pomp and ceremony, and with, it would also seem, the great powers of the world through the guns of their warships painting him, Emperor William on June 20 formally opened the Baltic and North Sea Canal. He entered the western opening of the new waterway at Brunshuttel, not far from Hamburg, shortly after daylight, on board the Imperial yacht, and arrived at the eastern opening of the canal at Holtenau shortly after noon. Over fifty war vessels, representing all nations, were on the scene.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

By Rev. Henry H. Ahrens.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE RESULT OF THE DIVINE REMONSTRANCE.

(Job xiii, 1-17.)

To Elijah the Lord did not appear in a storm, but in the still, small voice; but to Job he speaks out of the whirlwind.

1. God deigns to reveal himself to mortal man. He spoke to Job; he speaks to all men. Specifying:

(1) The Decalogue is addressed to all men. The personal pronoun "thou" means the writer and the reader.

(2) When the Master was transfigured on Tabor, the Lord said, in regard to Christ, that we should hear him. We learn of him who is meek and lowly of heart.

(3) He who spoke with authority, and not like the scribes, assured, during the nocturnal conference with Nicodemus, that, in order to inherit the kingdom of God, we must be born again.

2. The Lord's address deeply moved the patriarch. He says in verse six: "I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes."

(1) Self-righteousness is the barrier which prevents the arrows of God's truth to find lodgment in the heart. Happy the man when that barrier is removed, and the reluctant confession ensues, "I abhor myself." Discard Pharisaism, and you are not far from the kingdom of God.

(2) Repentance an inevitable prerequisite to restoration to God's favor. Only the penitent soul is able to lay hold on the promises. Saving faith can not possibly be acquired without it. When the prayer, "God, be merciful to me, a sinner!" emanates from the perturbed soul, mercy is secured.

3. God forgave Job his temporary spiritual vacillation, which had led him at times even to doubt God's providential guidance of the affairs of man.

(1) That his restoration to divine favor was complete may be inferred from the fact that God admitted him as intercessor for his three refractory and caviling friends.

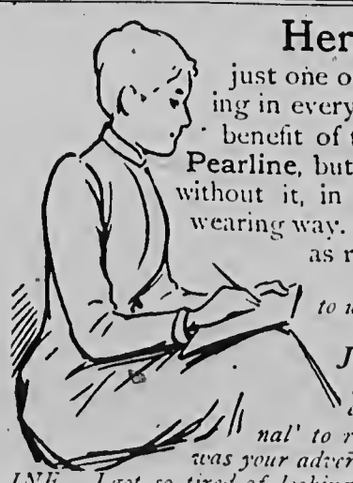
(2) Because Job's afflictions had been permitted by Providence in order to test his integrity—the viciousness of Satan's sinister insinuation being fully demonstrated—God deemed well to restore to the patriarch his former temporal prosperity; yea, to give him twice as much as he formerly possessed.

The moral taught in the Book of Job is simply that Satan is a vicious liar. Satan's malicious intimation to the contrary notwithstanding, the severest afflictions had not demonstrated that Job's piety was devoid of honesty. Oh! for honest piety!

"I have been a sufferer for years with my throat. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and it has been improved. I have gained ten pounds since I began using it."—Mrs. J. F. Greenwood, Rhoda, La.

Hood's Pills cure biliousness.

A report has gone out from Constantinople saying that a state plot directed against the Sultan of Turkey has been discovered in the Pacioaidi Military College. Thirty students were arrested last week, and the arrest of others is imminent. The students declared themselves to be opposed to the present regime, which they maintain is transforming a peaceful population into a horde of savages.



Here is a Letter,

just one out of hundreds that are coming in every day. We publish it for the benefit of the women who read about Pearline, but who still keep on washing without it, in that needlessly hard and wearing way. We omit name and address, as requested:

"Now I will tell you how I came to use your PEARLINE. We have taken the 'Ladies' Home Journal' for several years. Three and a half years ago, every time I picked up my 'Journal' to read, the first thing I would see was your advertisement and picture of PEARLINE. I got so tired of looking at it, that I said I would get a package and try it. The result was, when the package was gone I bought another package, and so I have done ever since. I never think of going to wash clothes since, without my PEARLINE. I have recommended it to quite a number of people, who are now using it, just from my recommendation. I have just written this to you to let you know how highly I prize it. I don't want my name and address to go before the public." 424

S. J. Davies, P. E.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

Negotiations have recently been opened through agents in China of American interests with a view to having China secure from American capitalists the amount of silver requisite to pay the Chinese war indemnity of 200,000 000 taels to Japan.

To Get the Best Teachers

School Boards, Colleges or Families can obtain the names of efficient teachers FREE OF CHARGE by writing THE SCHOOL AGENCY, BIRMINGHAM, ALA., stating the kind of teacher wanted, the position to be filled, salary and other particulars. This Agency is endorsed and patronized by the leading Educators and Institutions of the South and Southwest.

FIRST GRADE successful teachers desiring enrollment should write for circulars.

It is reported from Batavia, N. Y., that John H. Yates, local editor of the Progressive Batavian, has resigned that position in order to devote all his time to writing hymns for the evangelist Sankey.

THE VIRGINIA COLLEGE,

Roanoke, Virginia.

The Virginia College for Young Ladies under the presidency of Dr. W. A. Harris, located in the beautiful city of Roanoke, Virginia, is one of the foremost schools in the South. Its magnificent new buildings with all modern improvements, on a campus of ten acres, amid gorgeous mountain scenery in the Valley of Virginia, famed for health; its ample course of study, European and American teachers, make the Virginia College for Young Ladies one of the most attractive and beautiful college homes in the Union. It is attended by one hundred and ninety-six, representing twenty States. For descriptive catalogue address

A Little Serious Reflection

Will show you that it is always best to pay enough. Low-priced things are not always cheap. Low prices are sometimes dearly bought. There's such a thing as "extravagant economy"—that means on the price at the cost of the quality. We sell good groceries just as low as it is possible to sell them. We wont sell the other at any price.

We want you to come here because it pays you to do so, and because it pays us to have you.

BEYOND.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

It seemeth such a little way to me
Across to that strange country—the Beyond;
And yet not strange, for it has grown to be
The home of those of whom I am so fond;
They make it seem familiar and most dear,
As journeying friends bring distant regions near.

So close it lies, that when my sight is clear
I think I almost see the gleaming strand.
I know I feel those who have gone from here
Come near enough sometimes to touch my hand.
I often think, but for our veiled eyes,
We should find heaven right round about us lies.

I can not make it seem a day to dread
When from this dear earth I shall journey out
To that still dearer country of the dead,
And join the lost ones, so long dreamed about.
I love this world, yet shall I love to go
And meet the friends who wait for me, I know.

I never stand above a bier and see
The seal of death set on some well-loved face
But what I think: "One more to welcome me
When I shall cross the intervening space
Between this land and that one 'over there;'
One more to make the strange Beyond seem fair."

And so for me there is no sting to death,
And so the grave has lost its victory.
It is but crossing—with a bated breath
And white, set face—a little strip of sea,
To find the loved ones waiting on the shore,
More beautiful, more precious, than before.

Communications.

Some Points of Methodist Doctrine.

These articles are written to provoke thought and to stimulate study, and not for controversy. In matters of epithets and repartee I am competent to hold my hand with most men. I am not engaged in that game now. If I can, in some sort, stir the young preachers and others to a close, careful study of theology, I will have accomplished my purpose. The critical and controversial spirit and habit is not the best for the discovery of truth.

If Rev. J. M. Davenport, or anyone else, thinks he can prove the "second-blessing" theory of sanctification by the Word of God, let him do so. I will thank anyone for the proof. My contention is, that this theory, or view, of sanctification is not taught in the Bible, and that it is contrary to the standards of Methodist doctrine. I think every point of Methodist doctrine can be sustained by the Word of God. Anyway, I am bold enough to attempt the proof. Any doctrine that can not be proved by the Word of God is not to be required of any man as an article of faith. This is the reason why I reject and repudiate the "second-blessing" view of sanctification as now held and taught. For this reason I deny the theory of the removal of natural depravity in regeneration or in sanctification. That which is natural is not sin, is not sinful. Men are misled by the term "original sin." Methodists, and Arminians generally, use this term in a sense wholly different to Calvinistic Churches. Some men are misled by the terms "natural corruption," "inbred sin," "the carnal mind," "indwelling sin," and "roots of bitterness." As Methodists use these terms and explain them, they are inoffensive. Used in the Calvinistic sense, it looks as if we were liable to be damned for what we are, for being natural human beings, for having natural depravity—a thing that comes to us in precisely the same way that we get our hands, heads, feet and eyes. Grace was never meant to upset and subvert the order of nature. We are born as we are, and with unsaved natures such as we have, by virtue of the relation of Jesus Christ to the race. It is a matter of the grace of God that we are born as we are instead of being incarnate devils. The state of nature is a state of grace—"prevenient grace." This is a point of Methodist doctrine. (See Romans v, 18.) Perhaps a few quotations from my old books will make this stronger. (See Articles of Religion—VIII.) James Arminius says: "Original sin will condemn no man." Mr. Fletcher says: "Christ brings upon all infants a general justification and a universal seed of life." "Now, if the Redeemer died for our first parent, he undoubtedly expiated the original sin, the first transgression of Adam. If Adam's original sin was atoned for and forgiven to him, does it not follow that although all infants are by nature the children of wrath, yet through the redemption of Christ they are in a state of favor or justification?" Dr. Miner Raymond says: "The fact, as we see it, is that the race came into existence under grace. But for redemption the race had become extinct in the first pair, and the posterity of Adam would never have had a personal, individual existence. Not only is existence secured to the posterity of Adam by the second Adam, but also justification." This is the uniform testimony of Methodist Arminian writers from James Arminius down to Dr. J. J. Tigert. Dr. Tigert says: "Mr. Wesley held, and intended the Confession of American Methodists to express, that Christ made a universal and unconditional atonement for original sin." So when I am asked to repent and to seek forgiveness for a sin that was unconditionally forgiven more than six thousand years ago, I beg to be excused. I have not so learned the Word of God. The proposition is contrary to Methodist doctrine. I have been freely and unconditionally forgiven for original sin, and I am not guilty of it, and there is no need why I should repent for it. If I held to the Calvinistic view of original sin, I should be in favor of the "second blessing" view of sanctification. As it is, I am an Arminian Methodist on the one, and consequently a Methodist on the other. I may accept my natural depravity, and thus, by a voluntary choice, make it my sin, and in this way it becomes actual sin. When I repent, I repent for my sin, not for Adam's sin; and when God forgives me for Christ's sake. I am free from the guilt and condemnation of all and every sin for which I am guilty. To ask me to repent for my nature—the nature that came to me through the redemption in Christ Jesus—is folly. I'd just as soon think of repenting for my eyes, my head, my hands, my feet. I got the nature that came into the world with me through Jesus Christ, my Lord. He most graciously provided for me to be generated with just such a nature as I had. To my natural depravity I added moral depravity. Nature got worse by sin. It was my fault, my sin. I repented for this deeply, and God graciously forgave me. "There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit."

Paragraph 120 and Paragraph 169.

At the last General Conference I was a member of the Committee on Itinerancy, and I am familiar with the reasons given for the adoption of ¶ 120. There was much trouble in various localities throughout the church in regard to unauthorized meetings being held in our church-buildings and charges by evangelists, and the Bishops, in their Address, requested that some legislation be had touching the vexing matter. They said: "It may be well in the section of the Discipline on 'Preachers in charge' to add an express enactment against such interference, whether by local or itinerant preachers." Thus ¶ 120 recognizes the pastor's right to control all the meetings in his churches in the absence of the Bishop and presiding elder. In the case that has caused so much discussion of late the Bishop was absent, but the presiding elder was present, and he simply acted in the premises in that way which he believed was for the good of the church. The pastor, in the absence of the Bishop and presiding elder, has always had the right to control his church services; but ¶ 120 is "an express enactment" declaring that fact. It empowers a right possessed and exercised throughout the history of the church. When a presiding elder is anywhere within his district he is present for the purposes of his office throughout the whole district, and this is in accordance with the law and practice of the church. To say that his actual bodily presence alone constitutes the presence that gives him authority is to make his district, notwithstanding the fact that the Bishop appointed him to the whole of it, no more than for the time his eyes can see, his hands touch and his feet cover, so that his district will be kaleidoscopic and change with every turn of his body. To say that he can only be present officially and when holding a Quarterly Conference is to exclude him from every work in his district all the year round, except the few days given to each work on quarterly occasions. The fact is, that each Bishop has given him certain Conferences, and they constitute his charge; that each presiding elder has given him certain works, and they constitute his charge; and that these districts of Bishops and presiding elders are as clearly defined, and within as fixed limits, as are the stations, circuits or missions of the preachers in charge. Is a preacher in charge absent from his work, and without oversight and control over his flock, except when at church preaching, or actually in the house of a member making a pastoral visit? In our Southern Methodist Church, Bishops, presiding elders, pastors and people are all under authority. The Bishops said at Memphis: "Methodists have ever sought to combine order with progress and responsibility with power. Our form of Discipline defines the mode of appointment, duties and amenability of all our officers. Local preachers are required to aid the preacher in charge of the circuit, station or mission to which they belong, in supplying the people with the ministry of the Word." Our chief pastors in this (and their statement was endorsed by the General Conference) do only declare what is the law as found in ¶ 169, which paragraph, however (and to the injury of the church), seems to be steadily ignored and disobeyed. If this were not so, itinerant preachers would not locate expressly to be foot-loose to roam every whither as evangelists; and local preachers would have to work just where the Discipline points out in this paragraph. It is to be hoped that cases may come before the Bishops in which they will have to render decisions as to what is the rightful interpretation of ¶ 120 and ¶ 169. Our ministers and laymen can be better employed, and do amazingly more for the glory of God and the spread of true "scriptural holiness over these lands," by preaching and living in the power of a free and full gospel, than by such articles as have appeared in the columns of church papers touching the "New Orleans incident." If the law is bad, and the interpretation wrong, let a case or cases go up for decision to a Bishop presiding in an Annual Conference, and so reach in due time the college of Bishops, where said decision, or decisions, can be passed upon by all the Bishops. In the meantime let us preach and live "the holy gospel we profess," seeking to bring all up to God's standard for us—"a pure heart and a pure life." The multitudes are perishing for soul-food, and stones should not be given them instead of the Bread of Life.

Campaign Opened.

Not a campaign for political spoils, not a counting of the favors of the "dear people" for their votes, but to present the interests of East Mississippi Female College, and to secure the daughters of our Methodist people for her halls.

The meeting of the Jackson District Conference in Yazoo City, on the thirteenth instant, called me in that direction. On my arrival I was conducted to the delightful home of my quondam friends and parishioners, Bro. and Sister Kennard, where I enjoyed a time of pleasant and refreshing associations. The Conference was well under way; and Dr. Monnger at the head, with Bro. Ferguson a most efficient secretary, the business progressed satisfactorily. All the details of a District Conference were looked into, and without any hurry. We were pleased to meet so many old friends, and to receive words of congratulation and cheer from them. Since my pastorate in that charming little city, ten years ago, the changes have been marked indeed. From a population scarcely numbering three thousand souls there has been an increase to nearly five thousand. Both the business and residence portions of the city have extended their borders. The cotton trade has necessitated the erection of several large warehouses. Other interests of all kinds have greatly increased until the rattle of machinery and sound of whistles remind one very forcibly that he is in a lively, hustling community. In one particular Yazoo City is like Atlanta: her people never speak disparagingly of her. Everything is all right and the very best. They are already anticipating the pleasures they shall get out of the coming Annual Conference. Despite the cry that prohibition would prove the utter and eternal ruin of the place, she has gone steadily and satisfactorily foward—a living demonstration of the fallacy of all such arguments.

While this is the happy condition with Yazoo City, I can not say so much of a neighboring town which once surpassed her in population, but has held on to the open saloon and its attendant evils, while her population has grown less and her business gradually decreased. When will men learn the utter fallacy of all such reasoning?

The attendance upon the Conference was good, especially of pastors. This scribe was honored with an appointment to preach, which is always a pleasure.

Owing to the meeting of the Mississippi Conference Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at Crystal Springs, I was compelled to leave on Saturday to meet appointments at that place. Here we found forty or fifty most excellent women hard at work in the great interest of missions. These good sisters have their own peculiar way of transacting business; nevertheless, they succeed. One thing was very apparent: they were of no disposition to hurry at the expense of doing their work thoroughly and satisfactorily. The brethren may well learn lessons of wisdom from them at this point. These godly women are greatly in earnest in their labors, which was manifested by their plans for increased work on all lines. The only point at which the perplexing money question of the day seemed to interest them was how they might secure enough of either or both to carry out their plans.

Misses Barnes and Bruce were both present, and delighted the audiences with several talks.

A full account of all the proceedings will, doubtless, be furnished you by the efficient secretary of that body.

The words of cheer which we received on this double trip have been very encouraging, and enspirit us with zeal to go forward in the work for Christian education. Home again for a day, and off again for other points of interest to the college presidents.

Is the Living Present.

Prof. Drummond has been charged with heresy. His Presbytery has ordered an investigation. No doubt the Professor believes in and teaches Darwin's theory of evolution. In his recent work, "The Ascent of Man," he sets forth said development from fish to mammal, from mammal to man. This, of course, does away with the scriptural narrative of the creation of Adam and his fall. "Let him that thinketh he standeth, take heed lest he fall."

Arthur Orton, the notorious Tichborne claimant, publishes in The People the story of his attempted deception. Many good and wise people believed him the lost lord, and supported him socially and pecuniarily. We fear that the American sympathy for Mrs. Maybrick, the murderess of her aged husband, has similar foundation. Opinions and smoke are frequently identical.

A French scientist holds that the tubercle germ is frequently transmitted to the human system by rich milk, cream, and fresh butter. When the latter is rancid, the germ is destroyed. Now, sir, take back all ugly utterances of boarding-house keepers. They meant well.

Many yearn for a financial upheaval. For a depreciated currency, inflated or fictitious prices of merchandise, the golden—on a silver basis—the golden age of speculation. But the definition of speculation is: Acquisition of gain at the expense of others. 'Tis hence a species of gambling.

A Roman Catholic catechism used in Chili contains the following: "What is Protestantism? Opposition to revealed religion. What is a Protestant? One who doubts the divinity of Christ." Substituting religion for freedom in Madam Roland's famous saying: "O religion, what crimes are committed in thy name!"

We suppose it is well known that Talmage's sermons, published in about a hundred dailies every Monday morning, have not been telegraphed to said papers, as would appear to the inexperienced, but were prepared by the author days and weeks before their delivery, and transmitted by mail by a news syndicate. It frequently happened that the sermons published were not preached on the day stated.

Happy day, the Fourth of July!

"Long may our land be bright
With freedom's holy light;
Protect us by thy might,
Great God, our King!"

Would not a sermon on Christian citizenship be apropos on next Sunday? No, do not preach politics; but scriptural instruction as to our obligations to our country is right and proper.

During the recent Vassar commencement the young ladies read treatises on "The Canals of Mars," "The Bacteriology in Disease," "The Degeneration of Our Race," and kindred themes. The New York World doubts that said ladies were intimately acquainted with the subjects treated, but had largely drawn from encyclopedias.

This occasion was one of unusual interest, and sustained the high reputation of the college. The sermon was preached by Rev. W. H. LaPrade, D. D., of Shreveport, taking as his subject, "The Costly Alabaster Box of Precious Ointment." It was a discourse worthy of the occasion, abounding in strong, practical, rich thoughts, to stir and elevate the heart of the listener, and make life worth living. It was a masterly effort of edifying effect.

The little folks, on Monday night, with their cheerful faces and well-trained minds, entertained a large and appreciative audience, with credit to themselves and teachers. The primary exhibition is very popular here, and on this occasion the drills, the recitations, the singing and the instrumental music displayed a thoroughness surpassing previous occasions of the kind.

The Alumnæ had a meeting, but were disappointed in a speaker.

An intelligent and expectant audience filled the spacious college hall at an early hour on Tuesday night. It was the occasion of the annual concert. The strains of sweet music, dispensed by the beautiful and cultured young ladies, displayed accomplishments that would be creditable to any conservatory of music of great pretensions. All praise to Miss Bessie McVoy (of conservatory training) is due for her painstaking and untiring effort in training the youthful fingers that produced the sweetest music of the most intricate pieces that musical science has been able to offer. The Misses McVoy, Walker, Hungerford and Sumarall showed great proficiency, while the Misses May, Magee, Huson, Nabors and Rives, though younger, showed great progress in music.

The music department of Mansfield Female College has made a reputation of which our people are proud, and a better showing in this department would be hard to find anywhere in the South.

Wednesday was graduating day—a day on which great expectation and earnest solicitude were centered. The stage was tastefully arranged and beautifully decorated. The opening prayer was made by Rev. J. M. Brown, of Sabine parish. The piano evoked echoes under the magic and skillful touches of Miss Fanny Parsons. The graduates appeared in the following order: Miss Anna Henderson, of Caddo parish—subject, "More Beyond;" Miss Ruth Patterson, of Montgomery, La.—subject, "The Bicycle Age;" Miss Josie B. Thompson, of Arkansas—subject, "Now Is the High Tide of Life;" Miss May Walker, of Mansfield, La.—subject, "The Ships That Pass in the Day." These compositions were well written and gracefully read, attesting how thoroughly these young ladies had been trained for their respective careers.

The baccalaureate was delivered by the president, Dr. A. D. McVoy, in his usually happy style, and the diplomas presented, with an appropriate proverb, to each graduate.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard (the president of the Board of Managers) announced that the president and entire faculty had been re-elected for another year, after which he made a very sensible and practicable speech in the interest of the college, and his pointed remarks failed not to arouse an enthusiasm that will, doubtless, result in a forward march and upbuilding of our grand old college.

The art exhibition attracted great admiration, and many eulogies were passed by lovers and judges of art.

All of the exercises at this commencement evinced thoroughness of training, and proficiency on part of the pupils, and method and efficiency on part of the faculty; and we bespeak for this college a great degree of usefulness and prosperity.

The president of the Board of Managers has, with commendable zeal, begun a canvass in behalf of this college, looking to a complete renovation of the entire property, and further improvements or additions. His efforts so far have been crowned with success, having already in sight a handsome contribution.

Baton Rouge District Conference.

The Baton Rouge District Conference met in Ponchatoula, June 19, with our energetic and popular presiding elder, Rev. P. A. Johnston, in the chair. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. J. O. Bennett. While the attendance at Conference was not as large as expected, the sessions were very much enjoyed. A revival spirit permeated every session. The reports, generally, were good. The spiritual interest of the district was specially inquired into, and the reports all showed that the pastors were actively at work in the cause of the Master. The finances are not up to date; yet we do not feel discouraged, for most of our people are farmers, and have but little money until the close of the year.

Miss Mary Werlein attended to the interest of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. She organized a Ladies' Auxiliary, and expected, before leaving, to organize a Juvenile Society.

Rev. H. H. Ahrens was also present.

Conference adopted resolutions of confidence in the Christian integrity of Rev. J. J. Smylie, who was so outrageously assaulted in Tangipahoa a short while ago. The evidence given at the trial of the parties who made the assault on him proved conclusively his innocence of any improper conduct.

We are indebted to the people of Ponchatoula for the hospitality shown by them during the Conference. Their kindness was unbounded, and we all certainly feel grateful to them.

Delegates were elected to the Annual Conference. They are: H. C. Newsom, J. R. Ables, G. W. Nesom, and L. Z. Gowers. Alternates: J. W. Nicholson, W. B. Round, Robt. Babinton, and S. C. Schwing.

Our next Conference will be held in Greensburg.

Scholarships at Vanderbilt for Young Preachers.

There are several free scholarships at Vanderbilt University of the value of about one hundred dollars each, which are open to college graduates who desire to pursue a theological course of study in the Biblical Department. These scholarships cover the cost of board in Wesley Hall. They were held last year by graduates of eighteen Southern colleges and universities. Young preachers who desire to enter Vanderbilt next session would do well to write at once to the dean of the theological faculty, Dr. W. F. Tillett, Nashville, Tenn. The scholarships for next session will be awarded not later than July 15.

The New Secretary and Treasurer of the Training School.

While Miss Belle H. Bennett and Mrs. M. D. Wightman have been requested by the Board of Managers to continue to act as agents of the Training-school, all moneys hereafter will be sent to Miss Elizabeth Billingsley, secretary and treasurer, Kansas City, Mo. Miss Billingsley now has charge of all the books of the valuable agent, Miss Bennett, and is able to credit all subscriptions and to send the proper receipts, thus saving the expense of a special bookkeeper.

Let much diligence be used to complete the unfinished lectureships and scholarships as well as the Belle H. Bennett chair, and also to create new funds for this worthy institution, which has before it a great future of usefulness.

E. R. HENDRIX,

Pres. Board of Managers Scarritt Bible and Training-School.

FRIENDSHIP

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a brother's weeping eyes,
Share them; and by kindly sharing
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should a cynic be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out brave and truly
Ere the darkness veil the land;
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go—
Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So, until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

REJOINDER NO 5.

(Concluded.)

After all, our condition of admission into the Methodist Church is not found in the General Rules. When persons offer themselves for church membership, it is the duty of the preacher in charge to "inquire into their spiritual condition, and receive them into the church when they have given satisfactory assurances of their desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins; and also of the genuineness of their faith, and of their willingness to keep the rules of the church." (Discipline, page 94.)

Bro. H. quotes the above, and then says: "There it is. Look at it, and see wherein I have misrepresented them." Yes; there it is. And it is easy to see wherein he has "misrepresented them." He asks, "What is the main point here?" and answers, "A desire to flee from the wrath to come, and to be saved from their sins." Why does he say this is the "main point" here? If he were seeking to find points of similarity between our conditions of admission to the church and those of Baptists, would he not say the "main point" here is the genuineness of their faith, and their willingness to keep the rules of the church? A man often finds what he looks for when larger objects remain unseen. Sometimes it is convenient to put troublesome facts into the background.

Bro. H.'s explanation of the faith required as a condition of admission into the church is so evidently original, as well as profound, that it must not pass unnoticed. He asks, "What is here sought?" and then proceeds to enlighten his readers by answering interrogatively as follows: "Has the man faith in conformity to the Methodist Church, or a faith in the Methodist Church as a means of safety? And is he, therefore, willing to keep its rules, that he may thereby be saved from his sins and escape the wrath?" Then he says, "I submit that this is a fair construction of this paragraph." Well, I submit that it is utterly false, and without a particle of reason for its support. Bro. H. says: "But in all this elaboration, and in the more succinct statement of the General Rules, there is no word about faith in God. . . . And as the whole matter is about the Methodist Church, it seems fair to conclude that the faith here spoken of is faith in the Methodist Church, or else the man's system of belief." He must have read somewhere that "all things are fair in love and war." And as he is desperately in love with Methodism, he thinks he ought to war against all its imaginary imperfections. In doing this, anything is "fair." It may be exceedingly false and foolish in itself; but if it will aid in banishing from the earth the monstrosities of Methodism, it is "fair to conclude" that it ought to be done. Here, again, he is in doubt, and is not quite sure whether the faith spoken of is faith in the Methodist Church as a means of safety, or the man's system of belief. It is one or the other; but as both are anti-Methodistic, either one will do.

When a man so learned and logical as Bro. H. is in doubt as to the meaning of the Discipline, it is fair to conclude that a diversity of practice must exist among our pastors. When one thinks the faith referred to is "the man's system of belief," I suppose he inquires as to whether the applicant for membership is an Arminian or a Calvinist, an immersionist or an effusionist, a pre-to-Baptist or an anti-pedo Baptist. He must ascertain whether the applicant believes in the possibility or the impossibility of apostasy. The "main point" is the genuineness of his faith. It matters not whether his faith is scriptural, so it is genuine; and it must be the genuineness of the man's system of belief, not that of the church. I hereby suggest to the trustees of Vanderbilt University that they establish a chair for the instruction of our young preachers in the art of interpreting the Discipline; and that, if possible, they secure Bro. H. for the place. Though he is a Baptist, we can ill afford to lose the scintillations of his matchless genius and scholarly attainments in the illumination of all that is misty in our ecclesiastical law book. However, with all due respect for his superior capacity, I would whisper to him that in this particular case, as nothing is said in the Discipline about faith in the Methodist Church, or the man's system of belief, it is possible that the faith referred to is faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. To prevent the possibility of such a slipshod construction as that of Bro. H. in 1866, the word "genuineness" was substituted in the Discipline for the word "correctness."

Bro. H. says: "Now, tell me, with Mr. Wesley and the latest Discipline on my side, have I misrepresented Methodism? I submit that I have not." So do I. Instead of misrepresenting Methodism, with Mr. Wesley and the latest Discipline on your side, you have done so with both these authorities against you. Bro. H. seems to think that, having construed Mr. Wesley and the Discipline as teaching his whimsicalities, and having followed with his own ipse dixit, I ought to be a little more modest. He says: "Both of these say what I said, and yet you—you, just a circuit rider, with no more authority than a school-boy—tell me I have told a falsehood. Bah! Go and learn your lesson." Doubtless it is somewhat presumptuous in "just a circuit rider" to pit himself against one who embodies in his own personality all the elements of a Baptist Master of Arts and Doctor of Divinity; but, all the same, the lion, bearded in his den, has not ceased to roar as though some strange thing had happened unto him. Even Goliath was slain by David.

Man's Devices.

"Not by might, nor power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord." "Bodily exercise profiteth little." "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation." "The excellence of the power is of God." These statements set forth and declare that the power in the Christian religion is a divine, a superhuman power; that it is not of man, nor by any of his devices or super-additions. But, notwithstanding these definite and positive statements, men have almost, from apostolic times, undertaken to help God by some invention, or intervention, to save a soul from sin, and by such means to build up men in that holiness without which no man shall see the Lord. We need not mention the penances and austerities of heathens and Mohammedans, and their attempts thus to pay their spiritual debts and satisfy the claims of a violated law by voluntary sufferings. All this folly is not so surprising when we remember that these people have had no knowledge of the all-atoning and all-satisfying sacrifice of Christ. But it does seem remarkable that the Romish priests, with the Bible before them, should have prescribed such a catalogue of penances as they have. They seem to have forgotten the merit of Christ-shed blood to atone for sin, and the mighty power of the Holy Spirit to regenerate, re-create and raise the soul to newness of life.

We have noticed among ourselves the introduction and use of a number of things that rather seem to ignore the merit and all-sufficient efficacy of the gospel, the unsupplemented gospel, to save men from sin, and save forever; seeming to forget that though Paul may plant and Apollos may water, the increase must come, must always come, from God. It seems to be thought in some communities that a revival can not be had, sinners can not be awakened and brought to Christ, unless the services of some certain man can be secured; and these special men seem to feel that unless they resort to a good deal of human machinery to supplement the supposed inefficiency of the gospel, they can not bring sinners to God, and so resort to slang, to questionable illustrations and anecdotes, and antic postures and gestures, in the sacred desk. These evangelists—and others as well—resort to a number of manipulations and drills in certain species, as it were, of "manual of arms." "Propositions" of various sorts are great favorites with some as a means of bringing sinners to God. For example: They say, "All that will promise to do something that the preacher suggests, hold up your right hands, or give me your hand, or kneel where you are." Sometimes they mention several different reasons for coming forward to unite in prayer. Some to come for one purpose, and others come for some other object. It is not always the case that all the congregation understand exactly. They get a little mixed, and inadvertently fail to represent the right sentiment. So some go up with clear views, some because others are going, and some out of respect for the preacher. Now, there are always some sensitive and timid people who shrink from publicities of all kinds, and some who do not like to be drilled and manipulated. Such often remain quietly in their pews—not at all that they are opposed to Christ, or ashamed of his holy religion. We have known preachers publicly to assert these people had "chosen to live in sin, and were on the road to hell." Now, such statements we must think are hasty, violent, and improper. We are not the judges of men's hearts. God is their judge. Such expressions are, we fear, too often greater displays of temper than of the zeal that is according to knowledge.

Just here we digress a paragraph to discriminate between natural embarrassment and bearing a cross for Christ's sake. Some mistake natural embarrassment for a Christian cross. It's nothing of the sort; it has nothing to do with Christ or his holy religion. A timid woman shrinks from standing up to speak in class, or a brother from standing up to speak in love-feast; not that they are ashamed of Christ, but simply because they feel like a youth at an examination, who has a paper to read, or a speech to deliver—a painful embarrassment. As a young preacher, I suffered agonies from this natural embarrassment.

Some of these propositions and manipulations barely escape being indecorous. Such, however, I hope, are rare. Some fifty-five years ago, and more, in Middle Tennessee, a Bro. B., a good man and an average preacher, was conducting the service one night at camp meeting. There were many people from the surrounding neighborhood. Their horses were hitched to the trees and undergrowth not far from the preaching-stand. The preacher, anxious to, and determined to have an audible demonstration, proposed to the audience that at a given signal all church members present were to "clap their hands three times, and three times, at the top of their voices, say, 'Glory!'" Now, the horses and the dogs, of whom there were many present, had not been educated to hear such demonstrations from their masters, and were startled out of all propriety. There was a simultaneous and fierce outbreak from the dogs. The horses snorted, neighed, plunged, and tore loose, rending bridles, girts, and all the trappings, and rushing away in wild alarm. It was of its kind a first-class scene—stormy, uproarious, and weird. The brother, whose novel and extraordinary device this noisy confusion was, no doubt meant well, but it was clearly a mistake. Our holy religion does not consist in such demonstrations, but in "the faith that works, and works by love."

It is wonderful how the gospel, as represented by Methodism, prospered all the days of Wesley with so little machinery and manipulation. There was even no such thing as what we call an "altar," and calling people forward for prayer for seventy years, from 1739 to 1810. Faithful, heart-searching sermons were preached, and the awakened were invited into inquiry and class meetings for instruction and prayer. Conversions were much more frequent under the Word, and while it was being preached, than now; mainly, I suppose, because we taught the people to expect conversion in the prayer meeting after the sermon. God has graciously owned and honored the altar, prayer and praise service. We should see to it that we do not make an idol of the altar, and substitute it for sincere penitence and faith in Christ. It does not matter where the burdened soul is lightened of its load.

In following the history and preaching-tours of Christ, we find no trace of machinery and manipulations; and none in Peter, Stephen, or Paul. None in Luther, Whitefield, or Wesley. They believed, and preached as though they believed, the gospel, the unsupplemented gospel, was the power of God unto salvation. All this human mechanism, mixed with and used in gospel work, looks like a distrust of Christ's merits, and the Spirit's power to quicken and renew. The gospel needs none of our weak supplements to save to the uttermost.

J. B. WALKER.

"Gilderoy's" "Points of Methodist Doctrine."

I have waited for some one older than I to call attention to "Gilderoy's" errors. Allow me to call attention to the following:

"I get from my old books the idea that the present state of man is a gracious state. Original sin, total depravity, generated corruption . . . is just what it is by virtue of the death of Jesus Christ." ("Gilderoy.")

"And in Adam all die; . . . the natural consequence of this is that everyone descended from him comes into the world spiritually dead, dead to God, wholly dead in sin; . . . bears the image of the devil; . . . the image of the beast." (Wesley's Ser., 45, first div., fourth par.)

One says our native state is a gracious one; the other a hellish one, with the image of the devil. One ascribes to Adamic pollution; the other to the "virtue of the death of Jesus Christ."

"Gilderoy" says he is dealing with "original sin" in the "Methodist sense of the term." Mr. Wesley says: "Original sin is the corruption of the nature of every man whereby man is in his own nature inclined to evil." (Ser. 13, par. 3.) Mr. Wesley ascribes this corruption to the fall; Bro. "Gilderoy" says it is by "virtue of the death of Jesus Christ."

Mr. Fletcher expresses his belief on this subject by quoting from the Ninth Article of the Church of England creed, viz.: "Original, or birth, sin is the fault and corruption of the nature of every man that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam: . . . in every person born into the world it deserveth God's wrath and damnation."

A question: Can man have anything in him deserving "wrath and damnation" that is there by virtue of the death of Jesus Christ?

Again: "I get from my old books that a regenerated man may go on and perfect holiness in the fear of God, so that he is sanctified wholly throughout; . . . and still the sin, the kind of sin that was generated in him, remains. It was never meant to free the human race from original sin, in this sense of the term." ("Gilderoy.")

"Most sure we can not (get rid of inward and outward sin), until it please the Lord to speak to our hearts the second time. Be clean, then; only the evil root, the carnal mind, is destroyed, and inbred sin subsists no more." (Wesley's Ser., 14, par. 20.)

"And when we go on 'from faith to faith,' when we have faith to be cleansed from indwelling sin, to be saved from all our uncleanness, we are likewise saved from that guilt, that desert of punishment we felt before." (Ser. 14, par. 4, second div.)

Mr. Watson says, in the twenty-ninth chapter of his Institutes, that "the deliverance from sin here spoken of"—referring to several passages of Scripture quoted—"can only be meant our complete deliverance from all spiritual pollution, all inward depravity." (Read a few paragraphs of above chapter.)

Again: "The sin of original sin is forgiven in regeneration." ("Gilderoy," first paper.) "And the man is not to blame for what was begotten in him by his father according to the flesh." ("Gilderoy," May 30.)

Our brother has the chance to straighten out that muddle. It is rather hard to believe that Wesley, Watson, Fletcher, and others whom he has read, would take so ridiculous a position as ascribing to God either the punishing or forgiving man what he is not responsible for. It bears absurdity on the very face of it; and if any of these old authors so teach, let us have it in their own words.

Again, he has learned that Adam "was pardoned and accepted of God," and also that men are in danger of awaking in the same hell with him.

Now, it would be interesting to know in which one of the old books this record of the "ups and downs" of our foreparent is found; and which one of them made the discovery is entitled to—a brass button. And as a kindness to many who would like to know, let him tell us where to find it.

It seems to me that "Gilderoy's" letters are an attempt to save the old authors from teaching the "second-blessing theory." Why not own up like a man, and then assert our right to opinions of our own. Mr. Wesley and his followers were only men, and to my mind it is littleness personified to accept a thing as true simply because some other man has thought or said so. We had as well be ruled by a living Pope as a dead Wesley, especially when for the sake of being as strong as possible on each subject as it came to hand. He affirmed theories for which he admitted he had no clear scriptural authority.

A Presiding Elder's Plan.

I have been trying a new plan on my district. When a presiding elder before, I found some very grave difficulties in the usual plan of proceeding with the work. I found it a great evil to be unable to organize my work more quickly in the beginning of the Conference year. I found it very unsatisfactory to only spend Saturday and Sabbath at a quarterly meeting, and a very serious matter in closing a large portion of my work from two to three months before the coming Annual Conference. I think I have remedied all these evils and have been enabled to be more in contact with the people, and personally assist in protracting services in the various charges.

Here is my plan: I make my first and last rounds simply business rounds. Preaching at every quarterly meeting (weather permitting), but holding these meetings every other day, or as rapidly as I can, according to distance apart and convenience of travel. If acquainted with the country, I can hold my first round of fourteen appointments in about twenty-one or twenty-two days. I thus see all my preachers, arrange for all the assessments, and learn the outlook and condition of things in less than a month after the adjournment of Conference. I thus get all the machinery at work right at the beginning of the Conference year. I arrange to assist in a protracted meeting at every other appointment on the second round. I am thus brought in sympathetic touch with all the people; visit the families with the pastor, and pray at their family altars. During the third round I hold protracted meetings on the charges omitted in the second; thus am in a protracted meeting on every charge in the district during the year. As presiding elder I am not in the cold middle, without sympathy or fellowship with the people, but am in close contact both with pastor and people, and enabled to join in revival services through the entire district. During this second and third round I can assist in the taking of the general collections, etc. My fourth round can be made beginning, say, twenty days before the meeting of Conference. All the reports can be ready in all the charges, and we will not suffer from imperfect reports, as is the case as usually managed. Reports to a Quarterly Conference three months before the convening of the Annual Conference are necessarily imperfect in every department of the work. Revivals may increase the membership, the number of baptisms, and the amounts collected for our various causes, as missions etc.

We have had a very pleasant and moderately prosperous year thus far. Not being at all acquainted with the locality of the various charges, and their various appointments, I could not manage my first round as I wished. The desperate weather of February greatly hindered the opening of the work; but an early District Conference has enabled the pastors to combine forces for a grand battle for souls during the third round, which will begin at the close of June. We have revival influences in many of the charges, and there have been conversions and accessions at a goodly number of places. Our finances are generally better than was anticipated at the beginning of the year. I brought the interests of the ADVOCATE before the District Conference. May the God of all peace give us peace and harmony in all our borders!

About Sanctification.

Justification frees us from the penalty of our past sins. Regeneration is defined as a change of our nature. But what part of our nature? Evidently, it produces no change whatever in the outer man. It is the inner man, the soul, that is changed. All this, however, does not destroy the carnal mind. The conflict with the world, the flesh and the devil still goes on. Let it be remembered, however, that the carnal mind is not sin. Nevertheless, is it not in accordance with the teachings of Scripture that there is a state of grace attainable in this life in which the carnal mind is gotten rid of? If such a state of grace is attainable, it will be obtained whenever the conditions are met. The condition is entire consecration of all we have and are to God—dying to the world, the flesh and the devil. This condition may be complied with in a moment as well as after years of effort. Whenever it is complied with, sanctification takes place. Men may call it what they please—a second, a third, or a fourth blessing. Let a man try it, and God will pour into his soul an overwhelming flood of peace and joy.

Bread Cast upon the Waters.

Two gentlemen met on a steamer during a Scotch excursion, and talked with interest of many things; among others, of the Sunday-schools.

"To tell the truth," said one, "I am not very enthusiastic about that kind of work. I was a teacher for many years, and after all, I seemed to have done no good."

"Well, I do believe in Sunday-school work," said the other. "As a lad I received lifelong influences for good in my old class at school;" and he named the school with which he had once been connected.

"Were you taught there?" cried the other; "that was where I taught. Were you there in my time? My name is ——."

"And I was your scholar. I remember you now."

The younger man gave his name, and memories succeeded each other concerning that old school, unforgotten by both. There, side by side, stood the teacher, who believed he had done nothing, and the man he had influenced for life.—Christian Globe.

The older I grow, and now I stand on the brink of eternity, the more comes back to me the sentence in the catechism which I learned when a child, and the fuller and deeper its meaning becomes: "What is the chief end of man?" "To glorify God and enjoy him forever." And surely this is the beginning and end, the Alpha and Omega, of that strange indefinable thing which we call life.—Carlyle.

The more people do, the more they can do. He that does nothing renders himself incapable of doing anything. Whilst we are executing one work, we are preparing ourselves to undertake another.—Hazlitt.

Let us seek so to live that our bygone years may, to use Cowper's beautiful expression, leave "no stain upon the wing of time."

Inventiveness.

Paul bids Timothy, and through him all Christian workers, to "be instant out of season" as well as "in season." We take it the meaning is much the same as where we are told to "sow beside all waters." Some seeds which are chance-sown spring up and bear the strongest plants. They were not put in the regular places at the usual times. It was out of season, uncommonly late or early, when they were let fall, but God prospered them as it pleased him. So, too, he often prospers the words we drop in ways and times that seem to the ordinary observer inopportune. If we insist on doing nothing except when there is an ideal opportunity, we shall miss many golden sheaves that might have blessed both us and the world. "Nothing venture, nothing have." He who is determined to make no mistakes will probably make the one greatest mistake of fruitlessness. Better fail in half the efforts made than to fail to do anything.—Z on's Herald.

Keeping at It.

Persistent training tends to efficiency. The one who would possess real strength of character must remember to act at all times and in all matters as he would were he already in possession of his longed-for perfection. A struggle toward the goal for a day, followed by a day of deliberate relaxation and freedom from alert watchfulness, will never result in perfected spiritual strength. There is no item of duty, however small, the doing or neglect of which "will make no difference." And every moment has its own duty. Be sure what that duty is, then do it, and you will make constant progress in the line of strengthened character. Anything less than this, is, at the best, neglected opportunity.—Sunday-School Times.

Test of Character.

The test of character and destiny is in the affections. What men love they will seek. The man who loves money will be ardent in seeking to obtain wealth. He who loves knowledge will be a devotee of books. He who loves any form of sin will seek to gratify his passion. So we find in our Bible much said as to the heart. There is the precept, "Set your heart on things above, not on things on the earth." A man whose heart is on heavenly things will have the evidence that he is born from above, will be emancipated from the bondage of sin, and will walk as becomes children of the light.—Christian Inquirer.

Do you know the Scriptures better than you did a year ago? You ought to. Have you more places in the Bible to which you go as the bird goes to her retreat? You ought to. Are there more precious spots in the Bible than there were once? There ought to be. Suppose some one had intrusted me with a great matter, and had given me written instructions as to how to conduct it; and suppose that when I felt like it I went and read a sentence, and then after a week half a dozen sentences. I should have only the most fragmentary knowledge of the instructions. But how many Christians treat the Bible thus!—Hoyt.

The Christian above all others should be cheerful and happy. He has an abiding hope. The sweetest joys are still before him. All life's shadows will pass like meteors away. The world gives the best first, but at last it stingeth like an adder and biteth like a serpent. Its joys are transitory and fleeting. Jesus always gives the best last. The further we travel with him the greater our joys and the richer our hopes.

"The best is yet to be,
The last of life, for which the first is planned."

Any man can see faults and flaws in another, but it takes ability and worth to recognize worth or ability in others. A man gives the measure of himself when he has only harsh or contemptuous words in comment on his fellowman. If he can not see anything worth commending, the trouble is with his mental eyesight.—Sunday-School Times.

How can a man learn to know himself? By reflection never; only by action. In the measure in which thou seekest to do thy duty shalt thou know what is in thee. But what is thy duty? The demand of the present hour.—Goethe.

If the fault-finder should spend the time he usually takes in criticising others in faithful study of himself, he would doubtless find himself too busy to resume his old occupation.

No heavenward progress can be made by those who are not in downright earnest. "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."

Religion pure and undefiled never sells muslin with a short yardstick.

FROM THE WORK.

PEARL RIVER, LA.

Our little town was much edified last week by the visit of Rev. Dr. Sawyer with our pastor, Bro. Clarke. Dr. Sawyer gave the young folks a short and interesting talk on the great Epworth movement, and succeeded in impressing upon their minds the uplifting tendency of the work. He helped them organize an Epworth League, to be known as "The Pearl Epworth League," of Pearl River, La. The writer was elected president; Miss Lizzie Willis, first vice-president; Miss Della Crawford, second vice-president; Miss Ida Sadler, third vice-president; Miss Alice Porter, secretary, and Miss Jennie Crawford, treasurer.

The League held its first business meeting Friday evening. We received three new members (which makes 16 in all).

Dr. Sawyer preached for us at night, and captured all hearts by his genial ways and persuasive, earnest words that he spoke in Jesus' name. We hope he will come again. He seemed almost as well pleased with the town as the town was with him.

L. CRARY SADLER.

VAIDEN, MISS.

Sunday night, June 9, our "Children's Day" exercises were celebrated in an interesting and attractive manner. The church was beautifully decorated with ivy and fragrant flowers, and a large audience assembled to listen to the sweet songs of Zion and hear about the "Methodist Army Corps." Indeed, the school presented the appearance of an enthusiastic army as the children marched in with their banners, while their young voices rang out in joyous song. As the different divisions told what they were doing in this great army, we realized in some degree what a grand church ours is, and felt proud that we were Methodists. In addition to the regular program, there were songs and speeches by the infant class and a piece by twelve little girls, each of whom brought some offering in her hand about which she recited a verse. One brought the white ribbon, emblem of peace; another, the Word of God, better than all gifts; while the others had floral offerings, and recited appropriate verses of Scripture. These were all interspersed with songs. A nice collection was the last, but by no means least, feature of the evening.

WHY THEY JOINED THE BAPTISTS.

There recently appeared, in the Baptist Chronicle, a note from Rev. B. H. Mitchell, of Ville Platte, La., who has charge of the Baptist Churches in the same communities in which lies the Bayou Chicot circuit, of which I am the preacher in charge. In his note Bro. Mitchell stated that he had baptized a local Methodist preacher, and also boastingly proclaims that this is the third Methodist preacher the Baptists have captured in these parts in the last five years.

Here are the facts concerning this local preacher: Last Fall charges were brought against him, and his Quarterly Conference summoned him to trial (as he was absent), instead of renewing his license. He never came to trial. He fled to the outstretched arms of pleasing Baptists. The same thing is true of another one of the fortunate three who made their escape from the church of stern presiding elders and frowning Bishops—the church of a man-made Discipline—that requires men to walk upright before God and keep themselves unspotted from the world.

This is the material they have been gathering in from the Methodists, and over which they are boasting. Our cause is stronger without them than it was with them.

We are holding our own. Shall hold some protracted meetings soon, and are expecting some good times in the name of him who is able to save.

JNO. B. KENT.

Bayou Chicot, La.

Rev. Ben P. Jaco, P. C., Abbeville circuit: "Our second Quarterly Conference has just passed, and, although the rain both sprinkled and poured upon the earnest presiding elder, he was also immersed with interest in the work and made the occasion profitable, doing some of his best preaching. We had a fine attendance, unusually large. Reports indicate advancement. We held a missionary meeting at Abbeville a few Sabbaths past, one result of which was the organization of a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society with a charter membership of twenty. Miss Sallie Hinton was present, giving weight to the occasion and contributing largely to the interest and success. She is doing a good work well, and may the Lord bless every effort."

Rev. J. H. Foreman, Coffadeliah, Miss.: "This is our third year on this work, and the time has been very pleasant with us. We have many good and kind people here. Our prayer meetings are very well attended, and much interest manifested along the line of spiritual growth. We have observed Children's Day at four appointments, and they have been a success in many respects. Our collections on these days are far ahead of last year. We are praying for and expecting a glorious revival all over Neshoba charge this Summer. Our second Quarterly Conference was held last Saturday and Sunday, June 8 and 9, with Hester's Chapel Church. Our much-beloved presiding elder, R. J. Jones, was with us in the Spirit of Christ, looking after the interest of the church, and preached us a most delightful sermon on Sunday at 11 A. M., which was very much appreciated by all that heard him. Rev. F. B. Ormond, of the Linwood circuit, was with us Saturday, and preached us a gospel sermon at 11 A. M. We think our circuit is in a better condition, spiritually, than it has been for several years. We are somewhat behind financially; but we think by Conference we will be able to make a good report. Pray for us. Success to the ADVOCATE."

Rev. W. T. Currie, Covington, La.: "We have just closed a meeting at this place. Rev. J. J. Jones was with us. He preached with power; the people heard him gladly. When he left everyone wanted him to come back again and help in the next meeting we have. Bro. Jones knows how to draw men to church. The evening he preached to men only, 130 men said they were going to live better lives. There has been great improvement on this work, especially towards the presiding elder. Last year this work only paid the presiding elder nine per cent.; this year we have to pay twenty. Next year we are expecting to pay thirty. So you see we are moving up on that line. We have received 15 into the church, baptized 20 infants, had 26 conversions, 21 sanctifications. We have built one church; have 4,000 feet of lumber promised on another. For all this we are accused of creating strife on this work. We will have the other church finished by Conference. We are preparing to repair the church at Covington. By Conference our collections will all be in full—that is, Conference collections. Up to date the preacher has received $70; presiding elder, $17.50, making in all $87.50. God is with us. We are always happy—never get blue. We sorrow for those about us that are unsaved. We ask the prayers of all, that we may have a great number converted and sanctified yet this year."

Rev. W. J. Burt, Pastor, Kossuth circuit, Miss.: "Will you allow me room in the ADVOCATE to correct a false report which has been made in some parts of our Conference. In the Spring of 1883 Bro. J. H. Taylor, of the Baptist Church, challenged Bro. M. H. Honnoll, of the North Mississippi Conference, to discuss the subject of baptism. Bro. Honnoll accepted the challenge and met him at the appointed time. The debate was held at Wesley Chapel, of which I am pastor. Three or four propositions were discussed. It was generally admitted by friends and foes that Bro. Honnoll had a picnic. All agreed that Bro. Honnoll sustained himself well and come out of the debate victoriously. I was present at the debate. Bro. Taylor squirmed and wriggled, and complained of the rules of the debate which he had signed. He had agreed to confine himself to the King James' translation. His friends attributed his defeat to this agreement. At the close of the debate Bro. Honnoll baptized seven children. Now, the report which I wish to correct is this: Far away from the place of debate it is reported that the Methodist Church lost seven members as a result of the debate. I deny it. I am pastor of the church where the debate was held. I know that it and no other church within our Conference lost a single member as a result of that debate. With love for the church, in justice to Bro. Honnoll and the cause of truth, I feel bound to inform those brethren, who claim that my church lost members, and that the 'cause of truth did not suffer' at the hands of Rev. J. H. Taylor, that the report is false."

Rev. J. E. Buck: "On May 14 we began a meeting at Amory, which continued till the twenty-second, with three services a day. The preaching at 11 A. M. and 8 o'clock P. M. was done by Rev. T. W. Lewis, of Grenada, and that at 3 o'clock P. M. was done by Rev. Thos. H. Dorsey, of Fulton. These brethren captivated our people as well as edified and strengthened them spiritually. The meeting was a blessing to the town, and a means of strengthening to our Methodism here. Since Conference we have received by letter twenty valuable members. We have baptized five infants. Children's Day was observed the third Sunday in May. The occasion was one of delight and profit. The collection was five dollars. We have organized a Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, with twenty members, which promises to do good service for the Master. Epworth League work has been resumed with new zeal and earnestness. Our Sunday-school at this place, as well as at the three other appointments on the work, is alive, and growing in numbers and interest constantly. Our Parsonage Aid Society is doing a very fair work, and has made some valuable acquisitions to the parsonage this year. We have paid about a hundred dollars' indebtedness on the parsonage since Conference. Preacher's salary well up to date. Conference collections kept constantly before the people, and fair progress made in the work of raising them. Three prayer meetings on the work fully alive and accomplishing inestimable good. We enter soon upon the work of protracted meetings. The outlook for a great revival over the charge is good. May God help us to win many souls for him during the conflict!"

Wise commendation is better than severe criticism. He who gets the reputation for a scold wanes in power. Reproof is often necessary, but praise ought to dominate the pulpit. A pastor should give prominence, if possible, to the encouraging aspects of church life, and keep back the discouraging if avoidable. Human nature takes to criticising rather than to commending. Things may not be all that one desires or seeks to reach, but he will find that he will accomplish more by "talking up" what is really done, than by "running down" what is attempted, because not done in his way, or as satisfactorily as he would like. It is a grand thing to keep up the courage of the workers; to inspire them to greater efforts; to urge them onward. Under a cheerful and hopeful leader they strive to do better, and will have more heart to sacrifice and toil in the Master's service. It is inspiring, discreet and tactful ministers who get the most out of their congregations.—Presbyterian.

The International Epworth League Conference.

The ADVOCATE correspondent left the Crescent City for Chattanooga, Wednesday afternoon, by the beautiful Queen and Crescent route, the one so eminently popular with travelers going north and east. A smooth roadbed, quick schedules, scenic charms, and polite officials all contribute to make travel over this road a constant delight. On boarding the train we found a Pullman sleeper filled with Texas leaguers, brimming over with fun and enthusiasm. On reaching Meridian our party received large reinforcements, and from there on our train continued to pick up delegates at almost every station. When several miles out from Chattanooga a member of the local Reception Committee passed through the train, badged the League delegates, and arranged for homes for those not provided for. At the depot other members of the committee welcomed us, and showed us the way to headquarters.

As we passed through the streets of the "Mountain City," we found the stores, shops, residences and public buildings all festooned with the Epworth League colors—red, white, and gold. The whole city had decorated herself in honor of the coming of the leaguers. A remarkable fact in connection with the decorations, however, is that the saloons are conspicuous in having no part whatever in this welcoming display, for well do the liquor men know that a Methodist gathering like this bodes no success to their infamous business. Had it been a political convention that was to assemble here, how gladly would they have hailed its coming!

The tent used by the Conference is the one used last year by the Christian Endeavor Convention at Cleveland, Ohio. Its seating capacity is about 13,000.

THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

The exercises of the Conference were formally opened at 2:30 o'clock on Thursday afternoon, June 27, the hymn, "Blest be the tie that binds," being sung with hearty vigor, after which the congregation was led in prayer by Rev. K. C. Atkins. Hon. Geo. W. Ochs, mayor of Chattanooga, was then introduced, and in behalf of 40,000 citizens delivered an address of welcome characterized by warmth, elegance, and appropriateness.

Referring to Chattanooga as a battle-ground of the late Civil War, the mayor said: "A new army now meets in this self-same spot, but an army of peace, an army of love, an army of pious, righteous men and women whose bugle notes sound sweet pæans of fraternity."

Rev. J. P. McFerrin, D. D., next came forward and welcomed the leaguers in behalf of Chattanooga Methodism, which, he said, has nearly a score of church-buildings and a great university. In every one of these charges there is a flourishing League. He extended to the delegates an old-fashioned Southern welcome, which he interpreted thus: "Walk in, hang up your hats, lay aside your bonnets (or whatever passes for them), and make yourselves at home." "You will find," he remarked, "that we do not dwell in Sleepy Hollow." The Doctor's speech was humorous and eloquent, and elicited frequent applause.

The first response was made by Bishop E. R. Hendrix, representing Southern Methodism. Reverence for the past and comradeship for the future were the two points emphasized in his speech, which made a fine impression. Referring to the recent dedication of a monument to Mary, the mother of Washington, he affirmed that this American hero could never have been the savior of his country without such a mother to inspire him, and yet the memory of the mother is remembered less for what she was than for what he was. In like manner, it is what we are, it is what we do, that will make our fathers more worthy of being remembered. It is in society, the Bishop said, that man reaches his perfection. Comradeship means fuller knowledge, increase of power and usefulness, which the Epworth League secures for its members.

It had been arranged for Sir McKenzie Bowell, Premier of Canada, to deliver the response for Canadian Methodism. Greatly to his regret, and also to the regret of the Conference, Sir McKenzie found it impossible at the last moment to come, and so Dr. John Potts, of Toronto, was sent in his place. The Doctor proved to be an able representative, and completely captured the Conference, so charming was his wit and eloquence. He is a man of commanding presence, portly bearing and scholarly attainments. Roars of laughter greeted the remark: "We Canadian Methodists can stand a great deal of good treatment." In speaking of the two sister Methodisms of the United States, he said: "If you were not so near of kin, I would like to publish the bans of matrimony, and perform the ceremony, and I would do it without a fee." One of the most striking sentences the Doctor uttered was this: "Let this Chattanooga Convention be a transfiguration scene, which by reason of the contemplation of Christ and communion with him shall prepare us for the valley work to be done."

Bishop S. M. Merrill, LL.D., who made the response for the Northern Methodist Church, got in late, and so did not get to hear the speeches of the other representatives, which fact, as he said, placed him in the difficult position of having to respond to speeches he never heard. He arose to the dignity and importance of the occasion, however, and made a capital address. In the beginning of his remarks he read a letter of greeting from Bishop James N. Fitzgerald, who at present is in Berne, Switzerland. The Bishop sent fraternal greetings from the Leagues of Peru, Chili, Argentina, Paraguay, Uraguay, and Brazil, in South America, and from those of Germany, Switzerland, Italy, Bulgaria, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, and Finland, in Europe.

One of the most delightful features of the afternoon exercises was the singing of two songs by the famous North Ohio Conference quartette, all of them being preachers. They were enthusiastically applauded.

Just before the formal opening of the Conference delegates here and there through the tent started up songs which were caught up by the crowd and sung heartily.

A part of the tent has been reserved for the use of the colored people. The announcement of this fact evoked ringing applause.

Fully 8,000 people were present at the opening exercises.

THURSDAY NIGHT'S EXERCISES.

Commencing at 7 P. M., an old-fashioned Methodist love-feast was held, conducted by Bishop O. P. Fitzgerald. Volunteer songs, soul-stirring testimonies, and hearty "amens" followed each other in quick succession. A lady from Florida testified to saving grace, and when she sat down a brother from far-off Canada rose to speak. During the meeting Miss Laura Haygood, of the China mission, thus testified: "I thank God that the blood of Jesus Christ saves in China as well as in America." The profound impression this produced is indescribable. The most touching incident of the meeting occurred when little Joe Ramsey, a blind boy, rose and said: "Bishop, I want to say that I am a little blind boy, but this is to me like the New Jerusalem, and when I get there I shall see it."

Next on the programme was a sermon by Bishop Galloway, who is always equal to the occasion. His text was I. Cor. i, 9: "God is faithful, by whom ye were called unto the fellowship of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord." Fellowship with Christ, with all that that means of power, friendship, grace, knowledge, and peace, was the line of thought followed. It was a characteristic sermon, impressively delivered, and we may truthfully say one that thrilled the vast audience present.

At the conclusion of the sermon, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by the Bishops present to, perhaps, as many as 3,000 persons.

Thus closed the first day of the Conference.

FRIDAY MORNING'S PROCEEDINGS.

This morning the exercises at the big tent were presided over by Judge Estes, of Memphis, whose earnestness and happy wit have an electric effect upon an audience.

The topic of the day was: "Methodism: Its Life and Mode of Expression." As there were sixteen speakers on the programme, a mere synopsis of all the addresses would take up too much of the ADVOCATE'S space, and would also be very unsatisfactory to the public. We shall content ourselves, therefore, with a brief mention of the different speakers, giving, however, more extended notice of those who produced the most favorable impression. As all the speeches were first-class, our task is, therefore, the more difficult.

Rev. J. E. Wray, a talented young minister from Macon, Ga., discussed the subject, "What to Read." He emphasized the fact that culture is next in importance to character, and concluded with the words: "Blessed—forever blessed—the man who makes his mind the treasury of golden language and of glorious thought."

Next followed an address on the same subject by Rev. W. E. McLennan, A. M., of Berwyn, Ill., secretary of the Northern Epworth Extension Bureau, who gave us a speech crammed full of beautiful and helpful thoughts. Perhaps the most striking thing he said was: "Better I should say, not to read at all than to read books that do not make for character." At this point loud "amens" came from all parts of the tent.

"Educational Opportunities" was forcefully discussed by Rev. S. O. Royal, of Cincinnati, Ohio, who brought out the fact that 94 out of every 100 of the 15,000,000 young people of our country are in purely elementary schools; five per cent. are in high and preparatory schools; only one per cent. in the colleges and universities, and, sad to tell, only one-fifth of this one per cent. is a young woman. He showed that we must not look to the newspaper, nor to the novel, nor to the politician for safe guidance and instruction. "Our masses," he said, "must not be left to such false, one-idead, Philistine leadership. A headlight which shows only one spot in the darkness is good enough where the road-bed is plain and the track straight and solid steel. But in the wilderness which we can tread only once, we must have headlights, hindlights, sidelights and skylights."

A storm of applause greeted the appearance of Rev. J. W. E. Bowen, D. D., a coal-black negro from Atlanta, Ga., a professor in Gammon Theological Seminary. His address on the same subject as Mr. Royal's was witty, oratorical, and scholarly.

Next came an able address by Rev. R. J. Cooke, D. D., vice-chancellor of Grant University, whose theme also was "Educational Opportunities."

The first woman speaker on the programme, Miss Clara Grant, of Winona, Minn., now came forward and made such a capital talk on "Social Duties" that the entire audience as soon as she had concluded voted to have it published. "What to Have" and "What Not to Have" in church entertainments were the two heads of her discourse. Among the many good things she said were these: "Let us raise our standard above all that is even questionable. If we are really to lift up, we must first be on high ground." "Let the spirit of prayer and the desire to make others happy be back of all your work." "We need not always be serious in order to provide what is pure and lovely, just and true."

Mr. H. V. Hott, a young leaguer of Evanston, Ill., who followed Miss Grant with a splendid discourse on the same subject, said in substance that the church should not go into the entertainment business as a business, but still young people desire and need entertainment. The devil and the world are not entitled to the best in music, literature and art. The best things are for the Christian.

When the announcement was made that Rev. John R. Nelson, of Georgetown, Texas, who was to have been one of the speakers this morning, had remained at home in order to fight the saloon, there was loud and prolonged applause, which was the more so because of a telegram to the effect that prohibition had won.

Other speakers of the morning session were J. R. Pepper, of Memphis, Tenn., perhaps the best-known Sunday-school superintendent in the South; Rev. W. L. Nelms, of Georgetown, Texas; Rev. E. M. Taylor, Boston; J. K. Elwell, Boone, Iowa; H. E Jackson, of Mexia, Texas, the brilliant, wide-awake president of the Texas State League; Rev. Frank Siler, of St. Joseph, Mo.; and W. H. W. Rees, D. D., of Cincinnati. After listening for several hours to speeches by the best talent in our land, we feel more than ever the truth of the old saying: "So many things are made striking that nothing strikes."

On Friday afternoon the general topic of discussion was Philanthropies, the special subjects discussed under this head being: Secular Help; Brotherhood; Spiritual Ministry; Municipal Government—all with reference to the lost in our cities. The most striking speech of the evening was made by Dr. Carlos Martyn, editor of The Christian Citizen, and leader of the great reform movement of Chicago. His subject was Christian Citizenship. The speaker paid a deserved compliment to the mayor of Chattanooga, whom he characterized as "clean, honest and progressive."

THE MEETING FRIDAY NIGHT.

At every meeting the interest seems to be greater than at the preceding one. This (Friday night's) meeting was the grandest, most inspiring religious gathering it has ever been our privilege to attend. Think of 12,000 people blending their voices together in song. It was pre-eminently a missionary meeting—the largest, as Dr. Steele remarked, that many of us would ever attend; yea, the largest, as Chaplain McCabe said, ever held on this earth.

Miss Stella Rule, the well-known church worker from Knoxville, Tenn., made the first speech of the evening. "The Gospel in Rural Neighborhoods," was her subject, which she handled in such an earnest, practical, masterly way as to completely captivate her audience. The lady speakers have shown themselves to be not a whit behind their brothers upon the platform. The same subject was discussed also by Revs. W. P. Lovejoy and F. I. Loveland.

"Discipling the Nations" was the next subject on the programme, addresses upon it being delivered in turn by Rev. Edmund M. Mills, D. D., of Elmira, N. Y.; Rev. D. C. Kelley; Rev. Geo. Bond, of Halifax, N. S.; Rev. H. C. Stuntz, of India; Dr. W. R. Lambuth, and last, but not least, Chaplain McCabe, who was introduced as "the best-loved man in Methodism."

The speaker from Halifax made quite a favorable impression. He began his discourse by saying: "I come from the East. That is where the wise men in ancient times came from; I was wise to come here, and I expect to go back the wiser."

Rev. Mr. Stuntz spoke in place of Bishop Thoburn, who was kept from coming to the Conference by pressing missionary business elsewhere. He said that he had come 11,000 miles to attend this Conference, and to represent the 20,000 Leaguers of India and Burmah.

Chaplain McCabe carried things by storm. Bright witticisms, striking illustrations, burning enthusiasm — all these and more characterized his address. Great laughter greeted the Chaplain's opening remark, which was: "I am used to large audiences, but I am not used to talking to people by the acre." This gathering, he said, means that the young people are going to reconstruct the world. He gave the leaguers two mottoes: (1) Win souls. A million members should save at least a million souls every year. (2) Get money, and put it into the Lord's treasury.

The service was concluded by singing the hymn, "I'll Be There." Just before it was sung a proposition was made that all who were determined by God's grace to reach the heavenly land, should hold up their right hands during the singing of the first verse of the hymn. Every hand in that vast throng, so far as we could see, was held up. Then it was proposed that all who would pledge themselves to try to win at least one soul to Christ this year should raise their hands, and thousands responded. The meeting now became almost a pentecostal scene. Shouts and glad hallelujahs were heard here and there over the tent, and while other hymns were being enthusiastically sung a general hand-shaking took place. Never before have we witnessed such a scene of joy.

SATURDAY'S EXERCISES.

The exercises, Saturday morning, were presided over by Dr. Wm. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College. The topic of the day was "The Doctrine and Spirit of Methodism." The most striking addresses of the morning were those delivered by Rev. A. C. Crews on "Catholicity;" by Dr. James C. Morris, of Birmingham, on the "Membership of Children in the Church," and by Mrs. J. R. Woodcock, of Weeping Water, Neb., on "The Junior Epworth League." Mrs. Woodcock's address was frequently applauded. A storm of applause burst forth when Secretary Crews, of Canada, quoted as expressing his own feelings with regard to fraternity those words of John Wesley: "If thy heart is right, give me thine hand."

The other speakers of the day were Rev. Chas. M. Stuart, of Chicago; Rev. S. B. Turrentine, of Winston, N. C., who both discussed Methodist Hymnology; Rev. Chas. A. Littlefield, of Watertown, Mass., subject: "Methodist Fervor;" Dr. Jesse Bowman Young, subject: "Biographical Embodiment;" Rev. Paul C. Curnick, of Springfield, Ohio, subject: "The Epworth Guards," and F. M. Barbour, of Evansville, Ind., subject: "Bible Study for Children."

It was a most interesting programme, in no respect inferior to the one of the day before. In spite of the heat the vast tent was filled to overflowing. Neither hot weather nor rain nor long sessions lessened the ardor of the leaguers.

On Saturday afternoon two very practical topics were discussed, viz.: "The Life of God in the Soul," and "How to Win Men." Dr. W. W. Pinson's address on the "Witness of the Spirit" received high praise, as did also the addresses of Rev. J. Marion Carnish, of Matteawan, N. Y., on Self-Surrender to Christ, and Rev. R. N. Burns, of Toronto, on The Fruits of Godliness.

4:30 to 5:30 P. M. was the "Children's Hour," the work of the Junior League being at this time considered. A thousand children now took their places upon the platform, and some interesting drills were gone through. The ladies had full charge of this meeting, and capital were the speeches they made. "Christians and Scissors" was the uniquo subject which Miss Daisy Olds, of Denver, Col., enlarged upon. A more meritorious address was not heard from the Conference platform.

CLOSING SERVICE.

On Sunday the Protestant Churches of the city, with a few exceptions, were occupied by leaguers. The preachers who drew the largest audiences were Bishop Galloway; Chaplain McCabe, of the M. E. Church, and Rev. Dr. Potts, of Canada. Dr. Murrah, of Millsaps College, was on the programme at eleven o'clock. Afternoon services were held at most of the churches. The closing service was held at the tabernacle at night. Excellent addresses were delivered by Dr. Courtice, of Canada, and Dr. E. E. Hoss. The closing sermon was preached by Bishop I. W. Joyce, of the M. E. Church. It was a deeply spiritual discourse and produced a profound impression. It was followed by a testimony meeting which was a season of refreshing. No words at our command will suffice to describe this marvelous manifestation of spiritual power. It was a veritable Pentecost.

This was followed by speeches from the three League Secretaries present, each of whom gave his impressions of the Conference. Dr. Steele, the last to speak, took occasion to thank all who contributed in any way to the success of the Conference. The hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," was then feelingly sung, after which the benediction was pronounced by Bishop Joyce. Thus closed the most wonderful religious gathering over held on Southern soil.

League Conference Dots.

The Conference passed ringing resolutions in favor of prohibition.

Abont 100 press representatives were on hand to report the proceedings.

Toronto, Canada, has been selected as the place for holding the next Conference.

The speakers from Canada undoubtedly carried off the palm. They were universal favorites.

To hear 12,000 voices uniting in songs of praise to God is an experience never to be forgotten.

A better-tempered, better-behaved crowd was never seen anywhere. The attendance reached the 10,000 mark.

The street cars of Chattanooga were poorly patronized on Sunday, which fact speaks volumes for the Leaguers.

State Secretary Clifford, of Mississippi, is our authority for saying that the States having the largest delegations are: first, Illinois, more than 1000 strong; next, Ohio, and third, Mississippi, with over 200.

It was amusing to watch the startled look upon the faces of the speakers who were called down by the electric bell when their allotted time was up. Ten and fifteen-minute speeches was the order of the day.

One glorious result of the Conference will be the bringing of the Northern and Southern churches closer together. Every mention of the snbject of nnion and federation elicited hearty responses and loud amens.

It was worth going hundreds of miles to hear the sacred concert given on Saturday night, in which the best musical talent of the country participated. In the grand chornses over 800 voices joined. It was an occasion long to be remembered.

During the session, Saturday morning, the following resolution was unanimously passed and telegraphed to Bishop James N. Fitzgerald, Berne, Switzerland: "Love and greeting from the Epworth League Convention assembled at Chattanooga."

Be it said to the credit of those who planned and conducted the Conference that during its entire session no collection was taken. The total expenses connected therewith, which amounted to $7,500, was covered by the proceeds of the sale of the souvenir programmes and the receipts from the concert, Saturday night.

One of the most interesting features of the Conference was the sunrise prayer meetings on Lookout Mountain. A goodly number of delegates were domiciled on the mountain. These could attend without performing any extraordinary feat in the way of early rising. With those who were quartered in the city it was quite different. In order to be on hand in good time many of these found it necessary to rise at two o'clock. On both trips the cars were crowded from two to five. The attendance is estimated at about two thousand. The exercises were varied and exceedingly interesting. The prayers were brief, and unctnons. Many short talks were made by delegates from all points of the compass. The singing was delightful.

Rev. L. E. Wiehl.

If the above-named brother, who was a student last year at Centenary, will communicate with me, I have something of interest for him. I have not his address.

We regret that want of space requires us to abridge some parts of our correspondent's report of the League Conference, deep interest in which is felt among our people everywhere. We are sure that this great Conference will stimulate League work throughout Southern Methodism.

"Wesley Hall" is the official name of the new "prophets' chamber" which has been erected at the Seashore Camp Ground. It is a neat, substantial two-story structure, having broad galleries facing the beach, upstairs and down. It has fifteen bed-rooms and a cosy reception-room, all comfortably furnished. The Woman's Aid Association footed the bills for furnishing. The attendance this year promises to be in excess of any year for several years past.

***

We informed our readers some time since of the appointment of a diphtheria anti-toxine commission by the physicians of this city. The said commission has published its first report, covering the period from November, '94, to March, '95. The report makes a pamphlet of seven-two pages. Owing to causes which need not here be specified, the conditions were not as favorable to the new remedy as they will doubtless be hereafter. Nevertheless, the death rate has been reduced nearly two-thirds. This is certainly glad tidings.

***

A few weeks since several New England manufacturing establishments voluntarily increased the wages of their operatives. This example was speedily followed by other manufacturers in different sections and in various lines of business. This movement has reached the South. Within the last week the wages of iron workers in the South were increased more than ten per cent. The aggregate increase in the whole country foots up an immense sum. The calamity howler must get in his work rapidly, as the day is near at hand when his occupation will be gone.

The State of Mississippi set a new fashion for the world a few years since in the establishment of an industrial college for girls. Her example has been followed by a number of States, including Louisiana, Georgia and Alabama. This step was taken by the Alabama Legislature at its last session. The committee charged with the duty of locating the school has selected Montevallo as the site. Miss Julia Tutwiler has been elected president. Having a personal acquaintance with Miss Tutwiler, and knowing something of the estimation in which she is held in the State, we are of the opinion that a better selection could not have been made.

The electric car has taken the place of the horse car, and has reduced the price of horse flesh below the cost of production, thereby forcing many stockmen out of the business. Now it seems that the electric car is about to be superseded by the bicycle. In a recent issue of the Electrical Engineer it is stated that ten thousand bicycles are now in use in the city of Denver, four thousand of them having been bought within the last twelve months. The extent of the damage to the electric cars is shown by comparing their receipts in good and bad weather. When the weather is too rainy for the bicycle to be out, the daily receipts of the electric cars are almost doubled. Each bicycle reduces the receipts of the electric car companies to the amount of at least ten cents. This means a loss of one thousand dollars a day — three hundred and sixty-five thousand dollars a year. Who would have thought that the innocent looking "bike" was possessed of such marvelous significance within the realm of finance.

We give notice recently of an injunction granted by one of the courts of this city restraining the police from interfering with the sale of liquor at a festival given by one of the so-called benevolent associations of the city. Last week the city attorney promulgated a decision that the Sunday law does not apply to West End and similar resorts. Now, if each of the hundreds of benevolent organizations domiciled here can sell intoxicants ad libitum on Sunday, and if every suburb that chooses to call itself a "health resort," or "pleasure resort," can do likewise, what progress has been made towards suppressing the traffic on Sunday? Of what avail is it to close Paul's shop if Peter's is to be left open? The courts and the city attorney may have given a proper interpretation of the law; but if so, the law is sadly in need of emendation.

Commencement Edward McGehee College for Girls.

WOODVILLE, MISS.,

Opened Sunday, June 9, the baccalaureate sermon being preached by Rev. B. F. Lewis, of the M. E. Church here, as Dr. Carter, of Louisiana, who was to have preached it, was unable to be present. Mr. Lewis arose from his bed to officiate and, though barely able to stand, preached a brief, but most excellent sermon.

Monday morning exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Bishop, and consisted of essays from the class representatives, interspersed by charming music. These essays was well written, well read, and well received.

Monday night the children's concert went off in a most charming manner, pleasing and delighting all.

Tuesday's program opened with prayer by Rev. T. W. Brown in a fervent, eloquent manner. Then, after music of highest order, essays by the graduating class were read. "Faces and Fancies of Life," by Miss Ethel Lewis, of Woodville, was admirably read and warmly received. "Beyond the Alps Lies Italy," by Miss Ruth Featherstun, of Yazoo City, was nicely read and delightfully received. "Even the Darkest Night Has Its Star," by Miss Julia Roldan, of City of Mexico, was sweetly read and well received. "Forensic Effort," by Miss Carolean Collens, of Mississippi, was eloquently read and finely received. Hon. L. W. Magruder, of Vicksburg, failing to appear on account of illness in his family, Col. J. H. Jones, our worthy candidate for lieut.-governor, responded in a brief, but most excellent address that charmed, fascinated and captivated the large audience. He had but two or three days' time to prepare, and yet his address was superb.

The diplomas were delivered by Hon. W. P. S. Ventress in a most forceful and graphic style. Misses Featherstun and Lewis received the degree of B. S., and Misses Collens and Roldan that of A. B. Capt. G. T. McGehee, in a very appropriate manner, delivered the medals for greatest proficiency in music to Misses Ruth Lewis and Mamie Semple. The valedictory was then read by Miss Carolean Collens. Much beautiful music was rendered during this morning.

At night came off the grand concert. Marches, fan-drills and forensic efforts, etc., by the elocution class added to the grand music, and all went merry as a marriage bell. The elegant Weber and Emerson pianos, so kindly furnished by Junius Hart, of New Orleans, added greatly to the entertainment.

Thus closed a most successful commencement. The prospects for the future of this college are very flattering. The president is enrolling many new local pupils, and he will make a vigorous canvass in the interest of his college.

Notice.

The Alexandria District Conference meets at Melville, La., July 24-28. Local preachers who expect to continue in the work will consult ¶ 75, new Discipline. Let them appear in person, if possible; otherwise be sure to forward their license to secretary District Conference, with name of charge to which they now belong. The Fearn Mission.

I report the following amounts as paid in and forwarded to sustain Rev. J. B. Fearn, M. D., as a medical missionary for one year in China, viz.: $788.25 reported previously; Dr. William W. Smith, $10; Mrs. S. G. Weems, $5; Rev. Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, $5; Dr. T. F. Turner, $10; Mrs. Elvira Robinson, $5; Young People's Missionary Society at Shuhuta, through Rev. D. P. Bradford, $10; Woman's Missionary Society at Meridian (additional) $5; total amount to date, $833.25; still due, $161.75.

Dr. Fearn is at work in the hospital at Suchow, and is writing interesting letters to his friends and to "The World for Christ." He is more in love with his work since he has arrived upon the field, and feels profoundly grateful to the kind people who have contributed the means to enable him to prosecute his loved employ. I hope that the unpaid subscriptions will be sent promptly to me. More money will be needed, even after all the subscriptions are paid. I hereby make an additional appeal to the faithful stewards of the Master. Surely there could scarcely be a better opportunity for honoring the Lord with one's substance and with the first fruits of all his increase.

HOME CIRCLE.

BREAST THE TIDE.

BY W. H. BARBER.

When the storms of life o'ertake you,
Let not courage o'er forsake you;
Yield not to the tempest fame'y,
Battle with it firmly, gamely—
Breast the tide.

What a spectacle ignoble
Is the man who, when in trouble,
Folds his hands with looks despairing,
When he should with high-souled daring
Breast the tide.

Tho' the winds should fierce'y bluster,
Clouds of inky blackness muster;
Winds ere long will be declining,
Clouds display a silv'ry lining.
Breast the tide.

Folly 'tis to let dissolve
Energy and pluck o'ermaster;
Fortune will show less of rigor,
If you ply the oar with vigor.
Breast the tide.

Courage only can avail you
When the winds and waves assail you.
Onward! onward! or be driven
On the rocks, your boat all riven!
Breast the tide.

The Critic in the Home.

There are some people who seem possessed by the idea that it is a mark of superior culture and refinement to regard with captious criticising and deprecating observation the things that surround them in every-day life. Circumstances, people and material surroundings are all the objects of their frequent or habitual animadversion. To hear them speak in praise of anything or anybody is unusual; while to hear them complain and object and denounce is the unfortunate necessity imposed upon their companions and associates. There can scarcely be a more disagreeable, tiresome and devitalizing companion than the person who sees something to object to in everything and everybody; who can pick out flaws and discover defects with an ingenuity and alacrity that grows and becomes skillful by practice. Usually such a disposition is accompanied by the habit of impersonal scolding about circumstances and things in general, which creates a disagreeable personal atmosphere, calculated to make one shun and avoid such people as they would eating green persimmons or staying in a room with a smoky chimney.

On the other hand, it is a real comfort in this work-day world to meet with or to have for a companion one who can see and appreciate whatever is good, especially in common things. The truth is, that the best things of life are the commonthings. In the domain of intellect and morals we know that the great truths of life are simple truths. In the material things of life the common possessions are the best and most beautiful. Water, air, sunlight, the natural, unspoiled appetite, bread, fruit, sleep, health, the universal grass, the ubiquitous birds and the infinite sky—why, the tongue of man can not sufficiently express their riches and beauty! Then the natural relations of human beings—the most precious are the most common. The millionaire going home to his wife and children, if he loves them, is no richer in his affections than the grimy laborer who is also greeted on his return by his good and faithful, though perchance toil-worn and faded wife, and the joyful faces and eager welcomings of his little ones. If he have the discernment to appreciate and prize these at their true value, he stands on the same plane with the richest and noblest of earth; his happiness is of the same fine and precious quality as theirs. Here truly the rich and the poor meet together. Appreciation and recognition of the essential good is the main thing. To depreciate and belittle and complain at trivial and incidental surroundings and circumstances is the mark of inferiority and of a weak and incompetent nature.

It is a truth which should be more frequently presented by teachers and moralists, that a cheerful and appreciative disposition toward life and people and circumstances can be and ought to be cultivated. The fact ought to be brought to the attention, especially of the young, that cheerfulness and kindliness of feeling is helpful, not only to others, but to ourselves. Nothing is more depressing and enfeebling than to cherish a complaining spirit, or to dislike people and things; while to hate anything or anybody is positively exhausting. Love of people, love of life, love of work, love of common things, is the best, the only true inspiration of a happy and satisfying life.—Interior.

Take Time for Preparation.

President Thompson, of the Miami University, Ohio, in a recent address at an alumni dinner said some wise things in regard to the undue haste which many young men evince in their eagerness to enter upon the activities of life, regardless of the value of thorough equipment. He urged, sagaciously and earnestly, the duty of preparing thoroughly and leisurely for the duties of one's vocation or profession, and emphasized the shortsightedness and folly of those who rush from school only meagerly equipped for their life-tasks. Listen to some of his counsels addressed to college students, and other young men:

"It is a mistaken notion that the world won't wait for you. A young man should not be graduated from college before he is twenty. It is better that he spend the five years between twenty and twenty-five in careful preparation for the troubles to come than to plunge forth into the excitement and bustle of the busy world. The world can wait for you better than you think it can. There is no hurry save on your part. The young man who rushes into his life's vocation before he is twenty-five too often becomes worn out and broken down in health before he is forty; while on the other hand the young man who seeks more thorough preparation and enters upon his chosen work between twenty-five and thirty, reaches his prime at an age when the other man has practically run life's course, and becomes a useful citizen and lives to a good old age."

Multitudes of witnesses might be secured to supplement these utterances of an observant and experienced teacher. We heard a minister, now in his fifties, a leader among his brethren, once say:

"I shall never cease to regret that I was crowded by unwise counsels into the ministry when I was twenty-one, and before I had completed my college course. I could have done more work, and of a nobler sort, had I taken five or six years more for a thorough course in college and in a theological seminary. I have always been a diligent student, and have compassed alone many of the studies I would have pursued in school; but my work has been done at a disadvantage, and I can never be what I would have been with a thorough preliminary equipment. I now urge young men everywhere to take plenty of time to prepare for their life work."

This testimony enforces the fact that the margin of competition in all avocations is growing exceedingly narrow, and that the largest success is to be achieved only through the most careful preparation and training. The Apostle Paul was about thirty-five when he began his work; John Wesley was about the same age; the forerunner of our Lord waited till he was thirty before he began to preach; and our Lord himself lived in obscurity and privacy in Nazareth until he was thirty years old. These examples ought at least to be studied, in order that the philosophy which underlies them may be made evident—the philosophy which expects, plans for, and achieves great things only upon the basis of leisurely, thorough, and elaborate preparatory equipment, the philosophy which says, "Take time for preparation!"

The Art of Forgetting.

A lady, whose life in a certain well-known educational institution has not been without its trials and vexations, was talking about her experience to her friends at home.

"Are all the people at the institute so perfectly lovely?" asked a listener.

With a bright smile, she answered, "Somehow I remember the pleasant things, and forget the others."

No doubt this was in part an acquired grace. Is it not one well worth cultivating, if only for our own peace of mind?

"I am afraid," said the mother, "you will dream about lions."

"Oh, no," returned the little one, "I will dream about Daniel and leave out the lions."

How much more cheerful and serene our lives might be if we, too, could leave out the lions. It is true that in much of our life the sweet and the sad are so interwoven we can not separate them without destroying the entire fabric. We would not forget the grief which opened to us the heart of a friend, nor the parting which was not all pain, nor the dying glory which we saw through tears. Over such experiences we pray, "Lord, keep my memory green;" but the cutting remark, the cold neglect, the unkind act, Lord, help us to forget.

It is not worth while to cherish the memory of our mistakes and failures. Let them serve their purpose of prevention for the future, and be forgotten. They should be stepping stones, by means of which we may attain a higher level, and not a wall to impede our progress.

"Oh, Emeline, let us forget the past and begin anew." This exhortation was found on a fragment of a letter written by some unknown person, and was often repeated to me half jocosely by the finder. It might be well for us to take the words as a motto. "Forget the past and begin anew;" not the kindness and friendship and joy of the past, but its bitterness, its vexations, its mistakes.—Emily Tolman.

Good Manners.

Don't forget to say, "Good-morning!" and say it cheerfully, and with a smile; it will do you good, and do your friends good. There's a kind of inspiration in every "Good-morning" heartily spoken that helps to make hope fresher and work lighter. It seems really to make the morning good, and to be a prophecy of a good day to come after it. And if this be true of the "Good-morning," it is so also of kind, heartsome greetings; they cheer the discouraged, rest the tired one, somehow make the wheels of life run more smoothly. Be liberal with them, then, and let no morning pass, however dark and gloomy it may be, that you do not help at least to brighten by your smiles and cheerful words.—Selected.

A Methodist preacher is reported to have called at a house as the shadows of night were falling and asked for lodging. The lady who came to the door said she could not take him in. "Be careful to entertain strangers," said the preacher, "for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." The lady saw that the stranger had a quid in his mouth. "I'll take the risk this time," she said; "angels don't chew tobacco."—Arkansas Methodist.

Losing the temper takes all the sweet, pure feeling out of life. You may get up in the morning with a clean heart, full of song, and start out as happy as a bird, and the moment you are crossed and you give way to your temper, the clean feeling vanishes, and a load as heavy as lead is rolled upon the heart, and you go through the rest of the day feeling like a culprit. And anyone who has experienced this feeling knows that it can not be shaken off, but must be prayed off.

Once upon a time a hog drank from a trough into which a barrel of beer had been emptied. He became very much intoxicated. When he came to himself, he was very much ashamed of his conduct. He was truly penitent, and said to his friends: "I have always been a beast until this unlucky slip, and I promise you I'll never make a man of myself again."

Take Care of Your Health.

Why will a man wait until health fails him before he will begin to take care of it? One never misses his health until he feels sick, nor does he value his strength until weakness overtakes him. Take the "home bell drill" every morning and night, and practice deep breathing the first thing on getting out of bed in the morning and just before going to bed at night.

As one breathes so he lives. The simplest and best breathing exercise is a dozen deep breaths taken a dozen times a day. Wear clothing loose. Don't worry. Don't hurry. Sleep all you can, but go to bed early. Eat plain food and not over-much of it, and chew that well. Don't let a day pass over your head without taking enough exercise to produce free perspiration. Drink a glass of cool water as soon as you get out of bed, and keep your bed-room windows open a little at the top and bottom the year round, more in Summer and less in Winter. The smooth, evenly developed body is the most enduring, and is produced by a moderate amount of varied, hygienic, body-building work taken daily.—Robert J. Roberts, in Young Men's Era.

Beer.

If we were beginning a course of life with reference to longevity, and had to choose between beer and whisky, we would take whisky, though that is a pronounced life-shortener. Every ten glasses of beer contains as much alcohol as one glass of whisky of the same size. The poor wretches who drink beer believe that their fat is a sign of health, and receive the congratulations of their friends as hogs might on their increase of weight, not knowing any more than the hogs that all such increase is the precursor of death.

It is to be feared that the custom of administering beer to delicate women as a semi-medicine is increasing. The best medical authorities almost all agree in stating that such persons do not recover easily from wounds, that they are peculiarly liable to sink under operations, that their fat disappears under the sickness of a single week, and that the strength for work is much less than that of the abstinent, all other conditions being equal.—New York Advocate.

Hot Water.

A prominent physician of New York recently declared that hot water is woman's best friend. It will cure dyspepsia, if taken before breakfast, and will ward off chills, when she comes in from the cold. It will stop a cold if taken early in the stage. It will relieve a nervous headache, and give instant relief to tired and inflamed eyes. It is most efficacious for sprains and bruises, and will frequently stop the flow of blood from a wound. It is a sovereign remedy for sleeplessness, and, in conclusion, the doctor asserts, "wrinkles flee from it, and blackheads vanish before its constant use."

Medical men are becoming more and more alive to the important fact that many men are now dying of drink who were never drunkards, and possibly never once drunk. The moderate use of alcoholics produces undue stimulation and irritation of the brain, the stomach and other organs, and thus brings about disease and death.—Medical Missionary Herald.

STRAWBERRY SHERBERT.—One quart of berries mashed; sprinkle over these one pint of sugar, add the juice of one lemon and a half pint of water, in which has been dissolved a tablespoonful of gelatin. Freeze as you would ice cream.—New York Ledger.

CHICKEN SALAD.—Boil the chicken till very tender, take out all bones and chop fine; chop cabbage and cucumber pickle fine, grate the hard-boiled eggs, mix all well together; make a dressing of butter, vinegar, black pepper, and mustard; stir through well.—Selected.

RECIPE FOR POTATO SALAD.—Boil the potatoes in salted water, letting them stand till almost cool, cutting them into dice, adding a generous portion of butter, half an onion shredded fine, three tablespoonsfuls of vinegar, all mixed well together and served cold.

Open Doors in Oklahoma and the Indian Country.

In no part of our broad field is the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, growing more rapidly than within the bounds of the Indian Mission Conference. During the last Conference year the increase was twenty-nine per cent., while the increase for the whole church was but four per cent. The gain in membership was not only relatively, but absolutely greater than that in any other Conference except, perhaps, the Virginia and Holston. This phenomenal increase is not to be attributed entirely to large accessions from without, but rather to the immense rapidity with which the Territory of Oklahoma is filling up since it was opened to white settlement.

These settlers are enterprising, energetic, determined to succeed. Their great and pressing need is houses of worship. At their Annual Conference in 1894 there were reported 408 organized congregations, with but 190 houses of worship. In a single District Conference, recently held, there were represented fifty-seven congregations without houses of worship. There is on file in this office a list of more than thirty places where the people stand pledged and willing—anxious—to build houses worth from $350 to $1,000 if the Board will but furnish them one hundred dollars in cash at each place with which to buy nails, hinges, sash, glass and such other things as can not be produced at home.

Let the older and the stronger Conferences help in this emergency. It can not be said that we are intruders in this territory. Our missionaries have been there for fifty years. We had there nearly five thousand Indian members before the white men came. The country is rapidly filling up, and what we do we must do quickly. They who build the first folds will house the flocks, and in a few years will be in possession of one of the richest and most populous States in the West.

The Board of Church Extension is without the means to meet this demand, and has authorized the undersigned to make a special appeal to the church.

How many will give one hundred dollars each to secure the erection of these churches? If you can not give that much, give something, and give it at once. This business requireth haste.

OBITUARIES.

FUGLER—VIRGIL LEE FUGLER was born in Wilkinson county, May 7, 1874; died at his home, near Woodville, Miss., April 2, 1895, aged twenty years eleven months and two days. He was a member of the M. E. Church, South.

He had been a very great sufferer for a long time. He bore his afflictions patiently. He said he was not afraid to die; that Christ was with him. He called the family to his bedside, told them good-by; then requested them "to pray to meet Jesus."

Virgil leaves parents, four brothers, two sisters, many relatives and friends to mourn his loss. Dear parents, weep no more. He has gone to rest with the "blessed Savior." Lord, bless all his family, relatives and friends, that they may live and die in the love and fear of the Lord! May God console and comfort the bereaved parents in their trouble!

God has taken Virgil home,
To dwell with him above;
Oh, no never more to roam,
Prepare to meet your love.
He has joined the angel band
Around God's throne in heaven;
He is in a better land
Than all this world has given.

Loved ones, grieve no more
For Virgil, now at rest;
He will live with God forever
In the mansions of the blest.
Strive to be forever true,
And meet him up in glory;
He is watching now for you—
Tell to your friends his story.

MCDONALD—Sister DORA MCDONALD, daughter of Sister M. E. McDonald, of Jackson parish, La., was born in Jackson parish, La., Feb. 28, 1870. She was married to Mr. C. C. Chambliss, February, 1886, with whom she lived two years. Circumstances justified her separating from him. One child, a son, was the issue of this marriage, to which she was very devoted.

Sister Dora was converted in her twelfth year, but did not join the church until May 11, 1890, some eight years after, from which time until her death she was a consistent member of the M. E. Church, South.

She died in March, 1895, at Ilco, after a sickness of several weeks, which most of the time was not thought to be dangerous, but toward the end suddenly increased in violence and quickly ended her life. At her death she expressed perfect submission to the Father's will, saying that her heart was right with God, and that her only regret was that she had done so little for the Master.

She was devoted to her mother and the family, and was a favorite of them all. Sister Wilcox, her sister, said in a letter to me: "Oh, Bro. Randle, if you had known her—what a pure, unselfish, sweet girl she was—you would not have wondered that she was a favorite of us all!"

God bless and comfort the son and bereaved family! ROBERT RANDLE, Pastor.

Shiloh, La.

CROUCH—PETER S. CROUCH was born July 14, 1839; joined the church in 1884; married Miss Margie F. Jones, Feb. 25, 1885, and died of consumption after a long time of suffering, May 23, 1895, being at the time of his death thirty-five years ten months and nine days old.

Truly a good man has fallen. We shall miss him, but we trust our loss is his eternal gain. He was a kind and loving husband, a good father, a good member of the church, and we trust before his death a true and consecrated Christian. He was not fully satisfied about his spiritual condition until just before his death; but we think he fully trusted Jesus, and was saved by his grace, and had the testimony before he died.

To know Bro. Crouch was to love him. He had a turn to make both old and young love him; therefore, he had many friends, and they showed their love and esteem for him while he was sick, and then the day of his burial by the large crowd present. He provided for his family well while he lived, and left them well provided for when he died.

Rest sweetly and gently, dear brother, until the resurrection day, and then we will meet you over on the other shore.

May God graciously bless Sister Crouch and the dear little children and all his loved ones, that the good Lord may lead them until they finally meet where parting will be no more! is the prayer of their pastor,

A. D. MILLER.

Oak Ridge, Miss.

MCGOLDRIC—Died at his home in Coahatta, May 5, 1895, J. RINGOLD MCGOLDRIC, aged forty-eight years.

Another home wrapped in sorrow; another family bereft. While his death was not unexpected, it was with sorrow-stricken hearts we received the intelligence.

Mr. McGoldric had been suffering from heart failure. He struggled against the disease, but at last was forced to surrender. The weary wheels stood still and the freed spirit took its flight. His finest qualities were known only to his most intimate friends. He was taken when it seemed most needful that he be spared. How the home and hearts made desolate by his death will miss him none but his own household will ever know. God's ways are right, however inscrutable they may be to us. He says, "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter."

A FRIEND.

RAGAN—Mrs. REBECCA RAGAN was born in 1820; professed religion and joined the Methodist Church in 1835; was married to Mr. S. Y. Ragan in 1837, and died at her home near Jonesboro, Miss., May 17, 1895.

Sister Ragan was a lady of sterling character. Her long life was spent in the Master's service. She was a true Christian and a staunch Methodist. She was of Methodist stock, her father being a local preacher. She was for sixty years a member of the church.

Her departure was peaceful and triumphant. She seemed to be completely resigned to the inevitable change. When the call came she gently "fell on sleep," and her ransomed soul went home to God.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. A Mr. Turft, of Boston, has bought 5 000 acres of land in the North Carolina hills, and is about to erect 500 cottages on it for the use of persons afflicted with consumption. He proposes to provide some easy occupation for the class of people whom he sends there.

Amite Peabody Summer Normal School closed its four weeks' session Friday. This is the first Summer Normal held in the Florida parishes, and has been an eminent success from start to finish. There were 105 teachers from Tangipahoa, St. Tammany, Washington, Livingston and St. Helena parishes enrolled during the session.

The final incorporation papers of the Interocean Electric Railway Company, of Chicago, have been granted by the Secretary of State. The capital stock of the company is $200,000 000. The chief object is to build an elevated electric railway between New York and San Francisco. It is proposed to construct the line first from New York to Buffalo, and then to extend it west as far as possible in intermittent stages.

The treasury deficit for the fiscal year just closed will be found to be approximately $43 250 000. This, added to the last year's deficit of nearly $70,000,000, make the excess of expenditures over receipts since June 30, 1893, about $113,250,000. The total receipts of the department this fiscal year, exclusive of postal revenues, amount to nearly $313,000 000, and the expenditures $356 250,000, of which pensions took $141,391,623.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS.

(Exodus xx, 1-17.)

The transmission of the two tables containing the Decalogue thrillingly interesting. God issued a second edition after the fracture of the first.

1. The first table contains our obligations to God. We should love and honor God.

(1) As the only true God. Polytheism absurd. Pantheism a philosophical phantasm. God the First Cause.

(2) In the proper way. Images of Deity to be abhorred. Iconoclasticism has much in its favor.

(3) In regard to his name. Profanity the index of shallow mind. Question the scriptural right of the Quakers to refuse to take oath in court.

(4) With reference to his day. The second clause of this commandment not sufficiently emphasized: "Six days shalt thou labor," etc.

(5) In regard to parents. God honors parents as his substitutes. Obedience to parents as necessary as obedience to God. This commandment introduces

2. The second table. It contains our obligations to our fellow-men. The five commendments relate to

(1) Bodily life. Homicide and suicide sadly numerous. Only a coward carries habitually fire-arms. 'Tis puerile sentimentalism which refuses the death penalty to a murderer.

(2) Marriage. Early marriage has seldom been regretted. Divorce on any other than scriptural ground not permissible. The English law, forbidding in widowerhood the marriage of a sister-in-law, an enomaly.

(3) Material possession. Possession is not robbery, as socialists teach. Scripture permits it. God forbids dishonest practices.

(4) The good name. False witness, slander, steals more than highwaymen. Says Shakespeare.

"Who steals my purse, steals trash;....
But he that filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
And makes me poor indeed."

(5) The Tenth Commendment inveighs against lusting for what is our neighbor's. God looks to the heart. He not only forbids overt transgression, but also impure, dishonest states of the heart.

In Matthew xxii, 37 40, Christ gives the Decalogue in epitome. Loving God supremely and our neighbor as ourselves.

A Chance to Make Money.

In the past week I have made $125 and attended to my household duties. I think I will do better next week. It seems the more Dish Washers I sell, the more demand I have for them. I think any lady or gentleman, anywhere, can make money in this business. It is something every family wants, and when they can be bought so cheap they buy them, and the person who has enterprise enough to take an agency is bound to make money. I wish any of your readers that wish to make from $5 to $12 a day, would try this business and report their success. Anyone can get full particulars by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., E. E. Pittsburg, Pa. Such a chance is rare—at least, I have never struck one. MARTHA F. B.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible in the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can get the Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type, the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2 45 instead of $1 65. This is the best Bible again ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2 45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the two following reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain the price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our sewing machines—a High-Arm Shuttle—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be filled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1.65.

MY HERITAGE.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Into life so full of love was sent,
That all the shadows which fall on the way
Of every human being could not stay,
But fled before the light my spirit lent

I saw the world through gold and crimson dyes
Men sighed, and said: "Those rosy hues will fade!"
As you pass on into the glare and shade!"
Will beautiful the way seems to mine eyes.

They said: "You are too jubilant and glad;
The world is full of sorrow and of wrong.
Ere long your lips shall breathe forth sighs —not songs!"
The day wears on, and yet I am not sad.

They said: "You love too largely, and you must Through wound on wound grow bitter to your kind."
They were false prophets; day by day I find
More cause for love, and less cause for distrust.

They said: "Too free you give your soul's rare wine;
The world will quaff, but it will not repay."
Into the emptied flagons, day by day,
More hearts pour back a nectar as divine.

Dyspeptics! Is it not love's estate?
Look to it then, and keep its cell well filled.
Hold that my best wishes are fulfilled,
Since I love so much, and can not hate.

Communications.

Methodist Doctrine and Spirit.

We differ about sanctification because they differ about sin, both original and actual. They look at the same subject through different glasses. They are equally honest and equally pious. Some of them are unequally learned. They have abundant zeal without any large share of knowledge. As a general rule, the heat of one's zeal is in proportion to the smallness of his knowledge. One may be perfectly honest in his views, and very fervent in the advocacy of them, and yet be may be in error. This often happens. This fact ought to make us very generous towards other people; towards those who differ from us. After all, they may be right, and we may be wrong, or both may be wrong. I think I have read one hundred, or more, volumes on the subject of sanctification. I have had a great fondness for this kind of reading from childhood. I have never yet read an author who opposed holiness, and never have read any two authors who agreed upon it in every particular. All the writers, without a single exception, declare that the saved must be perfectly holy somewhere, somehow, and at some time, before entering heaven, before going into the presence of God. This strikes me as a very important fact. All mean the same thing and seek the same thing. For this reason I am inclined to be very liberal and generous towards those who do not, possibly can not, see the subject through the same glasses.

One thing I know of myself: Calvinism has been the trouble and worry of my life, and I have a keen scent for everything that smells of that doctrine. Whenever that snake shows his head, I catch him sure. I can not help it. I am bound to hit it, or to hit at it.

I firmly believe I have the correct view of sanctification, both scripturally and theologically; but I meet some good people who think I am dangerously in error on this subject. They talk to me, reason with me, urge me, pray for me, cry over me, and bewail my dangerous and lost condition. They love me. There is no doubt of it. It would do them good all over if I would knock under and agree that they are right, and come out and profess sanctification as they understand it. I love them. They are so good and zealous I could not keep from loving them. I admire their zeal, but pity them because they do not understand the Scriptures, nor the theology of this subject. Their hearts are right, but their heads are wrong. So I think of them, and some of them think me wrong in both head and heart. When I corner one of them in an argument on the scriptural and theological aspects of this question, he claims to have divine illumination, or inspiration as to the correct interpretation of God's Holy Word. I do not believe a word of this, and specially so when the interpretation given contradicts, as often happens, the plain face of the text. I do not look for another divine-inspired revelation from God, nor for a divinely inspired interpreter of the Bible we have—one who can give the authoritative interpretation of the

It is somewhat remarkable, and worthy of careful study, that the pivotal point of this present controversy has been two adverbs—"subsequently" and "instantaneously"—two expletives, or modifying words. "Words are the signs of ideas," so my books tell me; and I have sometimes thought they were the blinds of ideas—specially adjectives and adverbs. I sometimes agree with those who differ from me just to see if they will agree to agree; but they will not. I say: "Well, yes, of course, sanctification comes after regeneration." "No, no," says my zealous friend, "it is subsequent to regeneration." Now, for a thing to be "subsequent," and to "come after," is precisely the same thing. No one that I ever heard of, or read after, ever believed that sanctification came before regeneration. "Oh, yes," I say, "certainly sanctification comes at once." My friend replies, "No, it is instantaneously," as if "at once" and "instantaneously" were not the same thing. In this way we fall into wars of words—not so much about things as terms. I have never read any author who did not believe sanctification was "instantaneous." It did not matter what theory of it he held—gradual, progressive, in death, by imputation, by purgatory, or by "second blessing"—when it was done, it was done at once, "instantaneously." Our faith should not stand in adverbs and adjectives.

Lastly: There is much unholiness manifested in our controversies on holiness; much of real, downright depravity shown by those who claim to have had the least and last particle of depravity taken out of them; much pride of opinion, much selfishness shown by all of us. At best we are poor, weak, ignorant worms of the earth, needing day by day the mercy and grace of God. If we only loved God with all our hearts, and loved our neighbors as we ought, we would very soon agree to disagree in love, and go right along, each in his own way, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. Unity of spirit ought to be maintained even when we do not think alike on subjects about which good men have always differed; perhaps always will differ.

A Methodist people are baptized and received into the church on the faith expressed in the formula known as the "Apostles' Creed," and there is not a member of any Christian denomination in this country that does not believe every item of that. We are broad enough and liberal enough to agree with all God's people on the cardinal and fundamental truths of the gospel, and to differ from them on all other theological, logical, metaphysical, and controverted questions.

This is the spirit and genius of the religion of Christ and of Methodism the world over. We agree as to the fact of sanctification, and differ only as to the time and mode of it.

GILDEROY.

Social Enjoyment.

No fact connected with human life is more apparent than that man is a social creature, delighting in fellowship. Men like Daniel Boone, who loved to live in the wilds of the forest, remote from human habitation, are exceeding scarce. One of the chief causes of the rapid growth of cities is to be found in man's longing for human society. The pleasures of social intercourse, how inestimable they are!

Though Christians in other ages of the world have thought otherwise, the desire for social enjoyment is of divine origin. The monks and hermits of the "Dark Ages" imagined they were more pious than other men because they denied themselves social pleasures, and repressed the desire for amusement. Nor is the world yet entirely rid of the old Puritanical notion that Christians must never be seen to laugh or engage in fun-making and recreation. The spirit of asceticism dies hard. There are church members to-day who oppose every form of amusement because of the supposition that all amusement is sinful. What sarcasm there is in Lord Macaulay's remark about the Puritans, that "they opposed bear-baiting, not because it hurt the bear, but because it gave the people pleasure."

The church is constantly lifting her voice in denunciation of questionable amusements; nor do we favor in the least degree a lowering of the standard hitherto maintained. Something else should be done, however, besides the uttering of prohibitory commands. Warnings are well enough, if the right course be pointed out; but the failure to provide wholesome amusement in place of that which is harmful, is the reason for the estrangement of many young people from the church. The take-care-of-yourself policy is ruinous.

What we call "society" is really an organized force which is ever busy providing entertainment for its members. Social enjoyment of some kind the young people must have. The desire for it is as natural, and in itself as innocent, as the appetite for food. Worldly people are constantly offering the people enjoyment in the shape of balls, card parties, champagne suppers, etc., where the young people meet each other and have what is called "a good time." If no other social entertainments are provided, many young people can not easily resist the temptation to attend such places. As a rule, Christian people are not as thoughtful as they should be of the social wants of the young.

The Epworth League, we think, furnishes a happy solution of the difficulty. In its meetings the young people are brought together frequently, and in a way that conduces to intellectual and spiritual elevation. From time to time social meetings are held, at which music, recitations, and other innocent attractions are provided. Thus the fact is demonstrated to the world that pleasure and merriment are not the exclusive property of worldlings. God speed the day when young people everywhere—and older persons, too—shall recognize that Christianity is not the handmaid of sourness and gloom, but that she is the evangel of brightness and joy. Henry Ward Beecher once said: "This world would be a great groaning machine if God had not sent humor to make its wheels run smooth, and sparkling wit by which to light the torch that should guide a thousand heavy feet in right ways." "The Son of man came eating and drinking." He sat at the wedding feast and at the social table, and by his presence sanctified these social relations and pleasures. To provide social enjoyment is not, and never should be, the chief business of Christians; but what a transformation in society could be wrought if there were more unselfishness and less exclusiveness; if more attention were paid to cultivating, after a Christly manner, the social side of life. The young people, however, are usually left to amuse themselves in their own way, and strangers are, in many cases, sadly neglected.

"A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," says the writer of Proverbs. Who is so merry of heart as he whose life is consecrated to the service of Christ? M. M. BLACK.

Paragraph 120.

The discussion of the paragraph in question has, so far as the consensus of the church is concerned, settled at least one question, viz.: that ¶ 120, of 1894, was not intended to increase the authority of our Bishops or presiding elders, but was enacted in order to enable our pastors to control the services held in their churches by evangelists and other migratory preachers. Still there are various and sundry other questions growing out of this one, which remain to be settled. In at least one of these issues, those who contend for the authority of the pastors, as expressed in ¶ 120, have gone as far over the line of custom and consistency as those who would so interpret the paragraph as to destroy whatever authority the pastor might have. To argue that a presiding elder is never present in a pastoral charge except when there officially—i. e., to hold a quarterly meeting—lays over on the other extreme, that he is present at every pastoral charge when within the bounds of his district. As I understand it, the views embraced in the foregoing sentence carry with them the gist of the whole question.

It seems to me, as I have often stated, the object of the last clause of 120 was official correlation. "In the absence of a Bishop" means when a Bishop is not present. If he be present within the pastoral charge, in touch with the pastor, not only courtesy, but the law as well, places him in command. But if he is away in some other pastoral charge, he has nothing to do with "the services held in the churches" of that charge from which he is absent. All this is true of the presiding elder as I look at it. Whatever constitutes the presence of a presiding elder constitutes the presence of a Bishop. The presiding elder is created by the Bishop for a specified field of labor, meted and bounded by the Bishop. A Bishop is created by the whole church, and has his labor wherever he and his colleagues may decide. But there is no law creating episcopal districts. A Bishop is not a Bishop for the first or tenth district, but is a Bishop for the whole church, and is first among equals wherever he may go. If this be so—and I think it is—whatever constitutes the presence of a presiding elder in his district constitutes also the presence of a Bishop in his district—the church. By some, however, it is contended that the presiding elder, when out of his district, has no authority in it; but when within its bounds, he is present in every pastoral charge. And so with a Bishop and his episcopal district.

If this be so, the patronizing Conferences of the ADVOCATE are entirely without episcopal authority, although two Bishops reside within that territory. Neither of the Conferences in Mississippi nor Louisiana are in the episcopal district of either Bishop Keener or Galloway, while Bishop Hendrix—within whose district one of these Conferences lies—is not present in the district, having his residence at Kansas City, within the territory of still another episcopal district.

The possibility of any part of our great church being without episcopal authority—or that, officially speaking, any part of it without a Bishop—seems to me the very height of inconsistency. His official duties extend as far as the church, and he must perform these wherever present. Where the real difference lies as between the Bishop and the presiding elder is just here: the Bishop is a connectional officer; the presiding elder is a sectional officer. One is for the church, while the other is for a small piece of territory within the church; and while they each have authority everywhere, at all times, in their respective districts, they are not, and can not be, present at but one place at the time.

That this is a correct interpretation of the relation of these officers seems clear from the fact that in strictly official matters nothing is said about the "absence" of anyone.

Thus—¶ 104—the Bishop must "hear and decide appeals," and so on to ¶ 107. So the presiding elder—¶ 109—must "travel through his appointed district," etc. (Why "travel" if he is always present in every pastoral charge?) Paragraphs 112 and 113, and so on to the end of the section. Paragraphs 121 to 139 define the official duties of a pastor. These are things which a superior officer could not prevent him doing. They are official duties not correlated to those of any other officer. Paragraph 51 provides for "the absence of a Bishop," just as 110 and 111 do, and just as 120 and 125 provide for the "absence of the presiding elder."

Can some one tell why the law has made such elaborate provisions for "the absence" of men who are always present? It seems the object of the law makers, as expressed in the statutes of the church, was to so correlate the various duties of the several grades of officers that in the "absence" of him upon whom these duties devolved they should be performed by whatever officer might be present at the time and place.

I can not see, after comparing all the uses of the term employed in our Discipline, any reason for attaching any technical meaning to the word "absence." It does not seem to be technically employed. "In the absence of the Bishop the Conference shall elect the president by ballot." That is clear. "In the absence of the Bishop, to take charge of all the traveling and local preachers," etc. This is clear. "To hold Quarterly Conference in the absence of the presiding elder." In all these statutes no one has ever found a scarecrow. "To preach the gospel, and, in the absence of the presiding elder or Bishop, to control the appointment of all services to be held in the churches of his charge."

There seems to be no difference in any two of these paragraphs of the meaning of "absence." It simply means when not present, and that seems to be all there is in it. It must be bodily presence. There is no other sort of human presence. The absurdity of any other construction lies just here. If the presiding elder is present at all the charges in his district at the same time, and has "control," the Bishop is also present at the same time in all the districts of the church with "control" (or if not of the whole church, at least in his episcopal district); and all the provisions about "absence" are so many supreme forces, because the Bishop is always present, and has "control of all services."

All this bluster about "a bad law," "necessity for further legislation," "jealousy of the episcopacy," and so forth, amount to nothing. Paragraph 120 is a good law, enacted under the advice of ten Bishops, not objected to by any one of them, and endorsed by the General Conference of a great church. Some one must "control the appointment of all services to be held in the churches" of every pastoral charge. Who but the pastor should do this? To this end ¶ 120 was enacted, and this fact is almost universally conceded. What is "bad" about the law? Our Quarterly, District and Annual Conferences are all held in some "charge." Take out the second sentence of this paragraph, and some disgruntled pastor might mock at your "Committee on Public Worship," and take "control" of "all the appointments for services" to be held during such Conference—love-feasts, anniversaries, and all.

The law is a good one. The smoke will blow away, the scare will pass off, and the law will stand. Good men err, but never do wrong with their eyes open. J. A. PARKER

In the Living Present.

Rev. Hugh P. Hughes, the celebrated Wesleyan preacher of London, is reported to have climbed to all prominent summits of the Alps in Switzerland. Much daring! But it will require greater daring to descend into the notorious sinns of Darkest England.

Absinthism, Dr. Lancereaux declares, creates sad havoc in France. Nervous systems shattered, generation decreasing, insane asylums crowded. At an average every adult Frenchman partakes annually more than two gallons of that liquid poison, absinthe. Rochefort recently declared in the Lanterne, that another German invasion had captured France. That in Paris more Bavarian beer is drunk than in Munich.

We see it stated, that within the last four years forty new mission churches, at an expense of $500,000, have been erected in Chicago. Thus Methodism is pioneering in cities as well as in the wild-woods. That is the only way to reach the masses: Go where they are.

Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., the independent Baptist preacher in New York, recently declared in a discourse at the Academy of Music, of that place, that for the last two decades Protestantism in that metropolis had not only been a failure, but had proved a positive hindrance to the progress of Christianity. The church-property, worth about $16,000,000, should be sold, and the proceeds be distributed among the needy. Well, gaping for breath, we will only state that when at the close of the discourse he called for communicants to partake of the Lord's Supper, of the three thousand attendants only twenty-five consented to come.

Rev. Dr. Manchester, in England, holds that our efforts to draw the masses are frequently the outcome of vainglory. Certainly it gave him pleasure to see his church crowded, but the conversion of a soul was of greater importance than large audiences. He laments the introduction of sensationalism as bait to reluctant attendants.

The origin of the word "sincerity" is interesting. Builders in ancient Rome using defective marble in the erection of edifices would cover said defects with wax, a species of putty. When new the defects would not show. Later, however, the putty would fall out and show the blemish. Hence, subsequently, the clause was inserted in building contracts: Sine cera—without wax. Y. M. C. A. Southern Students' Conference.

The second Southern Students' Summer Conference, held under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association (Intercollegiate), at Knoxville, Tenn., has just closed a most successful and significant session.

There are three such conferences held each Summer for the purpose of deepening the spiritual life of the college men of the United States: one at Northfield, Mass.; one at Lake Geneva, Wis., and this one at Knoxville, Tenn. Thus the students in the North, West, East and South are touched by this mighty movement.

The sessions of the conference began on June 14, continuing ten days on the beautiful grounds and ample buildings of the University of Tennessee, which were so hospitably tendered to the Association for the purpose. Each State in the Southland except Florida, representing forty-seven colleges and twelve thousand students, was represented by the one hundred and forty-four delegates gathered there. Ohio and California sent delegations also.

The conference, which was presided over by that godly and consecrated man so long identified with the College Y. M. C. A., Dr. Robt. J. McBryde, of Lexington, Va., was opened by an informal, yet earnest, address of welcome by Dr. Dabney, president of the University of Tennessee, in which he said "that they could not get along without the Y. M. C. A. at the university, and, further, that it is essential to the success of any college." Dr. McBryde responded in a few appropriate words for the delegates. The classes were then organized, and courses of Bible study outlined.

The next day work was begun in earnest. The first hour, from eight to nine, was spent in what was known as the Presidential Conference and Missionary Institute—the former being for the instruction of Association presidents, and led by Mr. F. S. Brockman, of New York, the Southern college secretary, while the latter was for those students who intend to spend their lives in foreign fields. This was conducted by Mr. H. W. Luce and H. B. Sharman, of Chicago, Missionary Secretaries, and Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, of Nashville, Tenn. The second hour, from nine to ten, was spent in the normal Bible classes, which were divided into Workers' Bible Training-class, and Devotional Bible Study. The former was taught by Mr. A. T. Jamison, of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary; the latter by Mr. W. H. Sallmon, the Bible teacher at Yale. Both of these men are thorough Bible students and efficient teachers, which made this department one of the most instructive and interesting of the conference. From ten to eleven an Association Conference was held, which dealt with problems peculiar to the College Associations. This was a most practical hour's work. From eleven to half-past twelve a platform meeting was held. Addresses were made by Dr. McBryde; Mr. Frank Anderson, of Oxford University, England; Mr. W. P. Williamson, of University of Edinburgh, Scotland; Mr. F. Burgess, of Wales; Jno. R. Mott, of New York; F. S. Brockman, Dr. W. R. Lambuth; Mr. L. Wilbur Messer, of Chicago; Miss Haygood, of China; Mr. R. E. Speer, New York, and others. Thus the forenoons were spent. The afternoons were devoted to athletics, such as boating, swimming, basket-ball, hand-ball, lawn tennis, base-ball, bicycling, and all forms of sports, under the direction of Prof. Wegner, physical director of the University of Tennessee.

On Wednesday afternoon the delegates took an excursion up the Tennessee river on a steamboat to the beautiful "Island Home" of Col. Dickinson, where the delegation and faculty were elegantly entertained.

At sunset each evening a life-work meeting was held out on the hillside of the picturesque campus. These meetings were peculiar on account of the power of the Spirit manifested in the lives of the students. They were intensely inspiring, and far-reaching in results.

At eight there was another platform meeting, treating some special feature of the work. Thus the ten days of privilege and inspiration were passed, and the testimonies given at the farewell service indicated that the conference had marked an epoch in the lives of many, and that all would go down to their colleges in the Fall determined to study their Bibles more diligently, to live more Christ-like, and to lead their fellows to Christ. The Bible is the best guide to good manners in existence. And yet there are people who think that when they have made a reputation for piety, they can afford to be bears.

MY LITTLE WORK

BY FRANCES RIDLEY HAVERGAL.

Master, to do great work for thee, my hand
Is far too weak! Thou givest what may suit—
Some little chips to cut with care minute,
Or tint, or grave, or polish. Others stand
Before their quarried marble fair and grand,
And make a life work of the great design
Which thou hast traced: or many skilled combine
To build vast temples, gloriously planned.
Yet take the tiny stones which I have wrought,
Just one by one, as they were given by thee,
Not knowing what came next in thy wise thought;
Set each stone by thy master-hand of grace;
Form the mosaic as thou will for me,
And in thy temple-pavement give it place.

Christian Living.

"Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord; and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." Is it not plain from this and the following verse that God promises to be their God only on the ground of their being separated from the works and workers of iniquity? Those who will have the promises of God fulfilled to them must come under the conditions of these promises. If they touch the unclean thing, God will not be their God. He promises in the eighteenth verse to be a father unto them. Earthly fathers, however loving and affectionate, may fail to provide for their children, because everything is not at their disposal; but the Lord can never lack will, power, nor means. The promise is sure to the children, and the children are those who take the Almighty for their God. Those who do what God forbids can never stand in the endearing relation of children to God Almighty. To the Jews the promises were originally made. They would not have God for their God, but would work iniquity. What was the consequence? God cast them off, and the Gentiles were taken in their place. "Let us cleanse ourselves." Let us apply to him for the requisite grace of purification, and avoid everything in spirit and practice which has a tendency to pollute the soul. "Filthiness of the flesh." The apostle undoubtedly means drunkenness, fornication, adultery, and all such sins as are done immediately against the body; and by "filthiness of the spirit," all impure desires, unholy thoughts, and polluting imaginations. If we avoid and abhor evil inclinations, and turn away our eyes from beholding vanity, there will be the less danger of our falling into outward sin; and if we avoid all outward occasions of sinning, evil propensities will certainly be lessened. But still, withholding the eye, the ear, the hand, and the body in general, from sights, reports, and acts of evil, will not purify a fallen spirit. It is the Holy Spirit alone that can purify the heart. But if we do not withhold the food by which the man of sin is nourished and supported, we can not expect God to purify our hearts. How can those expect God to purify their hearts who are continually indulging their eyes, ears and hands in what is forbidden, and in what tends to increase and bring into action all the evil propensities of the soul? We see, therefore, that there is a strong and orthodox sense in which we may cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and of the spirit, and thus perfect holiness in the fear of God. This, in our judgment, is Christian living.

"Beginning of Sunday-Schools in the Southwest."

Under the above heading appears in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, of May 23, an interesting sketch of the second Sunday-school in point of date, so claimed by writer. It is probable that the above school might have been the first or second to have been organized in the vicinity of Natchez, Miss. I think it can easily be shown that the school organized and run some time by Sister Little, of Natchez, is not the first school organized by the Methodist Church. We find that this Sunday-school question received considerable attention by the saintly Asbury. In the Conferences over which he presided, in the eighteenth century, he organized a school in Virginia in 1783. So says our Quarterly Review of 1890. We also find in the same periodical that Rev. John Wesley, when a missionary to Georgia, "he established a school of forty children, which he placed under the care of Mr. Delamotte. He also made it a part of his Sunday work to meet with the children in the afternoon, and endeavor to impress the truth they heard from the pulpit. We find, in connection with the above statement, that many schools sprang into existence from the Annual Conference held in the city of Charleston in 1790, at which Conference the subject was thoroughly discussed, and a resolution was unanimously passed authorizing the establishment of Sunday-schools in every church and at all preaching-places. In obedience to his resolution, many schools were organized. Some were very crude. One of these was held near Little Pee Dee river. It met at nine o'clock on Sunday, gave recess at twelve, met again at one, and then adjourned at four in the afternoon. The teachers and scholars brought their dinners. For bad behavior and failure to listen to the instruction of the teachers, the scholars were given thirty-nine lashes."

In December, 1790, a meeting in the interest of Sunday-schools was held in Philadelphia. The next year several were organized in the city. The first school in New York was started in 1792 by a negro woman named Katy Ferguson. In 1794 one was organized in Paterson, N. J. Three years later, through the efforts of Samuel Slater, one was started in Rhode Island. Then they began to spring into existence everywhere.

I think it very reasonable to presume the meeting held in Philadelphia in 1790 was none other than the modern Sunday-school convention.

As stated in the outset, the school under review very likely was the first to be organized in the Mississippi Territory.

What I have written on the subject were facts gathered from some of our leading publications. If I am wrong, I would thank some one to set me right.

Holiness, Sanctification, Perfection.

A good brother, in a very recent issue of the ADVOCATE, arraigns translators of the Scriptures for treating and rendering the words "holiness" and "sanctification" and "perfection" as synonomous. I don't know where the brother studied Greek, but one would hardly suppose he has more thoroughly mastered this language than some of the grand old scholars who have given us our beautiful versions of the blessed Scriptures. His article is misleading to all who would give him more credit for proficiency in New Testament Greek than to the gifted translators of the Bible. It may be assumed that wherever we find the terms "holiness" and "sanctification" employed as synonyms in the Scriptures, they are very correctly employed. The word in Greek which we translate "holy" is "hagios," and, with but four exceptions, viz.—Luke i, 75; Eph. iv, 24; Acts iii, 12, and Titus ii, 3—every term for holiness is from the same root as this word. "Hagiosune," "hagiasmos" and "hagiates," it will be observed, have the same root. The word translated "sanctification" we find is "hagiosmos," and it is also prudently translated "holiness" in every reasonable version, and I am surprised that anybody would suggest or demand any other rendering. Let us be persuaded that our dear brother wrote unadvisedly and on the spur of the moment. The verb which is usually rendered "to sanctify" is also a kindred word, and means not the merely setting apart for any purpose, but the dedicating to a most sacred and holy purpose, the consecrating to God, the being cleansed, purified, made holy unto the Lord; so when Christ says, "I sanctify myself," he says in substance, "I set myself apart unto this holy sacrifice; I am consecrated, dedicated to this holy ministry." The being sanctified implies that the Holy Ghost has purged us and made us holy.

Perfection, while not exactly a synonym, is kindred in meaning, and in many instances is correctly and wisely used in the sense of sanctification and holiness. The word in the original means to complete, finish, consummate a thing begun even to the uttermost; and in a remote sense it implies a death.

Our dear, good brother and his zealous colleagues seem to be greatly alarmed at the prospect of things; and wherefore? Surely the ministry of these second-blessingists, with some exceptions, is set on fire of the Holy Ghost, and the church is not sustaining any injury, but is gathering unto herself strength by the preaching of sanctification.

I have been engaged watching this movement, and every day I am convinced more and more that God is in it. I have never yet seen a Christian sanctified under their preaching but what he became a better, holier, happier man; and if a minister, the Word seemed to become more powerful in his mouth to "the pulling down of strongholds." The greatest revivals in our church to-day are by these so-called heretics.

If we honestly believe them in error, then let us strive to regain them, as Christ has directed us. Let us pray earnestly for them, for in this way alone we may please God and gain our brother, if perchance he be lost.

The Shreveport District Conference.

The twenty-ninth session convened in the pleasant hamlet of Keachie, La. These genial people opened their hearts, flung wide their doors, and bade us enter into full possession in Immanuel's name.

Rev. J. L. P. Sheppard, P. E., was stricken with disabling illness, and Rev. W. F. Henderson presided in his place over the boys; but our elder is recovering rapidly under watchful, tender care.

Several visitors were among us: Rev. J. D. Harper, Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. LaPrade, Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Armstrong, Mrs. Fullilove, and others.

One victim for application for "license to preach" came before the committee, and stood an examination under the new law. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., of Emory and Henry College, has donned the cowl of the local preacher. We welcome him as a close student, fervent spirited and gentle-hearted boy, and trust that he may be clothed in the Spirit for the great work before him.

Bro. Lowry, of Mansfield, formerly of Vanderbilt, came up for deacon's orders. We wish him the enlarging blessing of the Spirit in all his labors.

The addresses of Dr. LaPrade, Rev. J. D. Harper, Brown, S. B. McCutchen, Mrs. Morrison and others, were commendable for the picked thoughts, packed words and persuasive spirit that permeated them.

Reports from the work show an impetus imparted to the missionary sentiment. The missionary anniversary was an eye-opener to the hearers.

S. B. McCutchen, A. F. Jackson, W. G. Wadley, and D. A. Simpson were made delegates to the Annual Conference.

Robeline was selected as the point for the next District Conference.

The following resolutions were adopted by a rising, unanimous vote:

Resolved, That whilst we are in full sympathy with the educational purpose of the Louisiana Chautauqua at Ruston, La., we condemn as a desecration of the Christian Sabbath, and an improper and commercial use of the Christian pulpit, the proposed collection of an entrance fee to the Sunday sermon, July 7.

Resolved, That in view of such desecration, we advise our people to withdraw all encouragement from the Louisiana Chautauqua as an institution of harmful tendency.

Resolved, That S. B. McCutchen be requested to publish his paper on "Church Finance" in leaflet form for general distribution in the district.

Many words of cheer, praise and helpfulness were said in favor of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and we are glad to report to this noble paper that the Conference ended in a John Wesley class meeting, and great grace fell upon us.

A forward movement has been set in motion along the whole column of aggressive forces, for which we thank God and take courage.

The Opelousas District Conference.

The twenty-seventh session of the Opelousas District Conference met in New Iberia, June 25-28, 1895, with about forty-five delegates, or half the accredited membership, in attendance. It is matter of comment and regret that Opelousas, Prudhomme and West Lake had no representative present, while Franklin, Sulphur Mine, Grand Chenière, and the Broad Street congregation of Lake Charles, had no lay representation at the session. Another subject of regret was the fact that only half the charges had their Quarterly Conference records present for examination. The presiding elder was unfortunately absent from the first session on account of illness, and Dr. Jas. A. Parker was elected to preside during his absence. The business of the Conference, and the inquiries into the works, was conducted by committees, of one on each subject called for by the Discipline, and may be best summarized by extracts from their reports. The Committee on the Spiritual State of the Church reported among other things: "In some other parts of our beloved Zion the information received would not, perhaps, be considered encouraging; but, owing to our peculiar and antagonistic environments, we believe that, compared with former years, the spiritual state of the district has improved. With about three exceptions, all of the pastors reported encouragingly."

The following resolutions from the Committee on Missions were heartily and unanimously adopted after a free discussion:

Resolved, That the Louisiana Annual Conference be and is hereby prayed to petition the Board of Missions of the M. E. Church, South, for an appropriation for the full support of two French-speaking missionaries for work as directed by the presiding elder of the Opelousas district.

Resolved, That we again call upon the Board of Church Extension to carefully investigate the importance of building chapels in the Protestant-inclined portions of our territory.

The finances of the district seem somewhat behind, and the committee discovered that deficits occurred with good systems as well as with poor ones. The other interests were as carefully looked after and investigated. Rev. C. S. Zwicky, a native of Switzerland, and educated for the Catholic priesthood, who desires to work as a missionary among the French, was licensed to preach. Rev. W. H. Hatfield was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial, and Rev. Chas. R. Montgomery for re-admission.

W. H. Dailey, A. M. Mayo, R. H. Dooland and Capt. J. N. Pharr were elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference, with Sattie Hoffpauir and E. L. Harmon as alternates.

The claims of Centenary College were presented by Dr. J. M. Beard.

One remarkable feature of the Conference was the holding of street meetings, conducted by Revs. R. P. Howell and Chas. R. Montgomery, an hour before night service. These meetings were attended by several hundred people, and, at least, had an appreciable effect on the night congregations.

The secret of the perpetual happiness of some people is the fact that they dwell upon spiritual mountaintops, "above the shadow" of storm or cloud or any earthly ill. Too many lives are like the surface of an April meadow, the playground of alternate light and gloom, now radiant with a burst of sunshine, now darkened by flying cloud-shadows.

Little vexations—so trifling that they can hardly be traced in memory, except by their lingering annoyance; little disappointments, perplexities, slights, mistakes, affronts—these are the things which make up the greater part of the misery of the average human life. And yet how trivial they are, when we come to think upon them! How unnecessary it is that life should be clouded by such things—life, which is capable of being spent upon a plane perpetually above them? We can dwell above the shadow, if we will. We can attain such a height of spiritual blessedness that all the little vexations of life will float beneath us, as clouds float beneath the feet of the mountain-climber.

"How can you always be so cheerful and happy, when you have so many cares?" asked a lady of an overworked wife and mother.

"Cares?" was the smiling rejoinder. "I don't know what they are. These things, which you call cares, are privileges to me."

Here spoke a soul that lived above the shadow! Not only did the clouds of life float beneath her feet, but the perpetual sunshine in which she dwelt bathed them all with glory!

There is only one way to get above the shadow. It is to take the love and hope of Christ into the soul. A mere sunny disposition will not keep one always happy. But a supreme faith in God is like wings: it will lift one into the sun-bright sky, whether the shadow be that of a flitting April cloud, or the lingering darkness of equinoctial storm. Happiness that rises into blessedness, that is supreme always and all-wise, can be nothing less than Christian happiness. It must have its source in Christ. With such resource, life with all its ups and downs can no more sadden and oppress a human soul than rain can drench the glistening forehead of the Jungfrau, or storm-wind ruffle the plumage of the eagle that soars in the sun.

No good deed, no genuine sacrifice, is ever wasted. If there be good in it, God will use it for his own holy purposes; and whatever of ignorance, or weakness, or mistake was mingled with it will drop away, as the withered sepals drop away when the full flower has bloom.—Frederic W. Farrar.

The truths of the Bible are like gold in the soil. Whole generations walk over it and know not what treasures are hidden beneath. So centuries of men pass over the Scriptures and know not what truths lie under the feet of their interpretation.—Beecher.

Among the little work-a-day virtues commend us to that bright and cheery temper which finds out the good side of everything and knows how to say the pleasant word which sets faces smiling.—Edward Garrett.

Heaven is the world of love, not of admiration. Admiration is the spectator that turns away when its eyes are feasted. Love is the communicant at the table of a perpetual sacrament.—British Weekly.

Our safety is in having lofty ideals, and in constant labor to secure their realization. Let the getting of money be a man's ideal, and he will of necessity grow toward the dust.—Joseph Parker.

The one certain cure for worrying is to bring the soul into such relation to Christ that it will be willing to accept anything from his hands. Given perfect faith, and there will be no fretful Christians.

How to Make Our Monthly Meetings More Effective.

BY MRS. CLARA B. DRAKE.

(Read before W. F. M. Society, Mississippi Conference, June 11, 1895, and sent to be published by order of said Conference.)

The president should carefully arrange the programme of each meeting, if possible, a month in advance. For instance, let her at the meeting in March select some member to write a paper for the April meeting, giving her a subject, or assisting her in the choice of one; and let her also see that the superintendent of leaflets distributes the readings for the ensuing month. Of course, the written programmes published in leaflet form, and also furnished in the Woman's Missionary Advocate, are merely suggestive. If the president chooses to vary it, she may do so; but she should always go to her meeting with a carefully prepared and written programme. Thus doing, important matters are not overlooked, and the meeting proceeds in an orderly manner.

The report of the treasurer and corresponding secretary should be briefly expressed in writing, and handed to the recording secretary to be embodied in the minutes.

The agent of the Woman's Missionary Advocate should always be given a hearing, and the importance of her work duly stressed. Much of the indifference of our women to missions in general, and our work in particular, is due to ignorance. Let on the light! The agent should not confine her efforts for subscribers to the members of the missionary society. She should go to all the women of the church. I can not see how any really Christian woman could read the Woman's Christian Advocate or the World for Christ for any length of time, and refuse to work in the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. We have lately resolved in our auxiliary to hang up a "catch-all" in the vestibule of our church for receiving missionary leaflets, Advocates, etc., to which all are made welcome. In this way we hope to scatter the good seed of the kingdom.

Every woman should work to increase the membership of her auxiliary; but since the old adage usually holds good, that what is "everybody's business is nobody's business," it would be wisdom on the part of the president to appoint two members each month to take this work specially in hand, and report the result of their efforts.

It will, doubtless, bring the missionary work and workers closer to the hearts of our women if the corresponding secretary will regularly correspond with one of our missionaries. Of course, the auxiliary should furnish stamps to enable the missionary to answer letters, for the time necessary for doing this is all that we can reasonably ask, and for this we should be very grateful.

In addition to our regular work, some specific work of our own doubtless adds to the interest of our meetings. Our own Conference has undertaken to educate Miss McNemar. Our interest in her and in her future work will be doubly great for the efforts we are putting forth in her behalf.

Time was when some of our pastors feared that the woman's missionary movement would diminish the regular missionary collections of the church. The contrary result has followed. The more one gives, the more one wishes to give, and, as a rule, is able to give. Giving in specific directions awakens greater interest, enlists more workers, keeps the original stream of our benefactions full, while making new channels for added benevolence.

A "Missionary Tea," or entertainment of some sort, given about once in three months at the home of some member, would awaken much interest in our work. The pastor could make a brief talk on "Woman's Work in Missions," papers, music, etc., could be provided by different members of the auxiliary—in fact, a very entertaining programme be provided without painful effort, for the members of our society are usually cultivated women. The object of these gatherings should not be to make money, but to let on the light, and enlist interest. I am more than ever opposed to all indirect methods of raising money in any department of church work. Straight from the heart to the hand is the only way to give worthy of a Christian, and I believe the only method that has our Master's approval. It speaks well for the growing spirituality of our great organization that we are beginning to study method in giving as well as in working.

I rejoice that the subject of tithing our increases was brought before our last Annual Conference. I hope our auxiliaries will discuss this question freely in our monthly meetings. When all the tithes are brought into the Master's storehouse, and we add our free-will offerings of love to him who gave himself for us, the Lord's treasury will overflow, and the world's redemption be speedily accomplished.

No more excuse, then, for the lack of direct and questionable ways of raising means to carry on the Lord's work. Oh, let there be no selfishness in our love; no giving grudgingly, but freely and joyfully! There never was a time in the history of missions that called for a more heroic self-denial than the present.

As much as possible of the devotional element should be infused into our monthly meetings. Let song and prayer and testimony enliven and enrich it, and let us carry its blessed influence wherever we go. Thus the society, in its reflex benefit, will help home as well as foreign missions. Oh, that God would lay the burden of a perishing world more fully on our hearts!

Woman's Work.

MR. EDITOR: We have been requested to send you an account of the Baton Rouge District Conference, held in Ponchatoula; and, as we have on hand a few lines written to the editor of Our Homes, Miss Lucida B. Hall, we will send you a copy of the same.

We returned from Ponchatoula yesterday, after having attended the Baton Rouge District Conference. It was a most delightful occasion, the spiritual feature being quite marked; in fact, it was equal to a camp meeting all the way through, and we praise God for the privilege of being there. Of course, we went to represent the work of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society. Never has anything lay nearer our heart than this cause, and we feel we shall never be quite satisfied until the whole of the State of Louisiana, at least, shall be canvassed, and an auxiliary planted in every church where it is practicable. Oh, how we do hope that every charge should have its own parsonage, and our brethren not be somewhat comfortable! They have a hard-enough time at best, and it is little as the women of our beloved church can do to be determined that by the help of God, it should be done. When we reach that point, the glory is already in sight. There is not a task that woman can not accomplish when she goes at it with a heart full of faith and energy, baptized by the Holy Ghost.

Bro. G. P. White kindly urged that we remain over and organize auxiliaries at his different appointments. To it is due to his hearty co-operation that we had such fine success.

We had the pleasure of visiting Wesley Chapel on last Sabbath, and after listening to an earnest sermon delivered by one of our promising gifted Centenary students, presented our work, and succeeded in organizing an auxiliary.

At Springfield an adult, and a Juvenile Society, were formed; also two at our church in Ponchatoula, one of these being an interesting society of juveniles, twenty-three in number. Sum total, as the outcome of a pleasant five days spent in Ponchatoula, being five societies. We are so impressed with the great needs of these people. We must expect our own people to throw open their doors at such times as these to some of different faith—namely, Roman Catholic — took us in as members of the same family. May God bless them! We secured 60 subscribers to Our Homes, and four shares of our Cuban stock; and see we returned home richer in every way than when we left, having obtained a good investment upon a little outlay. God be praised!

We were much impressed with P. A. Johnston's quiet, magnetic way of presiding over the Conference. Everything moved on smoothly and harmoniously. The tender, filial relation existing between him and the "boys"—as I understand he calls his brethren—was very touching. We felt our heart strengthened and refreshed by the contact. If we are too lavish in our praises of our beloved minister, pardon it, for we have always had a weak spot, and a very big one at that, in our heart for the Methodist ministers; and if there are any flaws in the characters of any of them, the outside world shall never have the knowledge of such imperfections if I have for us to give the information.

Well, we shall not prolong this letter further; but will only say that we regret it was not your privilege to be present at this Conference session, and trust that you may have the opportunity of attending one of the sessions some future day.

Yours for Christ,

MARY WERLEIN.

FROM THE WORK.

WONDERFUL MEETING AT SCRANTON, MISS.

Everyone familiar with this coast country comprehends the difficult problem confronting every conscientious, consecrated minister of the gospel in getting a hearing from the masses. Roman Catholicism has taught her followers that it would be sinful to enter a Protestant Church to attend a religious service. Through lust, whisky, gaming and Sabbath desecration Satan hinders a vast multitude. Scranton, county seat of Jackson county, has a mixed population, mostly of foreign element. Many are seafaring men. How to get the masses to hear the gospel I found to be the question.

After witnessing the results of Mrs. Snell's meeting, held at Moss Point in April, 1, with many other lovers of the Lord, decided that through her great good could be accomplished. But lacking a suitable place to hold the meeting and a bank account to defray expense of the same, despaired of being able to make the experiment. This juncture several of the liberal-hearted members of Moss Point Church volunteered to secure the opera house, and be responsible for the expenses, if I would only consent to give Mrs. Snell a chance to save souls at Scranton. I readily consented, and the meeting was published.

June 16, Sister Snell began an eight-days' siege on the devil's kingdom. For four days rain prevailed. No matter; the people bought umbrellas, so hungry were they for the words of life. Knowing the motley crowd that would gather at the opera house, I spoke to Sheriff Miner to detail an officer to preserve order. He replied, "No need of it." His opinion proved correct. There was no occasion during the entire meeting to request order. Even the dogs that followed their owners preserved a dumb silence. Every soul entering that worldly temple felt that for the time being God was in it, and it demanded profound respect of them. Language fails to depict the hallowed scenes of that meeting. Hardened sinners, weeping and pleading for mercy; then rejoicing that they had found Jesus. Sister Snell will most probably never be ordained of man, but she has the anointing of the Holy Spirit, that convinces the most skeptical that she is working solely for Jesus and the salvation of souls. Editor P. K. Mayers, of the Democrat-Banner, devoted a half-column editorial to the meeting. Among many statements he said: "Many citizens of Scranton, who have not attended a religious service in twenty years, are regular attendants upon the meetings, and in various ways expressing the wish that the convicting power of God would open their eyes to their true condition. The fact can not be denied that this consecrated woman preacher has worked a marvelous reformation for good in Scranton."

All denominations, white and black, attended the meetings, and on last Sunday night fully five hundred souls heard the concluding message. There were possibly over one hundred conversions. Twenty-two accessions to the Methodist, and two to the Presbyterian Church.

Rev. Frank Keen, of Ellisville, did royal service in conducting the song services. Many thanks for service rendered. Revs. N. B. Harmon, P. Howard and T. A. Adams were present enjoying the meeting. I am glad to be able to report that the people paid the expenses of the meeting. Many thanks to the Moss Point friends, who made it possible for Scranton to receive such a religious and moral uplift.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE BEE NOTES.

Sr. Miss Eliza C. Hunter passed to her God, June 20, from the home of her brother, Dr. Spikes, in Water Valley. She was the widow of Rev. John Hunter, a member of the Memphis Conference, who died nearly thirty years ago. She had reached the age of eighty-six, and had been a member of the Methodist Church about seventy years. This writer can truly say of her, as Paul did of Phœbe, she was "our sister," "a servant of the church," "a succorer of many and of myself also." Her life was a benediction to all who come in contact with it, and especially was she a Priscilla to young preachers. I shall never forget her motherly counsels in my boyhood and young ministry, and that last hour of sweet communion and prayer together just two months before her departure. We expect reunion in the "Christian's home in glory."

It was my privilege to attend the meeting of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society at Columbus, June 22 25. This is an aggressive force in our church work, and deserves all commendation and encouragement. There are within this Conference 141 societies—28 new ones having been organized this year—which have raised in the past year $3,017 79. Surely we preachers and laymen of the church should esteem it a Christian duty to help in every possible way those noble women who labor with us in the gospel.

Some of our preachers and lay people have gone to the International Epworth League Conference, but the greater part of us are forced by financial circumstances to forego the pleasure of that great occasion. How tantalizing has it been to read and hear so often, "You must go," "You can't afford to miss it," etc.; and yet no ways and means, especially the latter, provided for the going. But we hope that the law of equalization which was adopted in Israel (see I. Sam. xxx, 21-25) will be applied, so that we who remain shall share the benefits of the Conference with those who go. This will be the case if they return to us so charged with the spirit and knowledge of Epworth League work that the light thereof shall shine forth on the churches and people with power.

A few District Conferences and many protracted meetings to be held within the next three months. In connection with these let there be Sunday-school and Epworth League mass meetings for enlisting the young people for Christ. In all of which I am your servant for Christ's sake.

G. W. BACHMAN.

Kosciusko, Miss.

C. B. H., Silver City, June 28: "I am glad to report to the columns of the ADVOCATE the success of Children's Day exercises at Silver City, June 23. This is the first time in the history of the charge that we had such a service. But this year, with the assistance of our able superintendent, Dr. W. B. Thomason, Sisters Ree Austin, Missie B. Holmes, Bertha Partee, Josie Edwards, and several others zealous members of the Sunday-school, we succeeded in making the occasion interesting and edifying. The church was beautifully and appropriately decorated. The programme from the Publishing House was used, with some little variation. The children did their part well. The service of song was excellent, and the address of seventeen minutes by the pastor, on 'The Relation of the Children to the Church,' was pertinent and timely. The amount of collection was $10.40, which will be forwarded by the secretary, C. T. Partee, to the treasurer at Natchez. All believe the cause of Christ was strengthened by the occasion."

Mrs. M. A. Bruce, Arcadia, La.: "Mrs. Tomlinson arrived in our town Monday evening, May 13. Held public meeting same evening at Cumberland Presbyterian Church. Large and attentive audience; many signers of the pledge. Tuesday we had a mother's meeting; was held at same place. Quite a number of mothers were present, but not nearly so many as should have been; for indeed all mothers need just such help in the rearing of children as can be obtained in an interchange of ideas in such meetings; and to the observant the line of work certainly demands a change. The following officers were elected—W. C. T. U.: President, Mrs. M. A. Burch; recording-secretary, Mrs. Lula Webb; corresponding-secretary, Mrs. B. E. Glover; Mrs. Garrett, treasurer. Superintendents of juvenile work were: Julia Conger and Mina Pipes. Superintendent of mothers' meeting, Mrs. Manning. Wednesday morning gospel meeting held with prisoners in jail, and they requested that we pray for them, pronouncing it the first visit since imprisonment. Wednesday evening another public meeting was held in which the origin, aim and object of the W. C. T. U. was clearly set forth, to the applause of all present. We hope that the suffrage question is forever removed from this work. I have before me a letter written by our beloved State president, Mrs. Caroline Merrick, in affirming that this work has no more to do with woman's suffrage, than with the foreign missionary. May God hasten the day when all shall heed this call for 'God and home and every land.'"

Rev. Jno. B. Keut, P. C., Bayou Chicot, La., July 1: "We have just closed a very good meeting at this place. The best work was done in the church, it being considerably revived and strengthened. There were some conversions and four accessions. The preaching was done by Revs. C. T. Munholland and A. W. Turner, though the former was suddenly called home early in the meeting, which threw the work on the latter. Sunday morning was a gracious time. Bro. Turner was at his best, and the Spirit's presence and power was felt by many."

Rev. C. McDonald, Sleen's Creek, Miss.: "We have just closed a very pleasant session of the Brandon District Conference. The attendance was good. We had sixteen out of eighteen itinerants present. The influence of the Holy Ghost was clearly manifest. The preaching was indeed good. A powerful impulse will go out from here on the district. Besides preachers from the district, we had visits from J. W. Chambers, J. W. McLaurin, T. B. Holloman, M. H. Moore, and Dr. I. W. Cooper, whose presence and labors we enjoyed."

Rev. R. I. Allen, P. C., Dublin, Miss.: "Our second quarterly meeting for Dublin and Brooklyn charge was held June 22 and 23, at Brooklyn Church, near Webb. Rev. J. B. Stone, our presiding elder, had not been with us before, but he was no stranger when he left. His sermons and work, though he was nearly sick, made a good impression on our people. We were not able to report much advancement in the work. Children's Day was profitably observed at Dublin, and we have a small, but hopeful Epworth League."

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, P. C.: "I began a meeting at Hopewell on Saturday night before the fourth Sunday in June; had no help until Friday, when Bro. Pilly came. Results: 5 accessions, baptized 2 children, 3 family altars erected and church greatly revived. Will begin at Spring Hill this week. Pray for us."

A Chance to Make Money.

I am out of debt, and thanks to the Dish Washer for it. I have made $1,640 clear money in 87 days and attend to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy, and every family wants a Dish Washer. I don't canvass very much; people come or send for the Washers, and every Washer that goes out sells two or three more, as they do the work to perfection. I am going to devote my whole time to this business now, and I am sure that I can clear $5 000 this year. My sister and brother have started in the business, doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 140 S. Highland Ave., Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money it's your own fault.

The Christian Religion Exterminated.

The Times-Democrat, of June 30, has a lengthy editorial on Prof. Huxley, whose death occurred on the twenty-ninth. A large part of the said editorial we heartily endorse. Huxley's greatness within the domain of science, properly so called, is universally conceded. He also occupied a position of proud pre-eminence in the realm of literature. In ability to make a skillful use of the rich resources of the English tongue he had few equals and, perhaps, no superior. But because a man is great in one direction, it does not necessarily follow that he is equally great in all directions. A man may be a first-class lawyer and a very poor physician, or an excellent physician and a very ordinary statesman. Hence, Huxley's pre eminence as a scientist and a man of letters is no proof of his greatness within the domain of theology. The Times-Democrat, however, seems to think that he was even greater as a theologian than as a scientist. We quote as follows:

Give him a Duke of Argyll or a Gladstone to grapple with over the question of a divine government of the world or of the authenticity of the miracles or other extraordinary stories in Holy Writ, and he was in his element. He would take on antagonists in that line by the half-a-dozen and lay them all out in a twinkling. The wealth of profound scientific thought, the rapier like cut and thrust of his logic, the illustrations from all the winds of heaven, the wit, the raillery and the delightful language he would summon to his aid in such encounters (that were the delight of his life), are indescribable to those who have not followed him through some of his polemical discussions. Argyll and Gladstone, learned men as they are, trained and brilliant debaters as they are, hardly furnished child's play to Huxley in such discussions; his Damascus blade was through them before they knew that they had been hit. (Italics ours.)

This quotation contains some of the most surprising statements we have seen in a respectable journal in a long while. Argyll and Gladstone "hardly furnished child's play to Huxley" in the discussion of "the divine government of the world or of the authenticity of the miracles or other extraordinary stories in Holy Writ." Oh, no! He could "take on antagonists in that line by the half dozen and lay them all out in a twinkling." Without meaning to be in the least disrespectful to our distinguished contemporary, we pronounce this a piece of unmitigated bosh worthy of the reckless pen of R. G. Ingersoll. We call for proof of these assertions. When and where did these David-Goliath encounters occur? Reading people know that Huxley wrote some magazine articles a few years ago which were first class in literary execution and which displayed considerable dialectical skill, but that he disproved the existence of a "divine government of the world" or "the authenticity of the miracles of Holy Writ" has never been believed except by those with whom "the wish is father to the thought." Those masterpieces of the Duke of Argyll, "The Reign of Law," and "The Unity of Nature," have never been answered by Huxley or anybody else. The Times-Democrat will confer a great favor upon a multitude of its readers if it will reproduce some of those marvelous arguments by means of which its great apostle of infidelity "laid out" such men as Argyll and Gladstone "by the half dozen in a twinkling."

We do not claim to know the facts in this case; but it has been our observation for years that men who write in this strain are totally ignorant of even the standard works on the evidences of Christianity. Were they at all familiar with these great masterpieces of Christian theology, they would never suppose for one moment that the doctrine of the divine government of the world or that of the inspiration of the Scriptures has ever been endangered in the slightest degree by the brilliant rhetoric and caustic wit of Huxley, Ingersoll & Co. Let the Times-Democrat give its readers just one of those arguments of its great chieftain by means of which Argyll and Gladstone were laid out in a twinkling, and the divine government of the world and the authenticity of the miracles of the Bible were forever relegated to the domain of myth and fable. We do not ask for two; give us just one.

Dr Donald on Christian Unity.

Rev. Dr. E. W. Donald, who succeeded Phillips Brooks as rector of Trinity Church, Boston, bids fair to equal his illustrious predecessor as an exponent of Broad Churchism. His attitude in matters of this kind was illustrated in a sermon which he preached recently on the subject of Christian unity. Dr. Donald asserted that it was little less than absurd for Episcopalians to refuse to fellowship with Congregationalists, Baptists, and Methodists, while they recognized such communions as the Greek Church and the Old Catholics of Switzerland. He also declared that the necessity of ordination by a bishop to clerical standing or of the orderly administration of the sacraments is not the authoritative doctrine of the Episcopal Church. Christlikeness, he said, was more important than forms and ceremonies. The following is a paragraph from this remarkable sermon, as reported in The Church Standard:

"Who and what are the Old Catholics, that we should grant to them the recognition and sympathy we withhold from the Methodists who found a new church every day of every year, in which are proclaimed pardon and salvation through Jesus Christ our Lord? What has Pere Hyacinthe done—what does he give promise of doing—in France, that he should be received into our open arms, while we have no relations with the millions of Baptists, North and South, who are doing more than any man can tell for the religious and moral education of America? The Greek Church never gave us a single priest; the Presbyterian, Congregational, and Methodist Churches have given us, out of their ranks, bishops and clergy by the hundreds. The Old Catholics have never been anything to us; we never come into contact with them; we know almost nothing of them; they know quite nothing of us; yet with Greek Church and Old Catholics we are united in fraternal bonds. But Presbyterianism and Congregationalism are not simply names: there is not an intelligent man in this city who does not know that the religious, moral, and intellectual life of this country is immensely the richer for their presence and work among us. For America—nay, for Christendom—the union of the Episcopal Church with the Presbyterian would mean incalculably more in the direction of real religion than the completest union with the Church in Russia or with the few old Catholics of Switzerland. A language and an ocean are between us and these foreign communions. Nothing lies between us and the Presbyterians save an unwillingness to concede a liberty consistent with a determination to retain what we regard as invaluable."

Referring to this same sermon The Congregationalist says:

"Such sentiments must have sent a cold chill down the spines of many Episcopalians outside of Trinity Church at any rate. Some already have hastened into print to condemn and attempt to disprove his statements. But the wiser policy of calling no attention to his words unnecessarily probably will prevail. Dr. Donald will be looked upon by many of his own denomination as rather worse than a heretic. But he is right and can afford to bide his time and see others come over to his ground."

On the Right Track.

The Opelousas District Conference, at its recent session at New Iberia, did exactly the right thing in putting itself on record as regards the importance of vigorous mission work in South Louisiana through the agency of French-speaking missionaries. The people of South Louisiana need the gospel no less than do the Mexicans and Brazilians. Their moral and religious status is virtually the same. What their nominal Christianity amounts to from the standpoint of Christian ethics is partially known to those who have carefully read the ADVOCATE for the last few months. The half, however, has not been told. Only those who have lived in this Rome-ridden region can have anything like an adequate conception of the extent to which Rome stands in the way of true Christianity and of all moral reform. And the same method employed in Mexico and Brazil must be used here, i. e., the people must be taught in their own vernacular. In a large part of South Louisiana English-speaking missionaries have about the same chance of reaching the masses as they would have in Mexico or South America. We hope other District Conferences in Louisiana will speak out on this subject. Then let the Louisiana Annual Conference utter its voice. Peradventure, these oft-repeated petitions will after awhile reach the ear of the Mission Board. For our part we can see not one solitary reason for sending missionaries to Mexico and Brazil that does not apply in favor of sending them to South Louisiana.

One of the worst signs of the times is found in the widespread toleration of indecent literature. Many books that the past generation would have regarded with unutterable loathing and disgust are now read by the so-called "best people," and discussed without reserve in mixed companies of men and women. We sometimes hear even young girls, the daughters of Christian parents, giving open expression of their admiration for works whose distinguishing feature is found in their cool and deliberate disregard of all moral restraints. What are we coming to? Is this thing to grow? If it does, the day of doom is before us. It might as well be said once for all that the people who revel in impure literature are not themselves pure. A bad book in the hands of inexperienced boys and girls is more dangerous than a viper in their bosoms.—The Christian Advocate, Nashville.

To the Methodists of North Mississippi Conference.

As chairman of the Board of Education, I wish to call attention to the appeal of Bishop Galloway, Dr. Murrah and Major Millsaps in the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, of June 20, in behalf of the fund for the education of young ministers in Millsaps College.

Last year the assessment made by our Annual Conference for this cause was $1,000; of this we paid only $478 50; the Mississippi Conference, with an equal assessment, raised $585.50. It is putting the case very mildly when I say that is not creditable to us. I know that the Conference has been very careful in making this assessment; the members have freely discussed the subject; they have recognized the obligation to raise this money, and the Conference has fixed the sum. Every dollar of every carefully made assessments (and there should be no other kind), ought to be paid in full; not 50 cents on the dollar; not 75 cents on the dollar; but 100 cents on the dollar. This should be the purpose and rule and practice in regard to all our assessments; this is the only way in which we can inculcate true ideas of honesty and fidelity in our members in respect to the payment of just claims. The actual outlay of the college for the education of young ministers and the sons of ministers last session was $1,800, which is nearly eight hundred dollars more than the two patronizing Conferences paid. Who is to settle this deficit? Let the Methodists of North Mississippi see to it that our assessment of $1,000 is paid in full this Fall. R. W. JONES.

Dr. Smith's Resignation.

The letter of Dr. W. W. Smith, on our eighth page, explains his reasons for resigning the office of Secretary of Education, to which he was elected by the last General Conference. Dr. Smith will reside at Lynchburg, and give his personal attention this year to the development of the Woman's College there, for which he raised some $220,000 in 1891, and which he has conducted with great success for two years. This endowed college for women is an advance in which all Methodism rejoices, and its development alone is worthy of Dr. Smith's energies, to say nothing of the other Randolph-Macon institutions under his care.

BOOKS

THE SOUTHERN STATES OF THE AMERICAN UNION, Considered in Their Relations to the Constitution of the United States and to the Resulting Union. By J. L. M. Curry. Richmond, Virginia: B. F. Johnson Publishing Co.

The author begins his book by saying that it is not controversial, yet he treats of one of the most thoroughly discussed subjects we know of. Upon no subject is there a wider difference of opinion, and while the Northern people will always look upon the South as a country of "secession and rebellion," the old soldiers who so nobly fought for what they conceived to be their duty will not like that their grandchildren be educated to think of them as traitors, or worse. The book is an excellent one for the general reader. It clearly shows the constitutional points involved, and ought to convince the most skeptical that the South had the right to leave the Union. We think the book one of the best of its kind. Its tone is such as to increase our loyalty to the old South and to the grand old Union.

The history of the resulting Union is very entertaining, as is the description of the horrors of reconstruction. In the conclusion of the fifteenth chapter he quotes the eloquent words of the lamented Lamar, showing the animus of the plan. Nothing would have been so fatal to the Southern negroes as the success of that policy, and the millions of dollars squandered by the carpet-bag Legislatures is cited in proof of the assertion. The book is well worth the money, and will do much towards clearing up those disputed points which so often perplex the average reader. J. C. B.

NOTES.

We have been an ardent friend of Millsaps College from the beginning. We have been from the first a member of the Board of Trustees, and have filled the place to the best of our ability. Since our connection with the ADVOCATE we have, as all our readers know, used its columns freely and persistently in emphasizing its claims. Every single communication in behalf of Millsaps that has been sent in has been published; and, when at all practicable, communications of this class have been published in the very first issue after their reception. In many cases we have left out editorial matter in order to make room for communications anent Millsaps College. In short, Millsaps College has had the right of way in our columns. An inspection of the files of the ADVOCATE since our connection with it will show that it has contained three or four times as many articles concerning Millsaps College as concerning anything else. In view of these undeniable facts, it seems to us that about the silliest thing a man can do is to make the statement that the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE has been remiss in its duty towards Millsaps. Such is human life. What next? Perhaps some one will accuse us of not sufficiently emphasizing the claims of temperance. There is as much ground for the one charge as the other.

We are pleased to learn that Whitworth College has a prospect for a fine opening next Fall. It has a good curriculum and an excellent faculty. Its elegant buildings, its well-furnished dormitories and its healthful location conspire to render it an ideal institution of its class. What it needs is increased patronage. This we are glad to know it is likely to have.

During the first five months of the present year, according to figures published in the Chicago Tribune, gifts and bequests aggregating $10,434,150 were made to various public institutions and objects in this country. A prominent secular journal remarks that "'advanced thought' is an attractive phrase, but scholars versed in ancient literature have discovered that what passes for new is often very old." Concerning many things which are palmed off on the public in the guise of "advanced thought," it may be said that what is new in them is not true, and what is true is not new. Excessive conceit is the fault of our age.—Mid-Continent.

The Michigan Advocate says: "Joseph Cook is not far out of the way when he affirms that nine-tenths of the contributions to missions come from one-tenth of the members of our churches." And we have heard boldly claimed by those who ought to know that, in our own church at least, the other tenth of the benevolent money is given by the ministry. We believe it to be true that no other class of persons in the church give as large a share of their means as the preachers."

The State of Michigan has for some time been trying the humane experiment of dealing with murderers without a death penalty. The experiment appears to have been a failure. The Smalley bill, restoring capital punishment in the State, has become a law, and henceforth the would-be murderer must perform his awful crime under the far-reaching shadow of the gallows. Often and often have human governments tried to improve on the divine plan in the matter of punishing crime, but just as often have they made a failure of it.—North Carolina Advocate.

Preaching the truth in love is one of the prime essentials to success in the pulpit. If the people do not feel that the preacher is in sympathy with them and loves their souls, the sermon, however able, is not likely to do them the needed good. The homely adage, "More lasses draws more flies than vinegar," is as true in preaching as in everything else. Severity of tone and manner repels. People can not be scolded into religion. The Spirit gently draws men to Christ. This fact is suggestive of the temper the minister should evince and the methods he should employ. As a preacher as well as a man he should be careful not to grieve the Holy Spirit by his harshness of temper.—Mid-Continent.

Recent successful experiments in transportation by electricity have been made by the New York and New Haven road on its Nantasket Beach Branch. A motor car took a train of eleven heavily-loaded freight cars and moved off without difficulty. Five other cars were afterwards added and the whole were hauled without the least trouble. The train of sixteen cars seemed to test the capacity of the motor little more than a single car. The maximum of power seems not to have been approximated. The party of excursionists who witnessed these experiments were quite ready to declare that a great revolution in railroading is just at the door. Electricity is to supersede steam, the world over, as a force for propelling railway trains.

Surely the whole church will sympathize with Rev. J. E. Godbey, D. D., editor of the Arkansas Methodist, in the severe affliction which has recently befallen him. In an editorial note he says: "The loss of property, the affliction of my son, the death of my daughter were all but harbingers of a deeper affliction—broken clouds which forerun the cyclone—the pathetic and heart-breaking affliction of my darling wife." And after the burial of his precious wife, he adds this pathetic note: "I am free now. But 'my heart is smitten and withered like grass.' I have no home, no one to take care of—nothing but this work for the church for which I shall seek to lose myself. As reverently as I would kneel at the sacrament shall I handle every interest of the church."

Speaking of Dr. Lyman Abbott's baccalaureate address at the recent commencement of Northwestern University, Zion's Herald says:

"It was a new thing to have a pronounced Liberalist on a Methodist platform, at the commencement of a Methodist University, holding Methodist doctrines up to ridicule, and treating the most sacred beliefs of all Methodist people as absurd and obsolete superstitions. Whether he was expected to do it, is a very serious question. The Rock River Conference will probably make some inquiry on the subject.

"The report is that many of the students present appeared pleased, and applauded the speaker when his keenest thrusts were made at the orthodox faith. This might indicate the necessity of looking into the instructions of the recitation-rooms. The church will stand reasonable discussions of all disputed points, so long as her vital doctrines are not assailed; but there are a few things which she regards as settled. The degeneracy of human nature through sin, necessitating regeneration by the Holy Spirit, is not an open question. Neither is redemption through the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. The sufficiency of the Scripture one safe and infallible guide in life and duty, is something not to be subject to ridicule."

The Natchez District Conference.

The Natchez District Conference met at Gloster, Miss., June 27, 1895. There being no Bishop present, Rev. L. S. Jones, P. E., presided. He, though a new man to the office of presiding elder, wears his robe of office with becoming dignity. His whole being seemed to be aglow with fire and zeal for the cause. The one desire of his heart seemed to be to make our coming together a blessing to all. He seemed to realize the necessity of making the District Conference a source of revival power both to preachers and people like it was intended by the founders of Methodism.

All of the preachers were present except two—M. M. Black and B. F. Lewis. As a general thing, all seemed full of hope and entered zealously into the worship.

Considering all of the circumstances, there was a fine representation of lay delegates—all of whom came praying for power. They came and stayed through the whole Conference. Local brethren had their reports ready and fell into the new order of things as readily as anyone could desire. There were two—G. M. Hull and J. A. Bishop—recommended to Annual Conference for admission.

The delegates elected to the Annual Conference were J. M. Sessions, J. F. Cassels, H. B. McGehee, and B. F. Gray.

The following were elected as District Board of Education. They will please take notice, and govern themselves accordingly: W. L. Cato, J. F. Cassels, M. C. Ford, H. B. McGehee, Harry Pedon, E. A. Enochs, B. F. Gozy, J. M. Sessions, H. W. McCram, Horace Butler, J. D. Ireland, T. J. Roberts, G. H. Peets.

The reports of the preachers were good. There seemed to be a knowledge of the fact that they were not wholly up to the Bible standard, but generally all are on the upward tendency. There is united prayer for a Holy Ghost revival all over the district.

The committees all made reports, which were very practical and voiced the sentiment of the Conference.

The inimical Jno. W. Chambers was with us almost all of the session. He seemed at his best. He made a very favorable impression upon the public for his school—Whitworth College—by his private work and public talks.

Mrs. Meek, co-principal of Port Gibson Female College, was with us part of the time and made us to feel that we had an interest in the school which she is with, and that the school is worthy our support.

Prof. Monroe was here to present the claims of the Edward McGehee College, our church school in this district. His report shows our girls to be in good hand there. Bro. Jones told us of what he knew of it as presiding elder.

We would like to have had our editor with us to speak of his welfare on the tripod of the ADVOCATE.

Gloster people of all churches appreciated getting the Conference, and tendered them all the kindness possible. The Conference was a blessing, and we would like for it to come back soon. G. M. HULL, Sec.

Memphis Conference Female Institute.

This old and well-known school has taken marvelous strides in the last two years and has forged to the front, leading all Southern schools. Last year, Dr. Key's first as president of this institution, 332 pupils matriculated. This year 50 more names were added and 382 answered to roll-call. Considering the financial pressure, this seems almost incredible. Nothing but indomitable energy and unremitting effort could have accomplished this. Dr. Key assures us that this is but the beginning, and he expects to go far beyond this. It is thoroughly equipped in every particular, and is especially noted for its fine discipline, thorough work, high grade and superb faculty who have been trained in the best schools of Europe and America. The religious influence is the best, every teacher being an earnest worker in the Master's vineyard.

The healthfulness is phenomenal, many delicate girls becoming pictures of health after a few months' stay there. Let us urge your careful study of the advertisement of this "Vassar of the South," which appears elsewhere in our columns.

The "Detroit idea" of letting the poor cultivate unimproved lots has been adopted in New York, Toledo, St. Louis, Buffalo, Pittsburg, Duluth, Omaha and elsewhere, and been commended by the press from Maine to California.

Columbus District Conference.

Columbus District Conference, North Mississippi Conference, was held in the quiet and hospitable town of Starkville: Dr. T. C. Wier, P. E., in the chair, W. V. Connell elected secretary.

Dr. Wier presided with the dignity of a Bishop, the gentleness of a woman, and the firmness of a Jackson.

The program gotten up by the presiding elder was adopted, and the discussion on the various subjects were interesting and lively.

Bros. Broyles and Phillips were the only pastors absent. The laymen were very well represented. Rev. W. B. Waters and wife, of Japan, were present, and made two instructive addresses on Japan and the foreign mission work.

Our district secretary of Woman's Foreign Mission, Sister McElroy, made a good address on missions. Mrs. Cogdell, district secretary of P. and H. M. Society, could not be present, and her well-prepared paper was read in good style by Mrs. Dero. Sanders.

Rev. J. W. Malone, president of Grenada Collegiate Institute, gave a very gratifying report from his school. Rev. G. W. Bachman was present in his usual genial manner, ready to wait on the brethren.

Bro. S. M. Thames, P. E., of Aberdeen district, was present for a day, and preached a good sermon.

Bros. Bowen, Malone, Thames, Duncan did the preaching. Bro. T. B. Malone held the song service before each service. He can sing as well as preach.

Columbus district is "holding her own," and is on the advance in some respects.

Bro. J. W. McGee was licensed to preach; four unordained local preachers were granted a renewal of license. Bros. Cline and Brown were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

There was no friction in the new law. It works well.

The Conference recommended a new mission field, to be called Singleton mission.

Bro. J. A. Bowen was appointed District Epworth League agent to stimulate the Epworth League movement throughout the district.

T. C. Billups, W. V. Connell, C. B. Ames and H. J. Harland were elected delegates to the next Annual Conference. Alternates: Geo. G. Sanders, T. A. Crila.

Bro. Connell did not stay through the session, and your humble servant was appointed secretary in his stead. We expected Bro. Connell to write up the Conference. So far he has failed; thus a few dots from this scribe.

Bro. J. W. Dorman looked well after the entertainment of the Conference. The people were so kind. Some of the brethren wanted the next Conference to go back to Starkville.

Mahen was selected as the place for holding the next Conference.

We were very much pleased and gratified with your report, Doctor. May the ADVOCATE ever move onward and upward!

The many friends of Bro. and Sister Knickerbocker will read the following note with pain. We bespeak for them the tender sympathy and the prayers of the brethren.

Our second boy, Clarence Barrett, aged nine months and twenty-one days, died to-day, after nineteen days of suffering. Our hearts are torn and bleeding, but God's will be done. Heaven is more real now. We have an angel baby, but there is a grave in our hearts. We have entered the great brotherhood of sorrow through the gateway of this grief. It is well.

The Other Side.

Returning from a round of District Conferences and other meetings, I find on my desk a collection of letters of various character. Among them are expressions which cheer us greatly and encourage us to redoubled diligence.

To us they are the literal "Multum in parvo." One reads thus: "Daughter arrived on time, is looking very well, and we are pleased." Another: "The girls came through safe; am much gratified at their progress, and am grateful to you and Mrs. Holloman for the same, and for your kindness to them." Yet another: "May God bless the college. You have advanced my daughter rapidly in her studies, which is marked evidence to me of the superiority of your faculty."

Here I find one which comes from one of the next senior class, saying: "I begin teaching next Monday for the Summer. I am confident now that I will return next session, and think I will bring others with me." Another says: "The religious influence upon my daughter has been worth the session." From a far-off State comes a request for catalogue, saying: 'I am rejoiced to learn of the prosperity of my alma mater."

Truly these are words which do the heart good. Our burden becomes lighter, our work is done with greater cheerfulness, and we take courage and go forward with brightened hopes and humble confidence.

These are specimens of letters on our desk; but what of work in the field—most cheering, and yet not unalloyed. Often we are made to wish for means to help our faithful brethren. A prayer goes up that some heart may be touched and some purse opened to aid the worthy girls of our country who are hungering for a college education. We would not detract one whit from the zeal which is inspiring our people for the higher education of our boys. All success to Millsaps College and to Dr. Cooper, its faithful and efficient agent; but why give all to the boys?

We hear of noble efforts made by the young men who are seeking higher education, and we might write of equally worthy deeds done by our girls in evidence of their ambitious spirits, and yet no response comes to their cry. The highest monument yet to be erected on Mississippi soil is for him who shall endow for our girls as Major Millsaps has done for our boys. This I steadfastly believe.

T. B. HOLLOMAN.

Notes by the Way.

We have attended in the interest of Millsaps College the Meridian, Enterprise, Brandon, and Kosciusko District Conferences, and find these districts alive to our educational interests. If I do not misread the signs of the times, these districts will give our college a large patronage next session. For the college's sake we have met with much kindness. The preachers and laymen are rallying as never before to our institutions of learning. Loyalty is a fine endowment. Every Methodist can be loyal.

We spent a short time with Rev. Mr. McCullough on the Pickens charge, and if every pastor would help us as did this live and excellent preacher, we would open in September with four hundred boys.

While at Pickens and Goodman we were the guest of Bros. Willburn and Waugh. Bro. Waugh is a relative of Bishop Bovery Waugh. At Durant Bro. and Sister J. H. Mitchell took charge of us, and no preacher ever fared better. Bro. Mitchell and Bro. J. T. Murrah were friends in other days at Vanderbilt, and it was a real pleasure to talk of other days filled with sweet memories. Bro. Murrah is doing well, and we rejoice in the success of our dear friends, Murrah and Mitchell.

Bro. W. W. Mitchell is host of the District Conference at Lexington. He is in one of the most important charges in the North Mississippi Conference, and he is filling the appointment to the satisfaction of everyone. Let everyone encourage Bro. Mitchell in his efforts to build a new church at Lexington.

Sunday morning we worshiped at Lexington, and at night we visited the Ebenezer charge, and are under many obligations to the pastor, Bro. Langley, for many courtesies.

I am in search of three or four hundred boys for Millsaps. Let pastors, Sunday-school superintendents and Ladies' Missionary Societies lend us a helping hand just now in putting us in communication with young men. Kind words are cheap, but they can do a great deal of good just now.

Listen! Presiding elders, pastors, laymen, elect ladies, send on the names to Dr. Murrah, Jackson, Miss.

The Queen and Crescent Route to Chickamauga.

Veterans and their friends will all want to attend the great National Park dedication at Chickamauga this Fall. It will be a notable event.

Do you want to know how to make the trip and what you'll see when you reach the journey's end? Write to W. C. Rinearson, G. P. A. of the Queen and Crescent Route, Cincinnati. Illustrated and descriptive matter upon application.

The Queen and Crescent Route to Chattanooga is the best line, and has the reputation of unequaled service of handsome trains of palace day coaches and through sleepers from New Orleans, Meridian, Shreveport, Vicksburg and Birmingham to Chattanooga. Quick schedules and interesting scenery en route help to make the Queen and Crescent the Southern route par excellence.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to June, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the sweeping reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain this price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to June, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1.65.

HOME CIRCLE.

OMITTED MINISTRIES.

BY NORA PERRY.

What silences we keep year after year
With those who are most near to us and dear!
We live beside each other day by day,
And speak of myriad things, but seldom say
The frail, sweet word that lies just in our reach,
Beneath the commonplace of common speech.

Then out of sight and out of reach they go—
Those close, familiar friends who loved us so;
And sitting in the shadow they have left,
Alone with loneliness, and sore bereft,
We think with vain regret of some fond word
That once we might have said, and they have heard.

For weak and poor the love that we expressed
Now seems beside the sad, sweet unexpressed,
And slight the deeds we did to those undone,
And small the service spent to treasure won,
And undeserved the praise for word or deed,
That should have overflowed the simple need.

This is the cruel fault of life—to be Full visioned only when the ministry
Of death has been fulfilled, and in the place
Of some dear presence is but empty space.
What recollected services can then
Give consolation for the "might have been?"

Home Influence.

Whose hand is tracing the outline that is to give character to the memory picture of your own little one, father or mother who may read these words? By-and-by, when your hands are folded in their final rest, these lines that you have traced upon the heart and brain of the children now growing up around you will stand out in wonderful distinctness. The impressions you are making by example and teaching will be remembered then, though they may seem to pass somewhat unheeded now. A father said not long ago: "The happiest time in all my life was when my children were safe under my own roof, and I knew they were under my guidance and control."

We wish we might stir the hearts of parents with this thought, while yet the golden hours are within their grasp, before the rush of time, so swift and silent, sweeps the little children beyond their reach into the whirl of busy life. Every day is precious for its wealth of influence in the household, but of all the days God's blessed Sabbath is the one most to be treasured and cherished amid the potent surroundings of the family circle. If other days are filled with business care, so that the little ones can scarcely see the father's face or hear his voice through all the week, somehow the Sunday should be a blessed exception. If on other days the mother's hands are so full that she can not take an hour to sing sweet hymns and read the dear old Bible stories to the eager listeners, somehow this day should be made to them the best of the week, because mother has leisure in these things.

A young man, one of a family of six boys, whose father carries on large business interests, which demand incessant attention, said recently: "My father's influence over his boys is largely due to two things: the daily family altar, where his prayers made an impression upon us, and the Sunday afternoon talks and readings which we were accustomed to have with him."

Oh, what a blessing to lay up heavenly treasure like that! It is worth more than all the father gathers of worldly store during the week, though that is not to be despised. Here is treasure which "thieves will not break through nor steal," in the Christian integrity of his boys and the good influences multiplying in all directions from each one of their lives.

Is it not, then, dear friend (Christian or not, as you may be), a question well worth considering, "How shall I make the best use of my Sundays for the good of my children?"

It is well worth while to plan for it carefully. Arrange the household work so that there shall be time to give to the children. Put the house in order so that there shall be a bright Sunday look about everything. Search out through the week some good books for the older ones to read, and picture books for the little ones. Above all, sing the familiar hymns. Oh, the memories of the household hymns! Sweeter they are, as they float from the distant years, than even the sweetest carols of the Summer birds. Read or tell the Bible stories that will never lose their charm for simple and reverent minds, no matter how old or wise the world may grow.

Take the children to public worship and to Sunday-school. The teachings given there are of more value than can be estimated, and yet the impressions that longest abide are those received amid the sacred associations of home. We rob ourselves of a parent's highest privilege when we commit entirely, or even partially, the religious training of our children either to the pastor or Sunday-school teacher. Nor can Christian parents excuse themselves from the duty of making Sunday in the home a day of benign and holy influence, by the plea that work for others demands their entire time and thought. No amount of good done to any other soul can atone for the sad and serious loss of a parent's personal influence over son or daughter.

And so we plead for thoughtful, prayerful consideration of the question, "How shall I make the best use of Sunday in my own home circle?" A wise answer, carried out in practice, will bring results affecting the well-being of our children in secular as well as in spiritual things. The memory of some tender Sabbath evening talk or hymn or prayer may be like the restraining touch of the "angel over the right shoulder" in some hour of temptation to your boy; and the remembrance of those blessed days in her early home will give strength to the daughter's heart when she comes to meet the deeply freighted years of the future. The tides of godless sentiment bear down strongly upon us, and they will be harder still for our children to resist. By all that we hold dear we owe it to them to build within their impressive minds a bulwark against these enroaching tides, by good example, by wise teaching, and by happy remembrances of sacred Sabbath time, woven like golden threads through all the cherished memories of home.—Exchange.

The Training of Boys and Girls.

We recently read the testimony, given below, of a Christian gentleman respecting his early training. He had been carelessly guarded, and during his early years had heard many vile and vulgar tales. He said: "You can not know what a source of pain and grief is this fact to me now. Children should never hear the sound of impure words. To-day, at any moment, these hateful, horrid words may rush into mind, at times destroying some beautiful picture, some fancy sketch drawn by what I see or hear; and all the pleasure of the moment is taken away, and I am distressed by the presence of memories I can not banish." This is not overdrawn. Few men there are who feel not the vicious influence of some incident of early life they should never have experienced. The truth is that our boys and girls have not the guardianship which is due them. They are turned in many instances, like domestic animals, upon the commons of life, and left there to learn what they may. We provide them with schools and churches, and then we divorce their mental and moral conditions entirely from our responsibilities, and devote our only thought for them to their physical needs, hardly inquiring into their leisure hours, their pastimes, and their playmates. They learn a thousand things they should not, many of which might be excluded from their knowledge by proper care. It may be said: "They will learn the evil." Yes, that may be true; but let the knowledge of evil be put off until the character, the tastes, the habits, and the associations of the children have been formed. Then the impression will not be lasting, influential, fixed.

Parents may, in child-training, fix the impress of a spiritual atmosphere and a right purpose. Children without such an atmosphere may have social, literary and natural advantages, and die poverty-stricken in soul. In common departments of child-training we use authority. If a child does not want to go to school, we say: "Go." If it does not like the food set before it, we say: "You must eat it." If it does not wish to wear the clothes provided, we say: "You must wear them." If it does not wish to take the medicine prescribed by the physician, we say: "You must take this." But in soul-culture it is often left to its own "likes," and the enemy of the child's soul sees to it that his likes are reproduced.

We do not care enough for the souls of our children. Our attention too frequently all runs in the secular. If we were handling clay, and it were ruined, it would prove to be a small thing; but children have immortal souls, and will grow up monuments of our care or carelessness. It is difficult to straighten a crooked tree or change the form of a hardened brick. Let us fill the minds and souls of our children with God given principles, so that Satan can find no room in their hearts for vice. Luther said: "The whole power of the church lies in the young." His words may be studied alongside of that divine word which says: "Train up a child in the way it should go."—Rev. Price A. Crow, in Sunday-School Magazine.

What One Boy Did.

We can not refrain from telling the boys and the girls what a gentleman in this city told us not long since about his boy. This account is such an apt illustration that we will give it to them.

At the age of ten years this boy began keeping poultry. His father built him a fowl-house for which nothing was ever paid by the son, but this was the only expense which was not borne by the young fancier himself. He kept White Leghorns, and his spare time out of school hours was devoted to caring for and enjoying his flock. He worked at the business, and it was good for him. It taught him, says the Poultry World, regularity, and involved responsibilities in seeing that his pets did not suffer.

When he reached the age of twenty he went into his father's office. His bank book at that time showed a balance in his favor of $1,000, cleared from his poultry while he attended school. Those who think it "not worth the trouble" may ponder this result with edification to themselves.

That one thousand dollars was worth more than one hundred thousand cents to the lad. It represented more than money. It was the material evidence of much that could not be expressed in dimes and dollars. To begin with, it associated health and vigor with the owner. Business habits also were necessarily formed in the course of that decade which would be useful in future. Independence was incalculated; a sense of being of some importance and the means of doing for himself were accompanying features. All these are worth much, and many a worried father and distracted mother, who wish that the boys had something to do "that they like to do and amounted to something," would do well to follow the course adopted by this father.—Exchange.

Small Courtesies.

I want to tell you a secret. The way to make yourself pleasant to others is to show them attention. The whole world is like the miller at Mansfield, who cared for nobody—no, not he, because nobody cared for him. And the whole world would serve you so if you gave them the same cause. Let everyone, therefore, see that you do care for them, by showing them small courtesies, in which there is no parade, whose voice is still to please, and which manifest themselves by tender and affectionate looks and little acts of attention, giving others the preference in every little enjoyment at the table, in the field, walking, sitting, or standing.—The Animal's Friend.

The Hereditary Propensity to Liquor Drinking.

Gall relates the case of a Russian family where the father and grandfather had both died prematurely from the effects of intoxication, and the grandson manifested from the age of five years a decided taste for strong liquors. M. Morel gives the history of four generations of a family. First generation: The father an habitual drunkard, killed in a public-house brawl. Second generation: Son inherited the father's habits, which gave rise to attacks of mania, terminating in paralysis and death. Third generation: Grandson strictly sober, but full of hypochondriacal and imaginary fears of persecution, and had homicidal tendencies. Fourth generation: Great-grandson, very limited intelligence, an attack of madness when sixteen years old, terminating in stupidity nearly amounting to idiocy. With him the race became extinct.

Poisonous Beverages.

More than two thousand years ago the results of alcohol on the body were compared to the bite of a serpent and the sting of an adder; and alcohol has not changed its nature since. At the present time alcoholic beverages are certainly the most injurious, deceptive and dangerous elements of death and destruction that exist, and the annals of criminal courts prove that it is an aggravated public nuisance generally.

Yet the beverages are so fascinating, and the poison in them so insidious, that the whole human race has been deluded, and cheated for thousands of years, and more injury has resulted from their use than has been occasioned by all the woe of war, famine and pestilence combined; and now that science, experience, and enlightened reason have so largely dissipated such delusive cobwebs of appetite, prejudice, and passion, these poisonous alcoholic beverages should be banished from society with all the intelligent energy that an injured and outraged people can command.—Demorest's Family Magazine.

"Doctor," said the patient, "I believe there's something wrong with my stomach." "Not a bit of it," replied the doctor promptly. "God made your stomach, and he knows how to make them. There's something wrong with the stuff you put in it, may be, and something wrong in the way you stuff it in and stamp it down, but your stomach is all right." And immediately the patient discharged him.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

WHITE CAKE.—Beat one-half cup of butter to a cream; add one cup of granulated sugar, and stir until light and creamy; add one-half cup of milk or water, and one-half pound flour. Beat until light and smooth; add the juice of one lemon, and, when mixed, the whites of four eggs beaten to a stiff, dry froth. Stir in gently with one tablespoonful of baking powder, turn into greased tins, and bake thirty minutes. If used for a layer cake, bake fifteen minutes.—Table Talk.

POACHED EGGS.—To poach eggs in the form of a ball instead of the usual flat form is a knack known to many clever cooks. The water is heated to boiling and then stirred rotarily until a whirlpool is produced, into the hollow heart of which the egg is skillfully dropped. The motion of the water coagulates the albumen or white instantly into a circular covering for the unbroken yolk.

SNOW PUDDING.—Dissolve one-half box of gelatine in one cupful of cold water. When soft, add two cupfuls of boiling water, one cupful of sugar, the juice and grated rind of one lemon. Strain; when it is cool, before it begins to jell, add the beaten whites of two eggs, and then beat the whole until white as snow. Sauce—The whites of two beaten eggs, one spoonful of sugar, one cupful of cream. Beat all together. Flavor with vanilla.—Good Housekeeping.

CHOCOLATE PUFFS.—Take half a pound of granulated sugar and one ounce of grated chocolate and mix them well together. Beat up the white of one egg to a stiff froth, then add the chocolate and sugar; beat again until they are a stiff paste. Sprinkle sugar on writing paper and drop the mixture on it in drops about the size of a silver quarter dollar. Bake them in a modern oven.—Good Housekeeping.

Epworth League.

THE FULL AND OFFICIAL PROCEEDINGS OF THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE IN A VOLUME OF 500 PAGES.

At the urgent solicitation of many Epworth Leaguers who attended the recent International Conference of the Epworth League at Chattanooga, the Times Printing Company, of Chattanooga, has consented to publish a full and complete history of that great gathering of young Methodists. The history will make a handsome volume of about 500 pages. It will contain, verbatim, all the speeches, addresses and sermons delivered at the Conference, revised by their authors. It will be indexed as to subjects and speakers. It will, in every sense, be official, and invaluable to every Epworth Leaguer. It will be a literary and religious storehouse, in a handsomely designed paper cover, printed on good paper, and illustrated. It will be a marvel of cheapness at fifty cents per copy, postpaid. A liberal discount will be given whenever an order is sent for a dozen, or more, copies. The history will be edited by Rev. John L. Weber, who superintended the magnificent reports of the Conference published in the Chattanooga Times. It will be remembered that these reports were specially commended by the Committee on Resolutions, and also by Secretaries Crews, Schell, and Steel. The book will be issued just as soon as it can be properly prepared. Send orders at once to the Times Printing Company, Chattanooga, Tenn.

DUGGER—At seven o'clock in the morning, Saturday, May 18, 1895, God called to himself the spirit of Mrs. S. E. DUGGER. She had rounded out the full measure of a long, active, and useful Christian life, and at its peaceful close she had no regrets, no sense of duty undone, or doubt of the future; and as the flickering lamp of life went out, the Savior walked with her through the valley of the shadow of death, and the angels bore her spirit back to God who gave it.

Mrs. S. E. Dugger was born in Greenville county, Va., and was formerly Miss S. E. Foster; married W. M. Dugger, and moved to Mississippi.

Her health was very delicate for a number of years before her death.

She joined the Methodist Church when quite young, and was a consistent member until her death. T.

PETTY—In the Abbeville Cemetery there is a new-made grave, where rests all that is earthy of SYLVANUS PETTY. "VAN," as he was generally called, was the eldest child of Jas. A. and Hattie Petty. He was born in Assumption parish, La., Nov. 7, 1881, and was drowned in Vermilion river, at Abbeville, while bathing with some friends.

Van was as noble-hearted a boy as we ever knew; a regular attendant at the services of the church, specially at Sunday-school, having good lessons, and reciting a verse of Scripture when his name was called. He was also the faithful and efficient secretary of the Juvenile Society of the church. He was always cheerful, and everybody loved him. The home that had been made so happy by his presence is now sad and lonely. Hearts that had so often rejoiced in his presence are now broken.

May the Lord give the bereaved ones "the oil of joy for mourning; the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness."

J. J. KELLY, P. C.

Abbeville, La.

PETTY—Whereas, It has pleased God, in his divine wisdom, to remove from our midst our much loved little friend and member of our Sabbath-school, VAN, son of J. A. and Hattie Petty; therefore, be it

Resolved, That he will be sadly missed, not only in the home circle, but the Sabbath-school has lost one of its brightest and most promising members. His teacher, too, with whom he was a great favorite, will miss his genial smile and many acts of kindness which he was always ready to cheerfully extend.

Resolved, That though his place can not be filled, and his untimely death has cast a shadow of deep gloom to rest over the school and entire community, yet "God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform." We know not why these fond parents have been called upon to "pass under the rod." God knows. He is too wise to err, and too good to be unkind.

Resolved, That we bow in meek submission to the will of our heavenly Father, and remember "whom he loveth he chasteneth." The loved one is not dead, but has only taken his everlasting flight into the realms of eternal happiness.

Resolved, That we tender our sincere sympathies to the sorrowing parents, brothers and sisters. May God pour the oil of consolation into their troubled hearts, and help them to say, "Thy will be done!"

Abbeville, La.

ANDING—Mrs. FRANCES E. ANDING was born in Franklin county, Miss., Nov. 6, 1841, and died at her home in Lincoln county, Miss., March 6, 1895.

She joined the Methodist Church when quite young, and from all we can learn lived a consistent, faithful member until her death. Living and dying in the community in which she was born, fulsome eulogies would add nothing to her character or to the high esteem in which she was held by all who knew her. As a faithful Christian, wife, mother and friend, she was universally esteemed.

She was twice married: first to James A. Smith, and then to D. W. Anding. She leaves a husband and twelve children to mourn her loss. Dying, as she had lived, in perfect faith in God, brings the comforting assurance to husband, children, church and friends that they, who live the life she lived will die the death she died, and when they, too, shall have crossed the river, will have another meeting more glorious than earth ever had, and as eternal as God himself. Her life was beautiful, her death was triumphant. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord!"

W. G. BACKUS, Pastor.

PHILLIPS—Little EDWIN L. PHILLIPS, Jr., son of Dr. E. L. and Kate Phillips, was born in Booneville, Miss., March 7, 1894, and died in New Port, Ark., June 19, 1895.

How our hearts are pained! how we are bereaved! Little Eddie was so bright and had so many winning ways. The only child in the family! Oh! how lonely father and mother feel now! But, thank God, they are not all alone, and they realize it to the joy and comfort of their troubled hearts. They are "leaning on Jesus," and we know he not only invites us thus to trust him; but he who has said, "Suffer the little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me," will not leave an aching void in the heart of one who is endeavoring to be submissive to his will.

May the Blessed Spirit dwell in the hearts of the precious children, and lead them finally to join their darling boy safe in the kingdom of eternal rest! GRANDPA.

GOOCHE—Miss IDA GOOCHE, daughter of W. D. and N. E. Gooche, was born in Indian Territory, July 9, 1822, and died near Abbeville, Vermilion parish, La., June 10, 1895.

Ida had been a great sufferer for some weeks. Having a strong constitution, her many friends expected that she would survive; but, worn out by intense suffering, her spirit took its flight on Sabbath evening to that country where Sabbaths have no end. She was conscious till the end. During her protracted illness she would often ask to hear some song of Zion. While the writer was singing, "Oh, how I love Jesus!" she sang with him till too weak to utter a word. Ida's self-denying spirit was manifest to all, and won for her many friends and associates. Her life on earth was short, but not unimportant. She spoke of the end, and requested to be buried by her brother. We pray for the bereaved ones. Her race was short, gentle, loving and bright; the end peace. So God took her.

J. J. KELLY, P. C.

Abbeville, La.

CHILDRESS—Entered into rest on the morning of June 5, 1895, Mrs. LULA KIRBY CHILDRESS, at her home in Satartia, Yazoo county, Miss., after a short, but severe, attack of illness, which she bore with Christian patience and fortitude, and "was so happy to die." She passed through the valley of death, with Christ as her shepherd. She had no fear or doubt, but her life ebbed out with a gentle sigh, as an infant falling asleep on its mother's breast. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." "She is not lost, but gone before." HER FOND SISTER.

DOOLITTLE—In memory of CARRIE DOOLITTLE, who died June 8, 1895:

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom and power, to take from our midst our young friend, Currie Doolittle; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, her teacher and Sabbath-school mates, do hereby tender our heartfelt sympathies to the bereaved parents.

Resolved, That while we deplore and feel her loss, we know 'tis her eternal gain to live up where the weary rest from pain.

may read. No woman, if she can read, can fail to know about Pearline. Then, if you're worn out with hard work or find your clothes going to pieces, you've only yourself to blame.

You'll have to choose your own way of washing. You can use soap and the washboard, and tire yourself out, and rub your clothes to tatters.

You can use so-called washing-powders, imitations of Pearline, and have easier work, though they're eating up the clothes. Or you can use Pearline, wash in the easiest way, and be absolutely certain that there isn't the slightest harm.

Send it Back

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 425 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., July, '96. A little later it will be August, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage preached at the Louisiana Chautauqua, in Ruston, on July 7. He lectured there on the eighth.

The Watts' Steel and Iron Syndicate, Middleboro, Ky., has voluntarily increased the wages of its employees ten per cent.

Five lives were lost in a cyclone at Baxter Springs, Kan., on July 5. A dozen others were injured and many buildings were destroyed.

Winona, Mo., was wiped out by a cloudburst on July 6. Houses were shattered, and in the water hundreds of women and children were dashed about like corks. Eleven persons lost their lives and many were injured.

Reports of storms come over a large territory and show the entire eastern watersheds of the Rocky Mountains, from the Nebraska and Iowa lines to Texas, were swept by a storm. Friday night the severest blow came. The reports of loss of life and destruction of property are great.

The Cleveland-Cincinnati Forge Company has announced a 10 per cent. advance in the wages of employees, to take effect at once. The increase was made voluntarily on account of the better condition of trade. About three hundred men are benefited.

In 1890 there were nearly 4,000,000 women and girls among the class called wage-earners in the United States. Their number has increased in ten years over 1,200,000, or more than 40 per cent. In the various branches of trade the increase in female employees was 263 per cent.

The Methodist ministers of Chicago have been memorializing the Pope, asking him to interfere in behalf of the religious liberty of Protestants in Peru, Ecuador and Bolivia. The Papal Secretary of State has replied, through Cardinal Gibbons, that the disabilities of Protestants in those countries is a matter of civil law, but that the subject will be inquired into.

Assistant Postmaster-General Neilson has telegraphed to Postmaster Daniels, of New Orleans, stating that the department was ready to locate sub-stations required for the new plan of distributing mail matter in the city, and was prepared to proceed with the installation of the system and the distribution of the mail to the stations by wagon service in lieu of the trolley lines, with which arrangements have not been perfected.

Mr. Bloomfield, one of the Police Commissioners, has resigned his position, on account of the non-enforcement of the Sunday law by the Board. The adoption by the Police Board of the city attorney's opinion as authority for setting aside and annulling the statute as to West End and other localities was the first break in the enforcement of the law, and it is not difficult to see that its prohibitions must finally be wholly withdrawn.

The missionaries in China are greatly praised for the hospital work they freely did during the late war. In Tien Tsin they opened and conducted a hospital at their own expense and saved many lives.

Costa Rica has given the Panama Canal management a dig by advertising for common laborers at $1 75 a day. This will compel the canal company to either stop work or pay more than $1 a day for labor.

A severe engagement has taken place in Cuba between the Spanish troops, under the command of Col. Aznar, and Gen. Antonio Maceo, the insurgent commander, at the head of a large force. Two hundred and eighty of the latter were killed.

It is said the Pope has promulgated a decree absolving poor people and working people from the observance of all days of abstinence in the year except Fridays, even during Lent. A rumor that such a decree was in existence has been in circulation for some time.

The Japs have been figuring up their losses during the war, and find that it has not been a very fatal war to them. There were but 623 killed in battle, and 172 died of wounds received. The wounded altogether numbered 2 981; cholera killed 2,489, and other diseases took 2 981.

Notwithstanding the immense sums of money squandered on the Panama Canal, the French promoters of the enterprise have not abandoned the effort to carry the work to a successful conclusion, and operations are being pushed with more or less vigor. In fact, it is pretty certain that, sooner or later, the Panama Canal will be completed if the work is at all feasible, and it is believed to be.

Randolph-Macon Woman's College.

MR. EDITOR: Please let me say to your readers that I have resigned the office of Secretary of Education, because the Board of Trustees of Randolph-Macon System of Colleges and Academies deems it important that I shall continue to supervise the new institutions established, and proposed to be established, by them, and because it seems to me also best for the cause of Christian education that we should press to completion our Virginia system of correlated Conference schools as a concrete example of what is in the mind of the Board of Education. The work of organizing and systematizing Methodist education in our other Conferences can be done as well by another, while I have been so closely connected with the work here since its inception as necessarily to have special advantages as the agent of the Randolph-Macon Board.

I shall for the coming year continue to reside at the new Randolph-Macon Woman's College at Lynchburg, Va., to the development of which my personal attention as president will be given, and I shall be glad to gather here the daughters of our people who have the preparation and the ambition to take a college course equal to that given in our best Virginia colleges for men. We ought to have a Vassar in the South where the highest literary culture and scholarship may be had under environments in harmony with Southern ideals of womanhood. I shall do all I can to create such an institution here, and in so doing feel that I am serving our entire church. We have begun well; have secured $102,000 endowment and more than $100,000 in buildings free from debt; all this from one small city. This is but the beginning. Have we not enough rich women in our church, not to speak of our chivalrous men, to make the endowment of this college for their sex a round million?

I pause for a subscription.

Yours for Christian education,

W. W. SMITH.

Just What's Needed

Exclaims thousands of people who have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla at this season of the year, and who have noted the success of the medicine in giving them relief from that tired feeling, waning appetite and state of extreme exhaustion after the close confinement of a long Winter season, the busy time attendant upon a large and pressing business during the Spring months and with vacation time yet some weeks distant. It is then that the building-up powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are fully appreciated. It seems perfectly adapted to overcome that prostration caused by change of season, climate or life, and while it tones and sustains the system, it purifies and vitalizes the blood.

The commencement sermon at Washington and Lee University, Lexington, Va., was preached on Sunday morning, June 16, by the Rev. John Mathews, D. D., pastor of the Centenary Methodist Church, St. Louis. Reports say that the Doctor's auditors were highly delighted with his sermon, which was full of good points. Sunday evening, Rev. R. H. McKim, D. D., rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Washington, D. C., delivered a masterly address to the Y. M. C. A. on the "Literary Uniqueness of the Bible." The 113th year of this institution witnessed an increase in the number of students, representing 21 States and the Capital District.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Sam Jones Camp Meeting will open on the second day of August, 1895. The camp ground is located on the L., N. O. and T. R. R., two miles north of Gloster. Trains will stop at the camp ground to take on and put off passengers.

The meeting will continue ten days. Gate fee, 25 cents per capita for season tickets, except on Sundays, when the gates will be thrown open to all free of charge. Board and lodging can be had for $1 per day, or 35 cents for single meals.

Ministers of the gospel are cordially invited to attend.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, it requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE MIRACULOUS DRAUGHT OF FISHES.

(Luke v, 1-11.)

Accommodating ourselves to the ever-changing circumstances is part of wisdom. Discovering a fishing-smack convenient for a pulpit, Christ entered it at once. When the pulpit of the parish church was refused to John Wesley, he spoke to the spiritually famishing while standing on the tombstone of his sainted father.

1. Simon Peter's statement, "We have toiled all night and caught nothing," furnishes much food for thought.

(1) In vain men fish for satisfaction in the night of worldliness. God breathed into the nostrils of Adam the breath of life, and thus he became a living soul. Material can not satisfy the spiritual. Wealth, honor and pleasures can not fill the soul's aching void.

(2) In vain men fish for happiness in the night of mere morality. Men should be moral; but morality makes us not children of God. Many moral people in hell.

(3) In vain men fish for repose of mind in the night of orthodoxy. Yes, we must be orthodox; but orthodoxy alone will not secure for us eternal life. Said once a preacher of fossil orthodoxy, but who had the unfortunate habit of re-echoing the last syllable in each paragraph—said he: "We, dear brethren, we only are true Christians, genuinely orthodox—ox." Some said, "Amen."

(4) In vain men fish for peace of soul in the night of unbelief. Natural religion does not satisfy. The religious systems of paganism are the outcome of imagination. Rightly says Schiller: "As the ivy requires stone wall or tree for satisfactory development, so the soul clings to the unseen and unheard."

2. Complying with the Master's command, Simon caught a multitude of fishes.

(1) Christ assures that he has not come to abrogate, but to fulfill the law. "If you know these things, happy are you if you do them."

(2) Christ teaches that love to him without implicit obedience is founded in hallucination. "If you love me, keep my commandments."

(3) If we carry out his behests, repenting of our sins and seeking conversion, we will not fail in finding the pearl of great price. "Him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out."

"For if I die with mercy sought,
When I the King have tried,
That were a death, delightful thought,
As sinner never died."

3. The manifest miracle of comprehending so many fishes led Simon Peter and associates to leave their nets and follow Christ.

(1) Conversion of human souls is a perpetual miracle.

(2) This perpetual miracle perpetuates the Christian Church.

(3) Have you been converted? Are you assisting in bringing others to Christ for conversion?

A Chance to Make Money!

I have made $1 640 clear money in 87 days and attended to my household duties besides, and I think this is doing splendid for a woman inexperienced in business. Anyone can sell what everyone wants to buy, and every family wants a Dish Washer. I don't canvass at all; people come or send for the Washers, and every Washer that goes out sells two or three more, as they do the work to perfection. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I am going to devote my whole time to this business now, and I am sure I can clear $5 000 this year. My sister and brother have started in the business, and are doing splendid. You can get complete instructions and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and if you don't make lots of money, it's your own fault.

MRS. W. H.

There was nothing of the stoic about Jesus. He did not take things indifferently. He was not ashamed to weep. He was touched with the feeling of our infirmities. When men were hungry he could not lose sight of it. When the funeral procession from Nain came his way he could not pass by on the other side. And yet there are followers of Christ to-day who tell us that much exhibition of compassion is a sign of weakness.

LET ME LEAN HARD.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Let me lean hard upon the eternal breast!
In all earth's devious ways I sought for rest,
And found it not. I will be strong, said I,
And lean upon myself. I will not cry,
And importune all heaven with my complaint;
But now my strength fails, and I fail, I faint;
Let me lean hard.

Let me lean hard upon the unfailing arm!
I said I will walk on, I fear no harm;
The spark divine within my soul will show
The upward pathway where my feet shall go.
But now the heights in which I must aspire
Are lost in clouds; I stumble and I tire.
Let me lean hard.

Let me lean harder yet. That swerveless force
Which speeds the solar systems on their course
Can take, unfelt, the burden of my woe,
Which bears me in the dust and hurts me so.
I thought my strength enough for any fate,
But, lo! I sink beneath my sorrow's weight;
Let me lean hard.

Correspondence.

Letter from England.

There have never been such immense and enthusiastic meetings held in the interest of the temperance reform in Great Britain as those which have taken place in London during the past week. Sabbath afternoon, June 16, a large audience greeted Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset in the City Temple, better known as the church of Dr. Joseph Parker. The British Woman's Temperance Association was in session the two following days. It was a representative gathering of over 600 delegates from England, Scotland, and Wales. The most striking episode that occurred was the encounter between Miss Florence Balgarnie, a young English woman who has espoused the cause of the negro, and Lady Henry Somerset and Miss Willard. Miss Balgarnie is a close friend of Ida B. Wells, who has represented Miss Willard and Lady Henry throughout England as being in favor of lynching. Speeches on all sides were made, declaring their positions; the greatest fairness and coolness was manifested on the part of the two leaders of the W. C. T. U. hosts; statements of Ida Wells were proven to be utterly false; Miss Balgarnie was vanquished, and the attitude of friendliness to the negro race established on the part of Miss Willard and Lady Henry Somerset. There was no room for the Southern delegates to attempt an explanation of the situation in the South, as the question involved was not the negro, the South, and lynching, but whether Miss Willard and Lady Henry favored lynching. The English mind is in full sympathy with the negro. No applause is so tumultuous as that given to colored women when they appear upon the platform. Amanda Smith, well known in America, has been splendidly feted in her travels through Great Britain.

On Wednesday, Miss Willard opened the World's Convention of the W. C. T. U. in Queen's Hall, with 234 delegates present, representing 24 nations, and numbers of fraternal delegates from kindred societies. That night addresses were delivered by leading speakers to thousands of sympathetic listeners. A short morning conference the following day closed the business proceedings of the third biennial convention of the best organized and largest body of women on earth. The demonstration at Royal Albert is described by The Echo, a great London daily, as follows:

Ten thousand people crowded into the great hall, filling even the topmost galleries, and the secretaries stated they had refused tickets of admission to tens of thousands more. The audience was world-wide in fact as well as name, while amongst the newspaper representatives were a smart American girl reporter from Chicago and a special correspondent of a Finnish paper. All around the hall, fastened to the front of the balconies and galleries, were the long, linen-backed strips of the Polyglot Petition, representing seven million persons, including the members of societies that voted for it en masse, and weighing 1 730 pounds. A choir of 800 voices, the ladies clad in blue bodices, and a large band of instrumentalists provided the music; and 100 stewards showed people to their places. The Albert Hall is too big for any orator to make himself heard all over it for more than a few minutes, and a speech had to be assisted by a display, and all the programme and songs were cast by a limelight stern on a great white screen above the platform.

The meeting opened with a procession of delegates from various temperance societies who had come to welcome the W. W. C. T. U. Among the bodies represented were those of postmen, soldiers, sailors, police, and railway men, and, as all came in uniform, the effect was picturesque. Then followed a second procession of some hundreds of young women dressed in character to resemble the people of every land in which the world's women have planted their flag. Thirty countries were represented, and for a little time the central aisle bore more resemblance to one of Mr. Kiralfy's shows at Olympia than to a semi-religious function. The designers of the dresses had gone in for light colors, and perhaps they studied artistic effect a little more than exact accuracy in the details of the costumes. The Finnish journalist muttered good-humoredly that he had never seen in his land such attire as was there made to represent it. Later in the evening a third and quite different spectacle was shown. The front of the platform was cleared, and a number of slum children brought on by the sisters of the Wesleyan West-end Mission. The poor little things, with tow-like hair, ragged, sombre, greasy clothes, long, sad, pallid faces, could not quite understand their part in the performance. They stared at the light and color with their big, pathetic eyes, the little ragged babies whom the girls were nursing cuddled closer to their grown-up sisters, and one or two of the laddies seemed ready to cry or run away through sheer stage fright. They sang a melancholy little ditty showing the horrors of intemperance on the children. Then the central doors were thrown back, and a procession of white-ribbon children, clad in clean, white dresses, with beaming, smiling faces, many with flowers in their breasts, and all helping to bear aloft long strips of white ribbon, marched down the hall singing a lively song on the benefits of teetotalism. They marched up to the platform, surrounded the slum children with their bands of white ribbon, and proclaimed the future triumph of their cause over poverty. It was undoubtedly effective, and produced a deep impression on the audience, but it seemed rather hard on the slum children that they should be made to exhibit their misery to make a West-end holiday. One could only hope that they got a good meal and sixpence each to compensate them for it.

There was a long list of prominent speakers, all of whom had of necessity to be very brief. Lady Henry Somerset welcomed the delegates, and Miss Willard, in a cheery address, thanked England for the reception it had given them.

It surpassed anything that our American eyes ever rested upon, and they are accustomed to huge affairs in the young republic. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress graciously received the foreign delegates at the Mansion House during our busy days in the great metropolis, and Lady Henry Somerset arranged a delightful excursion to one of her country residences—the Priory, at Reigate. Two carloads of women from every clime on earth was rapidly carried from the heat and dust of London through the sweet fields of wheat and crimson poppies, past neat little towns, to the historic old building that "her ladyship" has just had refitted most elegantly for the series of entertainments soon to be given in honor of the coming of age of her only son. The afternoon was spent in wandering over the beautiful grounds listening to music of a band furnished for the occasion, and enjoying the study of the antique furnishings of the old building, in which we found rare paintings and tapestry, coats of mail, and innumerable other relics.

A farewell meeting at Exeter Hall, Sunday afternoon, was the last public gathering. Miss Willard presided in her gracious fashion. Speeches were made as usual. Lady Henry spoke warm words of love and hope, and many hearts were cheered and strengthened for the work that lies in the future.

We have had the pleasure of listening to greetings from Canon Wilberforce, Sir Wilfred Lawson, Mr. McLaren, and Mr. Wilson, M. P.'s, the great champions of the temperance and woman's cause in Parliament; Sir Benj. Ward Richardson, and other men who have grown famous for their knowledge and nobility.

Sunday night, after the meeting in Exeter Hall, there was a service held in Westminster Abbey especially for the world's delegates, when Canon Wilberforce gave a splendid address.

While in London, I was the guest of Hannah Whitall Smith; with Mrs. Margaret Bottome, president of the International Order of King's Daughters; Frau Kamer and Frau Guzyski, two elegant ladies from Germany; Miss Alli Trigg, of Finland, and Madame Selms, of Denmark.

The home of the great Quakeress is the headquarters of intellectual freedom in London. Everything is beautifully attuned in the household, and moves in perfect harmony. Even the meals are announced by an exquisite chime of bells hidden away in some mysterious nook.

Monday morning our party leaves for Switzerland, where we shall remain several days attending the European Chautauqua at Grindelwald. I will write you from there.

Sunday-School Literature and Bibles Given Away.

"This free literature, these cheap and sometimes free Bibles, are certainly not known, or, if known, are not appreciated." So writes Rev. J. Wilson Brown, president of our Mississippi Conference Sunday-school Board.

City Pastor: Could you organize a new and useful Sunday-school in a needy district, if you had the literature? Then write to Rev. J. W. Brown, Woodville, Miss., and explain your case.

Superintendent: Is your school suffering for lack of Bible and other literature? If you are not able to get them by yourself, the Sunday-school Board will come to your rescue. Get your pastor to sign your petition and send it to Bro. Brown.

Circuit Rider: Have you not observed that in you benighted neighborhood near which you pass there is an earnest, Christian young man, who would run a Sunday-school there, if you would put the lesson literature into his hands? The Children's Day fund is under control of the Sunday-school Board mainly to encourage just such work as that. Make your application to Rev. J. Wilson Brown, Woodville, Miss.

And Brother Preacher: If the Children's Day collection is still in your hands, send it at once to Mr. Jno. A. Guice, Natchez, Miss. He is the treasurer of the Board, and the bills for these needy schools are sent to him by Bro. Brown for payment. If not turned over to you yet, get it from the superintendent. And it is not too late yet for Children's Day to be held, if thus far neglected.

HENRY G. HAWKINS,
Sec. of Miss. Conf. Sunday-school Board.
By order of the Executive Committee.

Dr. Sawyer's Interpretation of Paragraph 120.

The reason assigned by Dr. Sawyer for the enactment of paragraph 120 by the late General Conference, as stated by him, is, no doubt, correct. It was intended to give to pastors the right to control their pulpits. In the exercise of this right they may close their churches against traveling evangelists, or anyone else, even though the trustees and membership be willing and anxious to admit them. But if this paragraph confers on pastors the right to close their churches against evangelists, the right to open them is also manifestly contained in the statute, which right they may exercise at all times when the presiding elder or Bishop is not present. If, as Dr. Sawyer contends, the presiding elder is always present at all the churches in his district, and that, being present, he may control them by opening and closing them at will without consulting the pastors, when are they to exercise the rights supposed to be contained in paragraph 120? Not at all, unless the presiding elder happens to stray out of his diocese.

"The Wheel."

MR. EDITOR: Rev. J. H. Nichols is a tractarian in a literal sense. He writes tracts which are useful, and so writes them as to make them popular—the people read them. We are in a paragraphic age. People are too busy to read big books or long newspaper communications—unless in the form of love stories. Nichols does not write love stories, but he writes strong, wholesome paragraphs, which are "good to edifying."

While he has written eight or ten very useful tracts, none are more to the point than "The Wheel." He puts our Methodist polity on it, and rolls it right out from the "apostolic college."

If any of your people are unsettled on our form of government, put "The Wheel" into their hands, and they will soon roll around on the Methodist track and declare they have found "the way the holy prophets went." Read "The Wheel." Respectfully,

J. A. PARKER.

Corinth District Conference.

Our District Conference met in Corinth, Miss., July 4, at nine o'clock. Rev. H. R. Tucker, P. E., presided. The Conference was interesting and eminently spiritual. Our presiding elder pulled out of the ruts, prepared an excellent programme, adhered to the disciplinary plan as to the duties of a District Conference, insisted that the preachers and laymen should prepare themselves with good speeches upon subjects assigned them, held a perfect rein over the body, and gave "prominence to religious service." Preachers were on fire and happy in their work. The Conference was pronounced the best ever held in the Corinth district. The reports showed real advancement and development in a hard field.

Connectional men were scarce. Dr. W. B. Murrah and Rev. J. W. Malone were with us a short while pleading for our boys and girls.

Randolph A. Tucker, son of Rev. H. R. Tucker, was licensed to preach. J. N. Butler was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. W. R. Ramsey, L. A. McKeown, G. W. Bynum and T. S. Green were chosen delegates to the Annual Conference; Jno. B. Sanders and H. A. Dean, alternates.

The following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the foreign missionary collection should be distinctive, and stand on its own merit.

Whereas, The use of tobacco is a needless self-indulgence, many parents object to their children forming the habit of using it, and preachers are examples to the people; therefore, be it

Resolved, That it is the sense of this body that our preachers, traveling and local, should abstain from the use of tobacco in all of its forms.

A memorial will go from the District Conference to the Annual Conference asking for the restoration of Sunday-school superintendents to membership in District Conference.

Corinth gave us an extravagant hospitality. We go to Ripley next year.

Some Points of Methodist Doctrine.

I get the idea from my old books that there are three departments of the human mind, or soul—the intellect, the sensibilities, and the will. Mr. Wesley calls these "the understanding, the affections or passions, and the will." He says, "The will must be free;" that "without these, specially without free choice, man would be as incapable of virtue or vice as a piece of earth or marble." The sublime truths of the gospel are presented to the intellect in the Word of God and by the Holy Ghost. The mind, the understanding, lays hold of these truths and comprehends them. They are perceived to be great and important truths. The sensibilities are affected by them. Oftentimes, and in many individuals, a clear perception of these truths produces admiration, joy, even great joy, that swells to shouting and praise. Those who are thus affected, who have this experience, profess religion, say they are converted, and their friends believe they are converted, and speak of it as "a bright conversion." They have had an experience—an experience that looks like religion, sounds like religion; one that would be taken for religion in almost any assembly of Christians. It is a sound and a good experience as far as it goes, but it does not go far enough. It is not religion. Thus far it is intellectual and emotional. It is preliminary and preparatory to religion. Many persons—thousands—mistake this for a religious experience, and stop right here. They spend the remainder of their days striving for a revival, for this excitation of the intellectual and emotional nature. If they can be stirred in this way annually, or oftener, they count themselves in grace and growing in grace. They must be stirred to the shouting-point to know that they still have the religion they got a year, or ten years, ago. All such persons are still in "the gall of bitterness and in the bonds of iniquity." They have not been born again; have not believed with "the heart unto righteousness." All such stand in need of a "second blessing," and they ought to seek it—the blessing of a religion that goes deeper than the intellect and the sensibilities, and reaches the will, changing the whole current of the life, and fixing the heart on God. Mark it: a religion that does not reach and change and control the human will falls short of the religion of Christ. The other kind is intellectual and emotional, but it is not moral and spiritual. It is a religion of the head and of the feelings, but it does not reach the heart and control the life.

As religion becomes popular and fashionable, the number of intellectual and emotional Christians will be apt to increase; and the proportion of those who have a name to live, and yet are dead in sin, will grow larger. It is a sad mistake to call these intellectual and emotional members of the church "regenerated," or, by way of sneer, "old regenerates," for they are not regenerates at all. They have never reached that stage of a religious experience, have not been born again, are not sons of God, and know nothing of vital godliness. My observation has been that thousands of persons in this state—servants, and not sons—are waked up, and are led to seek religion, real religion; and when regenerated, born again—when they get real religion—they profess sanctification. They mistake the new birth for a "second blessing"—the first blessing for the "second." I want to say again, and I would like to say it with the emphasis of thunder, that any religion that does not include self-surrender and loving obedience to the will of God is short of the Bible standard.

"By their fruits ye shall know them." "He that loveth me keepeth my commandments." "He that is born of God doth not commit sin." All who are regenerated into Jesus Christ—the only way under heaven to get into him—are dead and buried to sin, and should not live any longer therein. All this belongs to the regenerate state. It is the natural and necessary result of the new-born life of God in the soul.

As I read my old books and the Word of God, it is a mistake and blunder to hold and teach, or to intimate, that the gift of the Spirit is the special privilege of those who have been sanctified wholly. The Holy Ghost is the administrator of the economy of redemption from the beginning to the end. He comes as a prevenient gift to the human race. He convicts of sin, works godly sorrow in the heart, enables us to believe, regenerates, testifies to sonship, guides and sanctifies throughout—soul, body, and spirit. He is as much the Spirit of conviction, repentance, faith and regeneration as he is of sanctification. The whole process of salvation, from incipient grace to the highest possible Christian perfection, is a process of sanctification by one and the same Spirit. It is not creditable to the Holy Ghost to speak of one of these steps in grace as superior to another. Each is essential to the whole; each is indispensable to a fully rounded Christian character. It is not right to magnify regeneration by comparison with repentance, nor to magnify sanctification by comparing it with regeneration—belittling the one to magnify the other. Each of these stages in the process of personal salvation from sin is just as distinct, as peculiar in itself, as if no one of the others existed; and yet the purpose of the Holy Ghost is the same in each and all of them—salvation from all sin.

It is a mistake to suppose the Holy Ghost is given to, and received by, none but the wholly sanctified. This blunder has grown out of one little word in one single verse of Scripture. It is the word "since" in Acts xix, 2: "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" Every standard Methodist author, and every commentary I have had access to, and every new version I know of, tell us that the word "since" ought not to be there. I have yet to hear an advocate of the "second-blessing" theory of sanctification, or to read after one, who does not make the truth of this theory hinge on that word "since." It is a "second blessing," "since" it comes after believing. Now, Mr. Wesley, Watson, Benson, Clark, Fletcher, Wilbur Fisk, Wheedon, Pope, Summers, Tigert, all of them, without a single exception, say: "Did ye receive the Holy Ghost when ye believed?" or, "Believing, received ye the Holy Ghost?" The present interpretation of that passage by those who advocate the "second blessing" is contrary to the uniform and unbroken teaching of the Methodist Church from the first. This view is contrary to the plain face of the text if read in the light of the context.

Finally: Conviction, repentance, faith, regeneration, are all parts, indispensable parts, of a process that has for its end the full, complete and entire salvation of the individual from all sin. All these are wrought in us by the Holy Ghost, that we may be perfect, entire, wanting nothing. No step in the process can be omitted or skipped over. This is God's divine method of saving a soul from sin.

GILDEROY.

In the Living Present.

The Supreme Court of Lyons, France, has declared that postoffice officials must deliver missives to minors only in the presence of their parents or guardians. It is well. In our country conscienceless publishers and unscrupulous agents secure the addresses of minors and debauch their imagination with their catalogues of nefarious publications and plans.

The French Assembly enacted a law, President Faure approving, which abolishes the government tax on the manufacture of vinous liquors containing less than fifteen per cent. alcohol. Thus ale, beer and most wine are exempt from tax. The tariff and manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, such as absinthe, brandy, whisky, etc., has been largely increased. Are reminded of Bishop Kavanaugh's anecdote of cutting off a vicious dog's tail by inches. It had to be cut off close behind the ears.

American-born women instinctively object to domestic service as a livelihood. Prefer typewriting, clerking, working at factory, etc. Thus our housewives have to be content with pipe-smoking Aunt Susy. Are not housewives in part to blame for this misery? While servants rightly refuse to be treated as dirty negroes.

The Armenian question is largely political. Certainly the Turkish soldiery proceeded brutally, but the difficulty had been begotten by Armenian agitators. The Armenians claim to be Christians. Well, a Christian is a person who is like Christ. But Christ was loyally obedient to the secular government. In the present campaign attending the general election to Parliament of Great Britain the Armenian question occupies a prominent part. The Conservative party represent the view above expressed. Gladstone and associate radicals favor the agitators.

In Spirit Lake, Iowa, two female bicyclists, attired as bloomers, were refused admittance to the dining hall of a prominent hotel of that place. Now, the irate bloomers have sued the proprietor of that hotel for damages. Glad of it. We shall now have a judicial decision as to the proper attire of the sexes.

At the Kremlin of Moscow twenty crowns of defunct royal dynasties are preserved. The last one added was the iron crown of the Kings of Poland. Russia is an aggregation of subjugated nationalities. Seventy-two different languages are spoken in the vast empire. No wonder that tyranny, nihilism, official corruption, etc., attend the process of amalgamation.

In Paris, France, an Ecumenical Congress on prisons is now in session. It is held that confinement with other and, perhaps, worse criminals, conforms the convict in his evil course. The habitually criminal should be kept separate from the accidental culprit. The youthful convict should not be confined together with aged transgressors, etc.

ICH DIEM.

THE HUMBLE WORKER.

I have no gift of eloquence
To preach, exhort, or pray—
I can not point with glowing words
To Christ, the living Way;
But I can tell how wondrous dear
My Jesus is to me,
And let his light so clearly shine
That all around may see.

I can not cast the fishers' net
Into life's deep, dark sea;
The wisdom for that heavy task
Was never given to me;
But I can kneel upon the shore
And pray for those who toil,
And when the boats come slowly in,
Help gather up the spoil.

The Master sees the lowest work
Of all his children true,
And in the crowning day will give
To each his honest due;
And when the sheaves are gathered in
From fields that I have sown,
I then shall take from his own hand
The palm, the robe, the crown.

Some Points of Methodist Doctrine.

REPLY TO BRO. ENOCHS.

The article by Bro. K. S. Enochs calls for a reply.

I am surprised that anyone should call in question the fact that "the present state of man is a gracious state," and that human nature is what it is, no worse than it is, by virtue of the relation of the whole human race to Jesus Christ. "As by the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men to justification of life." If this is not a gracious state for the whole human race, I confess I do not know the meaning of words. See Mr. Wesley's Notes and all Arminian writers on this passage, from James Arminius down to this day. Read Mr. Wesley's sermon on "God's Love to Fallen Man." Indeed, all our books teach that but for the "general and unconditional release of the human race from the guilt and condemnation of original sin, Adam would not have been permitted to propagate his species." Birth into the world, as we are, comes by Jesus Christ. "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not; for of such is the kingdom of God." Surely Bro. Enochs would allow this to be a gracious state. It is not fair to quote in opposition to this what Mr. Wesley and others say of the state and condition of adult, wicked sinners.

Original sin, as Methodists speak of it, is a pardoned sin of which no human being is guilty, and for which no one is liable to punishment, until by his own choice he makes his original sin his own sin. Arminius says: "Original sin will condemn no man." Wilbur Fisk says: "Guilt is not imputed until, by a voluntary rejection of the gospel, man makes the depravity of his nature the object of his own choice." See Fisk on Rom. v, 18. Read "Wesley Memorial Volume," Art. "Methodist Doctrine," by W. B. Pope, pages 177, 178. I could fill several issues of the ADVOCATE with quotations on this subject. "Gilderoy" is not so badly in error on this point as Bro. Enochs seems to think. Bro. Enochs will understand Methodist theology better when he gets to be older. The older men, on whom he waited, did not correct "Gilderoy's" errors because they know a thing or two on this subject.

Bro. Enochs does not understand how such depravity, depravation or deprivation of nature as is born in us, and is in us after we are regenerated, can be said to be in us after we are wholly sanctified. Well, for one thing, men and women are men and women after they are sanctified just as they were before. They are not angels, nor are they like Adam before he fell. If they generate children after they are sanctified, they generate in them the same natural corruption, or depravity, as before they were sanctified. This is plain common sense, confirmed by experience and observation, taught in the Word of God and in all our books of theology. Mr. Wesley says: "The Son of God does not destroy the whole work of the devil in man, as long as he remains in this life." "The highest perfection which a man can attain, while the soul dwells in the body, does not exclude ignorance, and error, and a thousand other infirmities." "Therefore every man living needs the blood of the atonement, or he could not stand before God." Now, I could cite passages like these from every book of theology known to the Methodist catalogue of standards. So every day the holiest men and women need to pray for the forgiveness of sin. Mr. Pope says: "We never cease to be sinners among sinful men while we live." This is Scripture and this is Methodism.

If original sin is not my sin till I make it my sin by my own choice, then the sin of original sin is in my own volition. Not in the fact that I was born with it, but in this, that I elect to follow it—to be for self and not for God. If God justifies me, or forgives my sins, for Christ's sake, then, surely, he forgives the sin of original sin along with the sin of all other sins. To forgive me and to accept me as a son, and still leave me in condemnation and liable to hell, is not after the order of our God. Mr. Wesley says: "There is, therefore, no condemnation now to them which believe in Christ Jesus." "All his people, all that believe in him, he will save from all their sins; from original and actual, past and present sin, of the flesh and of the spirit." (Sermon on "Salvation by Faith.") Surely when God forgives, he forgives freely and fully. Can any sane man believe that he is to blame for anything he could not by any possibility help? Am I to blame for what was begotten in me by my parents? I never said that I was to blame, nor did Mr. Wesley, Mr. Fletcher or any other Arminian or Methodist writer in the past.

Bro. Enochs needs to straighten himself out of his own muddle before he attempts to correct the errors of "Gilderoy." Adam's sin was forgiven to him more than six thousand years ago, and the race comes into existence in a state of "initial justification," as taught by Mr. Fletcher, a state of grace and favor with God. So when I am asked to come up to the altar, as a penitent seeking forgiveness for my part of original sin, I do not go. "Christ made a propitiation and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world, both original and actual," and when I accept him I am set free from sin, the guilt, the condemnation and the power of it. I am a free-born son of God.

The old authors did not hold or teach the "second-blessing theory" of sanctification as it is held and taught by many, perhaps a majority, of the "second-blessing" people of this day and time. They could not have done so, because they did not hold or teach their view of the personal participation of each individual of the race in Adam's sin.

If Bro. Enochs wants to "own up like a man, and to assert his right to opinions of his own," regardless of the great men of the past, he is at liberty to do so. For my own part, I have great respect for the opinions of Wesley, Watson, Clark, Fletcher and an host of others who wrought in the mine of theology long before I was born. Fact is, I prefer many of the old views of the old men to the new views of the young men.

I made no point in my article for which I am not ready, at a moment's notice, to give good Methodist authority. I got all that ready before I wrote a line. I am a Methodistic Armenian throughout. I hold myself ready to answer by the books of theology and by the Word of God.

If any more is needed, let me know.

GILDEROY.

"Gilderoy" Reviewed.

"Gilderoy" says, "Regeneration does not change the constitutional elements of man's nature." Then there is room and great need for a "second work" that does. He forgets that "original sin" is the very fibre of man's constitutional nature; that it is "the sin of the world," common to every "nation, people, and tongue;" alike in men, women, and children; the same in believers and unbelievers. "Original sin" is the "root" of all sin, the source of all that defiles a man. As the cutting off of the "natural" branches from the olive tree, in the scheme of redemption, left the "root and fatness" for those about to be grafted in, so the cutting away of "actual sins" does not affect the "root" of sin. Cutting off all "acts of sin" would only be cleaning the outside of the platter; would not touch the "within." This is provided for in the plan of salvation, and is commendable; but it is not God's highest thought for us. It is effected by a process of repentance from dead works, and must continue as long as the heart—the "within"—is full of all uncleanness—i. e., original sin. "Thou unwise one, clean first that which is 'within'—i. e., the heart—and the 'without'—i. e., acts—will be clean by a law as unvarying as the law of gravitation—i. e., the law of being." What we are—our "sinfulness"—rather than what we do—acts resulting therefrom—is the prime object of redemption. The one is "character," the other a result. Service, "being," is more than doing. "Be ye holy, for I am holy." In heaven we will be but a stereotyped edition of what we are here. At this "state," or "being of sin," all the force of the gospel is directed. Inward moral purity—i. e., sanctification of heart and life—is the most powerful argument for the divinity of Christ and religion, for if Christ can not save from "all sin," he can not save from any "sin," and "the gospel is not the power (almightiness) of God unto salvation." The "pruning-knife" can not reach the evil. "Sin" is the infusion of positive moral evil, and no mere negative process will ever eradicate it. Nothing short of "heart purity"—i. e., the infusion of positive moral good—will remedy the trouble. It takes both in the most literal sense—a negative freeing from sin and a positive filling with good—God. If sin reaches the whole man—the personality, in loco—grace must sanctify body, soul, and spirit, to effect a cure. Men are not saved in sin from hell, but "from sin" for heaven. The law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus makes us free from the law of "sin" and death, . . . that the righteousness of the law (not that wrought by the law, but that demanded by the law) might be fulfilled in us (not for us, and imputed to us, but in us) personally. Here we are negatively freed from "sin," and positively "filled full" of Love—i. e., "Christ in us"—which is the fulfilling of the law, "for as he is, so are we in this world," and greater is "he" that is in us (Christ) than he (the devil) that is in the "world." The "house no longer divided against itself." The difference is, the "devil"—"sin"—is "cast out," and Christ dwells "within."

"Gilderoy" continues speaking of this same regenerated person. "This new-born man is not to blame for what was begotten in him—i. e., original sin—by his father according to the flesh, for that which is born of the flesh is flesh." Neither would I be to "blame" for my father leaving me a gold watch, but I would be to blame for wearing it, for God's Word positively forbids it; and the plea that which my father left me, he left me, would in no sense justify me in disobeying God. The same might be said of the "tobacco habit," "whisky habit," opium, etc., and every other tendency. My father left in me a predisposition to these; therefore, I will indulge them.

He continues: "I do not think he (the new-born man) is any more offensive to God now than when an infant in his mother's arms," as there "is no more original sin in him now than then." The case is parallel only in that both are free from "actual sins." When it comes to "original sin," the analogy fails. What is true of the "adult" can not be said of the infant, though both have "original sin." The infant is in no sense to "blame" for it; the new-born man is. There is "intelligence" and responsibility in the one case; there is neither in the other. The "new-born man" knows that he has "original sin," and the sounder his "regeneration," the better he knows it. He may seek to "hide it," but the light of justification reveals it. His hungerings and thirstings are all after righteousness—i. e., freedom from inbred sin.

With "original sin" the "second crisis" has to do. It consists in an "inward cleansing" from "all sin," and an infilling of the Spirit in our spirit. Then we are righteous, even as he is righteous.

Thus "the blood" cleanses from all sin to the glory of God the Father through Jesus Christ.

How Do We Educate?

For the past month we have had the opportunity of looking upon one of the Mississippi Summer Normals. On the morning of June 6 there assembled more than one hundred teachers in the chapels of East Mississippi Female College to spend a season in studying texts, specials, and methods in particular. Before the end of the four-weeks' term the attendance had reached about two hundred and fifty. The faculty had been well selected, and each one of the eight had his or her branch well in hand. To those who have given much time and thought to teaching, I could not see any special advantage; but to the many young teachers (and the majority were young women) I could see much that would prove helpful as they go out to take their places in the untried school-room. Again, I have no doubt that while the experienced may have found nothing new as to texts or methods, all were benefited by inspiration for better work in the future. If nothing more should come from these gatherings, this meeting together and exchanging of ideas among those of like calling, this manifest sympathy for, and interest in, each other fully justifies their perpetuation, and the selecting of first-class talent to conduct.

This is a day of specialists and teachers; a day of new methods. And how different to the days when even this scribe attended the old field school! These "new methods" have done much to lighten the labor of the child in grasping the ideas of the text-books, and in fixing these ideas and principles in the mind. Our fathers rode in ox wagons; shall we, therefore, discard the palace car, with all of its comforts and rapid transit? Shall we continue to use the old tallow candle in this day of gas and electricity?

But would we not do well to pause and examine our intensive methods and rapid progress? May they not result in a superficial smattering rather than the establishing of a substantial foundation upon which to build a real education? Are we pushing too rapidly, or are we satisfying ourselves with too little?

While very noticeable and wise changes have been made in the curricula of some of our colleges, I am glad to note that the old four-years' course of languages, mathematics and sciences continue to constitute that which leads to the A. B. degree.

It is well that our institutions for young ladies have also extended their courses of instruction. Why not educate the sister up to the standard of the brother? Why put her at a discount in the home? Since the opening of our universities to the young women, they have abundantly proven their ability to wrestle with the great problems of mathematics and science as successfully as their brothers. One of the first in a large class in higher mathematics at our State University during the past session was a graduate of East Mississippi Female College in the class of 1894. Why should it not be so?

If we would succeed in bringing our girls up to this higher standard, we must break down that hurtful error which has held sway so long in our Southland: that long dresses and the school-room are incompatible; that the chances for matrimony are lessened thereby; that the girl will be doomed to become an old maid. Why should not our young women be informed in all things that go to constitute a well-rounded education for our young men?

The argument for one will apply with equal force to the other. If education is only to be a means to an end, and that end a "bread-and-butter" question, then we might consent; but to those to whom it has a higher significance, the question admits of no debate. Here, too, we may err lest we give the girls of our land the idea that education is to make them competitors with the stronger sex rather than companions and associates of equal culture and standing.

So, Mr. Editor, while we may find much to commend in our new methods and advanced ideas, we certainly find some things for caution and study.

Notice.

To the Chairman and Members of the Delhi District Conference of the M. E. Church, South—

DEAR BRETHREN: We, your Committee on Temperance, come with rejoicing. The mighty and righteous warfare against the iniquities of the liquor traffic has been one of long duration, fraught with many difficulties, and resisted by a well-organized and tireless foe.

A glance backward over the road already trod would reveal wonders in the way of the tenacity of evil purpose, deceptions and misrepresentations of avarice, or the progeny of the combines composing the big armies of this hyena of our homes, and human vultures who prey upon the noblest youths of our fair land; and upon our side of the long line of battle it would reveal to us some whose faith was weak, and they died in despair, many repulses and heart aches; yet, thank God, many who with a God-given faith and courage fought and prayed on through the darkness and the day till at last even in our midst the day of deliverance has dawned!

The city of Monroe, the hub of commerce in Northeast Louisiana, together with the entire parish of Ouachita, has by a large majority vote closed all the saloons in her borders, and at several minor points in this district local prohibition has carried, while the entire territory is waking up to meet the mighty issues. We rejoice to-day that God has answered the prayers of his people, and those who so long trampled upon the hearts and prayers of our noble Christian mothers have seen the "handwriting on the wall." We note with pleasure also in the late contest that the great whisky trust and beer manufacturers almost to a man refused to send money to their local dealers to defeat the will of our people. While their purpose was no higher than their own selfish ends, yet it saved us from the corrupting influence of such moneys. And we greatly rejoice to be able, after careful investigation, to report as entirely untrue the charge that prohibition injures trade and retards the financial progress of our people. To the contrary, the stoppage of this waste of time and means quickens enterprise, encourages legitimate business and brings the return of prosperous times. With pride we point to the city of Monroe. Never has that city indicated better evidences of prosperity. This year will likely witness the erection of a $75,000 compress, a $50,000 hotel, some elegant and substantial business houses, two elegant churches and more than fifty residences. A total outlay of more than $200,000. When a city of less than 8,000 inhabitants invests a quarter of a million dollars in substantial improvements in one year it does not look as if it expects to retire from business.

We earnestly recommend that all our preachers and laymen exert themselves to not only retain the points already gained, but to extend our lines till not one saloon be left in all our borders, and that we stand like true Christians and loyal citizens for the strict enforcement of these laws. Let us return to God our devout thanks, continue our prayers and labor till our country shall be free from this iniquity.

Respectfully submitted.

A Word in Season.

General O. O. Howard relates an incident in his own life, for the purpose of showing what great results sometimes come from little efforts. At the battle of Fair Oaks, on June 1, 1862, General Howard's arm was shot off.

"As I was making my way to the hospital," he says, "weak from the loss of blood and pain, I saw a young man intoxicated. He was so under the influence of whisky that he could hardly walk. As I came near him, I stopped long enough to tell him it did not pay to drink. It would ruin him, and he would better stop before the habit had control of him.

"I passed on to the hospital, had my arm amputated, and was sent home to recover. I learned nothing more of the drunken soldier until a short time ago, when a letter from an officer in Washington told me his subsequent history.

"Impressed by the fact that in my wounded condition I had taken enough interest in him to stop and give him advice, he had then and there resolved to quit drinking. He kept his resolution, and when the war was over settled down to a life of steady, honest, hard work. He gradually rose, and the letter from Washington told me he had just died, a judge on the Supreme Bench of the State of New Hampshire, one of the foremost men in the commonwealth."

Delude not yourself with the idea that you would be a better Christian if you had a better chance. The very essence of fidelity is the faith that adjusts itself to any circumstances, and stands true in any storm. If you are impatient at a hum-drum life, and carelessly indifferent to the Christian obligations resting upon you because of obstacles and weights, it is more than probable that a change of environment would still find you among the negligent. Circumstances will never, in this world, be just what we would like. To wait and dream for golden days, when service to the Master will be spontaneous, is to miss the Christian spirit, and waste the preparation for immortal life. Be true where you are, and God will lead you out to other things.—Holston Methodist.

A St. Louis pastor told us this the other day, too good to keep out of print: It points a mighty moral, forsooth. He had preached one Sunday morning in an Eastern city, on the blessed fellowship of the saints in heaven. After the sermon a man approached, shook him warmly by the hand, thanked him for the sermon, and then astonished him by requesting him to preach the following Sunday morning on the "Blessed Fellowship of the Saints upon Earth." "Why?" asked the minister. "Well," said the parishioner, "I've sat in my pew in this church fifty-two Sundays, and nobody but the deacon with the collection basket has ever come near me."—Mid-Continent.

It is not wise to be continually fighting the errors of others. We must not exhaust our strength in killing noxious weeds and grass. We must cultivate the crop. The best way to kill our errors is to cultivate the truth. Some errors are like cane grass—if they are let alone, they die; but if an effort is made to kill them out, they begin to grow. The devil is fond of wrangling. It is his element. There is no weapon which he so much fears as the truth. It makes him shudder.

There is a common notion that uprightness is stern of countenance. We look for a certain severity about great purity. But there was nothing hard or angular about Jesus. People did not think of his piety as of an apple that would be good if it were only mellow. He attracted men. That is, he attracted all to whom goodness had any attraction. The children came to him—instinctively recognizing in him the children's friend. Alas! for the man whose piety makes children run shy of him.

Go, not to conquer men by force, but to work on their hearts, make them disciples, docile pupils in the school of Christ.—Schaff.

The poorest education that teaches self-control is better than the best that neglects it.—Sterling.

Heaven Begun.

It was said of an old Puritan that "heaven was in him before he was in heaven." That is necessary for all of us; we must have heaven in us before we get into heaven. If we do not get to heaven before we die, we shall never get there afterward. An old Scotchman was asked whether he ever expected to go to heaven. "Why, man, I live there," was the quaint reply. Let us all live in those spiritual things which are the essential features of heaven. Often go there before you go to stay there. If you come down tomorrow morning, knowing and realising that heaven is yours, and that you will soon be there, those children will not worry you half so much. When you go out to your business or to your work, you will not be half so discontented when you know that this is not your rest, but that you have a rest on the hills eternal, whither your heart has already gone, and that there your portion is in the everlasting dwellings. "Lay hold on eternal life." "Get hold of it now." It is a thing of the future, and it is a thing of the present; and even your part of it which is future can be, by faith, so realized and grasped as to be actually enjoyed while you are yet here.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Our Daily Work.

The Lord never meant that we should make of our immediate and daily work prison walls to shut ourselves in, so as to take no part in the vast interests of humanity. Every man stands under an arch of heaven, infinite in extent, with the constellations of the universe lighting their solemn fires above him every night, and the unwearied sun marching over his head every day. We all belong to the whole of God's world, and nothing which concerns it ought to find us indifferent. When we walk in the woods, the sweet breath of the ferns takes us back to past geologic ages; the fragrance of the fir and pines recalls the Psalms of David and the hymns of the Vedas. "Over us soars the eternal sky, full of light and of Deity." It is not meant that we should live to ourselves; we are all called on to live for every truth, every human interest, every human need, as the Lord sends them to us or sends us to them.—James Freeman Clarke.

Cling fast to the hand that is leading you, though it be in darkness, though it be in deep waters—you know whom you have believed. Yield not for a single moment to misgivings about future storms. Infinite love, joined to infinite skill, shall pilot the way through every strait and temptation.—J. Alexander.

Make a rule, and pray God to help you keep it, never, if possible, to lie down at night without being able to say, "I have made one human being, at least, a little wiser, a little happier, or a little better this day." You will find it easier than you think, and pleasanter.—Charles Kingsley.

A man who lives right, and is right, has more power in his silence than another has by his words. Character is like bells which ring out sweet music and which, when touched, accidentally even, resound with sweet music.—Phillips Brooks.

There are some who really believe that to be solemn, and dignified, and severe, is to be good. With them a smile is contaminating, a laugh is heresy, and a joke is richly deserving of excommunication. We feel sorry for them.—Holston Methodist.

Prayer should be just what one feels, just what one thinks, just what one needs; and it should stop the moment it ceases to be the real expression of the need, the thought, and the feeling.—Beecher.

Paul thought it of the highest importance that a minister should be "apt to teach." But there are some churches which seem to think that a minister should be "apt to entertain."

It is advisable that a man should know at least three things: First, where he is; secondly, where he is going; thirdly, what he had best do under the circumstances.—Ruskin.

Fail to the work God sets thee about, and thou engagest his strength for thee; run from the work, and thou engagest his strength against thee.—Gurnall.

To pull a man out of a ditch we do not have to get down in the ditch with him; we must be above him, our feet upon the solid bank.

The pious parson who undertakes to court a crowd will suffer as many tribulations as the fresh youth who sets out to court a flirt.

Some gifts the Lord can not bestow
Until in holiness we grow:
Therefore, to fit us for his will,
He keeps us under training still,
But not one trial does he send
Which brings not blessing in the end.

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

The Kosciusko District Conference.

This body assembled in Lexington, Miss., July 4, 1895, and was presided over by Rev. John H. Mitchell, presiding elder.

The first day was devoted to the Sunday-school work, a program having been provided some weeks in advance by the presiding elder.

The attendance was not large. Five pastors were absent, besides more than half the delegates elected.

Reports in many respects were encouraging, in others meager. Recording stewards greatly at fault in not sending up Quarterly Conference Records to be examined; there being only five of the seventeen of these books in the district before the committee. All interests of the district were carefully looked after by the presiding elder. Average amounts paid on preachers' salaries is "little more than twenty-five per cent."

Committees on Education and Books and Periodicals were faithful in looking after these interests, the latter making very favorable and complimentary mention of the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE as "a paper of high grade."

Revs. I. W. Cooper, D. D.; J. W. McLaurin, R. G. Porter, and J. B. Mitchell, of Leesburg, Va., were present during the session; Dr. Cooper earnestly working to procure boys for Millsaps College, McLaurin representing the interests of the American Bible Society; Porter saying a word now and then, when the Conference could prevail on him to speak, and Mitchell enjoying the occasion among relatives and old friends of his father long since in heaven.

The preaching during the Conference by Bros. Newsom, McLaurin, Lester, McCullough, Murrah, Cooper and J. H. Mitchell was good to the use of edifying and the whole session, with its prayer services and love-feast, was one of great spiritual profit.

The Presbyterians and Baptists tendered the use of their churches, and Lexington, famous for her hospitality, entertained the Conference in a delightful way.

Of course, our faithful and successful colporter and Sunday-school agent, Rev. G. W. Baohman, was on hand, looking after the interest committed to his hands.

Dr. T. F. Turner, J. G. Hamilton, J. F. Wilburn and T. J. Harris were elected delegates to the Annual Conference.

Next session to be at Sallis.

THOS. CAMERON, Sec.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. R. A. Breland, P. C., Camden, Miss., July 4: "Below is my report for June: Traveled 275 miles by private conveyance and 425 miles on the railroad; made 18 pastoral visits; preached 11 sermons; attended 3 prayer meetings, and received 1 applicant for church membership."

Rev. C. R. Seward, P. C., Live Oak, La., July 4: "We just closed quite a successful meeting at Palmetto Church. The briars and logs were cleared away from the church. Old feuds were settled. Several professed faith in Christ. Five united themselves with the church. A prayer meeting was organized, and the church is in prosperous condition. To the Father of light be all the praise!"

Rev. D. Scarborough, Meridian Miss., July 4: "It was the privilege of the writer to worship with the good people of West End last Sunday night. Dr. Cooper had previously invited the other pastors to join him at that hour, it being the opening day of their new church. The first sermon was preached in the church, Sunday, at 11 A. M., by Rev. R. J. Jones. At night the congregation had the privilege of listening to an able discourse by Rev. R. S. Woodward. The sermon was interesting, instructive, and edifying; the occasion pleasant and enjoyable. Now, I will leave the task of giving you a description of the church to a more facile pen than mine. I will simply say that it is one of the most beautiful buildings in the city. It has a seating capacity of about 550, including the auditorium and Sunday-school room. The plan of the building is very near the same as the East End Church. It has a steeple sixty feet high. The walls are plastered, and overhead is ceiled. The pews are beautiful, and the rostrum is one of the best constructed I have ever seen. In fact, the church is a credit to Methodism. Bro. Cooper and his people are to be congratulated on their success in pushing to a speedy conclusion the movement set on foot to build this church. They deserve great credit for their heroic sacrifices in times like these. We may expect great things of the Lord for this church in the future. May God bless Bro. Cooper and his noble people!"

Rev. Jno. D. Crymes, Rolling Fork, July 4: "It is impossible to describe fully the revival which is now sweeping the church at Rolling Fork. Sister Snell is with us. Young men in clubs of five handed themselves together to find the Christ, and are now telling what a precious Savior they have found. Ten have, to-date, joined the church—five of whom are heads of large families. The hardest sinners are coming home to God, and the fire from heaven is falling, and many are being sanctified."

S. E. Cook, Asheville, La., July 8: "Rev. J. J. Kelly, of Asheville, has been holding very interesting and successful meetings at Perry. He commenced Sunday, the thirtieth, and up to Sunday night, the seventh, about 28 confessed conversion. The schoolhouse in which he has been holding these meetings was crowded every night, and many could not find standing room, so great has been the power of God upon these people. This precious work will continue throughout this week, provided Bro. Kelly's voice does not fail him in his assiduous efforts in accomplishing this noble work for the Master; and it is our sincerest prayer that this harvest may be increasingly bountiful. Such earnest laborers are amply worthy of their hire."

GOSPEL TENT MEETINGS.

The gospel tent owned and controlled by the New Orleans Holiness Association was secured to hold a special meeting at Douglass, or, as now known, Morris Park. The tent was pitched, and service was held on the night of May 31.

In the third week of the meeting Sister M. M. Auvry wrote as follows to the Way of Faith:

NEW ORLEANS, LA.

DEAR BRO. PORTER: We want the book ordered to distribute among seekers after holiness. The Holiness Association of Louisiana have purchased a tent which is now pitched in one of the public squares of our city. This is the third week of a meeting being held under the tent. Rev. C. H. Ellis, evangelist, is in charge, and a glorious work is being done. The Holy Ghost was with us in power, souls are being convicted, converted and sanctified by him, and we are looking for grand and lasting results. A house has been rented on the square in which to establish a permanent mission. Glory to God for full salvation! It is what poor sinners want and wabbling Christians need. Two persons from the mission united with Dryades Street M. E. Church, South, yesterday morning, to be followed by several more of the same family. Drunkards are taking the pledge; but are urged to take Christ as the never-failing antidote to all sin, while all kinds of sinners are being awakened under the call to repent and accept salvation.

MRS. AUVRY.

What was then said was true to the last. An exact count of the results was not attempted; but we can safely say, "Many believed and turned to the Lord." There are quite a number who have signified their purpose to unite with the church. The meeting closed June 30, with a large audience.

A general regret was expressed that the meeting could not be continued. But the tent was due at another point, and hence continuance was impracticable. The Sunday-school of ours has about one hundred on the roll. It is confidently believed a church will be built and a society organized at no distant day as the fruit of this meeting. To God be all the glory!

Yours in Jesus, O. H. ELLIS.

Rev. Robt. W. Vaughan, Minden, La., July 5: "Our presiding elder has seen fit to move me from my work, Vienna charge, and give me the work made vacant by the decease of our dearly beloved Bro. R. Parvin. This will necessitate the change of my address from Vienna, La., to Pleasanton, La. I find the people of the Valley circuit a dear good people, and greatly grieved at the loss of their pastor. Surely Bro. Parvin was a model pastor. Although we may not erect to the memory of Bro. Parvin a lofty monument, yet I find embraced in his first and only report from the Valley circuit a monument more lofty and magnificent than human hands can ever build. I find there (his report embracing a period of about twenty-eight days in the month of January; and, without much effort, you can call to memory the kind of weather we had there) a record of sixty-two pastoral visits. I find the children grieving for the death of Bro. Parvin, and among my first greetings on the work was from a little tot, that is just learning to talk, in these words, 'Can 'ou p'each like Bruver Parvin?' I feel the awful responsibility before me, and my inability to meet it; but I am trusting in God, and ask you to pray that I may be imbued with the power to carry forward the work Bro. Parvin so ably begun. I left a dear good people on the Vienna work. I had just become well acquainted and attached to them, and felt that I could make a fine report for the year's work, and I trust and pray that the Vienna people may be gloriously blessed. God knows best; let his will be done. May God bless you and your glorious ADVOCATE!"

Rev. J. M. Beard, New Iberia, La., July 5: "We have just closed a great meeting at New Iberia, such as we have been praying for, working for and looking for since our revival at the beginning of the Conference year. Not that all the sinners in town or even in the church have been converted, but that we have experienced an old-fashioned Methodist revival that in some form has reached nearly every home and heart, as well as people of all ages and classes. Though there were no immediate results during the session of the District Conference, which was attended by large crowds of people, and characterized by excellent gospel preaching, for ten days subsequently there have been conversions and reclamations every day and at nearly every service. One feature of the meeting was open-air preaching on Main street and in front of the two leading saloons of the city, and another was children's meetings, held every afternoon in the church, at which numbers of the latter turned to Christ. On the other hand, gray-haired men and the heads of families were constantly seen at the altar, many of whom from this time will be found full panoplied and with drawn sword on the Lord's side of the great conflict. But the revival work was chiefly within the church, where it was most needed, and will result in the greatest good, a statement which anyone who has known aught of the history of the church for the past two or three years will know how to appreciate. Bro. R. P. Howell, of Lake Arthur, was the pastor's main helper in the meeting, and did most of the preaching, which was of a very excellent quality. Bro. Pickens, of Sulphur Mine circuit, was also present for a portion of the time and rendered efficient service in the pulpit. The meeting practically ended a five weeks' siege, at which abundance of good seed was sown, and which, with corresponding efforts at or near the close of the year, will, we confidently believe, do much towards solving the problem of Christianity in this community. Perhaps it ought to be said, in conclusion, that the preaching, with one or two exceptions only, was of the straight second-blessing, sanctification type."

God regards a saint in rags more than a sinner in robes.—Jackson.

That Tired Feeling

The great benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well-known merchant of Auburn, Me., says: "About 5 years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia and Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am very much better and feel more like working.

Following Consciences.

The notion widely prevails that so long as a man does the bidding of conscience, his life is acceptable in the sight of God. It is imagined by not a few Christians that following conscience is synonymous with walking in the path of righteousness. To say that a man may go wrong while obeying the dictates of this inward monitor seems to some a most startling statement. The Scriptures plainly teach, however, that conscience is not of itself a safe guide. "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man," says the speaker of Proverbs; "but the end thereof are the ways of death." We find abundant illustration of this in human life.

How many persecutions have arisen, how many dastardly crimes have been committed, what numberless wrongs have been perpetrated by men who, hearkening to the voice of a misguided conscience, fancied they were obeying the voice of God himself. The horrors of the Spanish Inquisition, the terrible tortures once inflicted upon supposed witches — all were prompted by a perverted moral sense.

Mr. Fletcher says, with much truth: "In some, conscience is easy under mountains of guilt. In others, it is unreasonably scrupulous about mere trifles. On account of its capriciousness, to-day we may with propriety compare it to a dumb dog that will not bark at a thief. To-morrow it is like a snarling cur that flies indifferently at a friend, a foe, or a shadow, and at last turns upon itself, and tears its own vitals." Some Italian brigands who had just murdered a man sat down by the roadside to eat the lunch they found in his wallet. Suddenly one of them, recollecting that it was Friday, for they were Catholics, put down the piece of meat he had been eating, and crossed himself. His companions on being reminded what day it was, followed his example in refraining from flesh. Thus though these men, for conscience sake, would not eat meat on a Friday, yet they had no compunctions of conscience for killing a man in order to get his money.

Why is it, we may ask, that the promptings of this God-given faculty are not always in accordance with the right? It is because man is a fallen being. Having disobeyed God, the light that was in him has become darkness. Had man always lived up to his convictions, those convictions would accord perfectly with the law of God. The failure to yield unceasing obedience to known law is the secret of the perversion of the moral faculty. If men would do continually what they know to be right, the moral sense would never become perverted. But whenever we steel our hearts against the truth, the result is disastrous to the spiritual nature.

Even those nations that have not the light of revelation, as Paul says, "are without excuse." "Because that which may be known of God is manifest in them; for God hath shewed it unto them. For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead." Since those who "knew God glorified him not as God, neither were thankful," therefore "God also gave them up to uncleanness through the lusts of their own hearts." Thus does God leave to themselves those who will not obey the whispers of conscience.

A remarkable instance of the blunting of the moral sensibilities is to be found in the fact that men rarely see any great harm in the particular sins of which they are guilty. We behold the mote that is in a brother's eye, but see not the beam that is in our own eye. Every man thinks that other people's sins are worse than his own. Stingy church members often point condemningly to the dancing members, and the dancers, in their turn, point to the drinkers and occasional swearers. A gambler is always ready to pass judgment on a thief. The Sabbath-breaker condemns the liar, and so on ad infinitum.

Christians not infrequently do questionable things, and then plead in extenuation of their conduct that their consciences do not condemn them for these things. True it may be, but it is as much our duty to seek fullness of light, to advance in the knowledge of God's truth, as it is to put into practice what we already know. "Grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ," is an exhortation of Scripture. The Christian who fails to cultivate tenderness of conscience will never be likely to display a high type of piety.

There is a large class of persons to whom to talk about higher duties and keener spiritual understanding is extremely unpleasant. They want to be allowed to pursue unmolested the same round of religious duties year after year, and delude themselves into believing that this is Christianity. An enlightened conscience is what Christians everywhere need. Having the treasures of wisdom at our command, we are as culpable for spiritual blindness as we are for spiritual unfruitfulness. Without diligent, prayerful study of the Scriptures, and faithful striving after purity of life, the moral sense will, of necessity, become perverted.

Nor is it enough that we search the Scriptures. We must also seek the guidance of the Holy Spirit, that he may open our understanding. "When he, the Spirit of Truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth." "Now we have received, not the spirit of the world; but the Spirit which is of God that we might know the things that are freely given to us of God." (I. Cor. ii, 12.) If people would only stop quibbling about whether this or that course be sinful, and seek the illumination of the Spirit, certainty would take the place of doubt.

Our Review.

The July-August number of our Review is out with the following table of contents: W. P. Harrison, by Walker Lewis, D. D.; Loaf and Bottle to Hagar, by Bishop Haygood; Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar, by George F. Mellen; Character as Related to Flesh and Spirit, by Rev. C. Jackson; Augustus De-Morgan, by Willian J. Vaughan; A Talk with Our Cultured Young People, by Hon. J. Wofford Tucker; The American University, by Bishop J. F. Hurst; Was the Christmas Conference a General Conference? by Rev. Collins Denny; Was the Christmas Conference a General Conference (In the sense in which all bodies so classed from 1792 to 1894 were)? by Rev. J. J. Tigert.

In addition to this there is the usual amount of matter in the editorial departments.

We have read only the controversy between Drs. Tigert and Denny anent the Christmas Conference. In our judgment, the Book Editor demolishes the Vanderbilt professor, and proves conclusively that the General Conference of 1894 made a mistake in reckoning the Christmas Conference in the list of General Conferences. We anticipate much pleasure from reading this number of the Review when opportunity offers.

The Seashore Camp Meeting.

The Seashore Camp Meeting began on Wednesday, the tenth.

The first service of the meeting was the dedication of Wesley Hall, the new preachers' tent, a description of which has already been given in our columns. The meeting was presided over by Dr. Sawyer. An appropriate presentation address was made by E. P. Mackie, president of the Board of Trustees. A felicitous response was made by Bishop Keener. Wesley Hall is certainly a great improvement on the old-time preachers' tent. It is supplied with about everything, almost every modern convenience. Bishop Keener's remark that some preachers will get softer beds here than they have at home is doubtless true. The Board of Trustees and the good sisters of the Aid Society are entitled to the thanks of the itinerant fraternity and to the very best pulpit service that can be rendered.

The opening sermon—a very appropriate one—was preached by Rev. C. A. Powell, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference.

The following ministers occupied the pulpit on Thursday: W. G. Forsythe, of the Mississippi Conference; E. N. Evans, of the Louisiana Conference; R. Selby, of the Mississippi Conference, and J. B. Tate, of the Alabama Conference.

The preachers for Friday were: J. G. Galloway, of the Mississippi Conference; H. Urquhart, of the Alabama Conference; F. N. Parker, of the Louisiana Conference, and J. M. Henry, of the Louisiana Conference.

The early service on Saturday morning was conducted by J. J. Smylie, of the Louisiana Conference. C. B. Carter, of Dallas, Texas, preached at 8:30 A. M.; W. P. Hurt, of the Alabama Conference, at 11 o'clock; J. B. Holloman, of Mississippi Conference, in the afternoon; S. J. Davies, of the Louisiana Conference, at night.

The attendance at services on Sunday was larger than on any other day. Henry Carre, of Louisiana Conference, and H. Urquhart, of the Alabama Conference, preached in the morning. Noon and evening sermons were preached by W. B. Murrah, president of Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.; S. S. Keener, of the Louisiana Conference; and W. P. Hurt, of the Alabama Conference.

On Monday morning there were sermons by C. M. Lyons, of the Louisiana Conference, and H. Urquhart, of the Alabama Conference. The evening sermons were preached by T. K. Faunt Leroy, of the Louisiana Conference, and W. G. Forsythe, of Mississippi Conference.

Dr. J. B. Fearn.

We are just in receipt of a letter from Dr. J. B. Fearn, who recently went out as a medical missionary, sent by the Mississippi Conference. The doctor has just visited Shanghai, and attending a night service in the church of Dr. F. Reid, had his heart gladdened by seeing the Epworth Leaguers go out in the congregation and talk to their brother Chinamen. The result of the night's work was nine probationers.

From Shanghai he went by boat to Suchow, eighty-four miles distant, and was there quickly initiated into medical work by Dr. Hart. One of the medical assistants gave a feast upon his arrival, and initiated Bro. Fearn into the mysteries of eating rice and drinking soup with chop-sticks.

He gives an incident in connection with the dispensary, which moved him deeply: "I happened to look out of the window, and saw a little Chinese boy walking in front of a woman, who had some trouble with her eyes. She had one of her hands on each of his shoulders, and thus they came into the dispensary. My heart was touched at this kindness in what so many call the heathen Chinese. Remember when the friends of the sick brought them to Jesus, he healed them, and his name was glorified. Pray for us, that we may show this spirit of Christ in our work, and cause his name to be glorified in China. The Lord is still good to me, and I feel more and more a strong desire to do all I can."

This request of this devoted young man needs but to be stated to the friends of missions in Mississippi. Let us pray that he shall have inducement of power for the truly responsible mission on which he has been sent.

W. R. LAMBUTH.

The Chautauqua as an Educating Factor.

It is to be observed that among the mighty agencies being used during the last decade to educate the people, none promise more or better results than these Summer schools now being planted in many States. It has passed into an axiom that "education and religion are hand-maids." So soon as they are divorced, our glory as a nation is departed; our effectiveness and powers as a force against all sin, as the church of Jesus Christ, is neutralized. We must educate, and educate on the higher plains of thought and investigation. I hail the Chautauqua movement as a benison, in that it proposes to do that which is not done so well and effectively by any other educational organization. For teachers, and others as well, to assemble every year and be instructed on various branches of education by competent faculties, can only inure to good, as the teachers go to their high and noble profession the better equipped for their work. The pedagogue gets pabulum, sympathy, encouragement and additional power to prosecute his work. For nine or ten months he looks forward to the reunion, rest and recreation that awaits him the coming Summer at the Chautauqua. The freedom of the schools for all is an admirable provision. The pay lectures generally attract vast multitudes, and furnish the "sinews of war" for the enterprise, while lesser lights—called satellites—have the opportunity to career in their more circumscribed orbits; to ultimately, it may be, move in a larger ellipse; or, as a comet, blaze with dazzling splendor through the firmament of oratory.

Our holy Christianity must embrace and utilize these occasions and institutions, and get all the good out of them possible; and certainly a wonderful field is here presented to the messenger of salvation, as also the disciple of the meek and lowly Nazarene. Better ten thousand times these annual gatherings of the multitudes than to attend the race course, fair, barbecue, base ball, etc., or even the political hustings, where often coarse anecdotes is the main staple, intermingled with partisan wranglings and damagoguery.

I am told by the mayor of Ruston that not an arrest has been made or a single prosecution had during the several years that the Chautauqua has been in operation. That speaks much for the character of the thousands who have attended from year to year, and the order-loving sentiment of Ruston's population.

The management are, for the most part, members of the several Protestant Churches, and persons of integrity and probity. The celebrated Dr. Talmage was here Sunday and Monday. The management told me they could not get him any other days. He preached on Sunday to; perhaps, 3,500 people. A gate fee was charged; this I regret. The sermon was said to have been very grand. (I did not hear it). His Monday lecture, on "Blunders," was just uplifting, magnificent. I hope the precedent of gate fees on Sunday will not be followed. The sanctity of the holy Sabbath must be sustained. It is one of the corner-stones of our national success, and the very foundation and conservator of the Christian religion.

Welcome to these Chautauquas as beacons of light and power in the dissemination of literature, music, education, refinement, patriotism and religion.

THOMAS B. WHITE.

Christless Reform.

Six months ago several American cities were reported to be on the verge of salvation. The reformers had gotten their machinery in order, and the crowd was waiting for the wheels to begin to revolve, apparently expecting to see the work turned out in blocks. Many a pious soul, discouraged at the slow progress of Christianity, was "powerfully lifted up" by this new idea of making room for the millennium by kicking the rascals out. For some unexplained reason the machinery failed to work according to the terms of the contract. The apparatus for kicking the rascals out was continually getting out of order. When at last a small vacuum had been made, the millennium which was supposed to be waiting outside failed to appear, and several anti-millenarians were sworn in instead. To the student of history there is nothing surprising in the collapse of reform movements. Christless reforms date back to the child age of the world. It is an effort to cure a blood disease of long standing by washing out the sores. There are reform methods, adjuncts to Christianity, which do some good, just as there are external applications which may be used in connection with a blood treatment with some profit; but a reformer who ignores Christianity is as useless to a community as a quack who proposes to cure a blood disease by ignoring the blood. We rarely feel like joining in the hurrah that is made over reformers of this type. We can admire the zeal without being impressed with the wisdom of the little girl who was sure she was 'most well because she had succeeded in scrubbing her foul tongue nearly clean with her mother's tooth-brush. — Baltimore Advocate.

NOTES.

It is announced that Miss Minnie Barrington, of Canton, Miss., is a candidate for the office of State Librarian. Without disparaging in the least the claims of other fair aspirants, we express the opinion that Miss Barrington would fill the place admirably.

Rev. J. M. Boland, D. D. (author of the "Problem of Methodism"), has accepted the presidency of Barboursville College, West Virginia.

***

On our first page will be found a very interesting letter from Miss Belle Kearney, who is now in England. This is the first of a series which she will write during her two years' sojourn in the old world.

***

On account of bad health, Rev. V. V. Boone, of the Mississippi Conference, has given up his pastoral charge, (Washington circuit), and Rev. D. F. Gnice has been appointed to fill out his unexpired term.

***

Let him who can find solace for a grief-stricken spirit in the cold negations of a skeptical philosophy; we will cling to the faith of our fathers. To us the tomb is only the vestibule of a celestial temple that is infinitely spacious and transcendently glorious. Death, "the king of terrors," as men call him, is but the friendly hand that breaks the bars of our mundane prison, and allows the soul to unfold its golden pinions and soar aloft, far, far

"beyond the bounds,
Where stars revolve their little rounds."

Prayer is no rostrum of debate nor theological battle-field. To answer an argument, to take sides on a controverted question, to make assertions, while petitioning a throne of grace, is to deal unfairly with the doctrine opposed, and with those who believe in that doctrine. We once heard a gospel minister make an eloquent defense of the Lost Cause in a prayer. All this is to be deprecated. Stump speeches are not to be tolerated when on our knees talking with God. And theological polemics at such a time are destructive of the grace of humility, without which all praying is in vain.—Holston Methodist.

***

If the minister can stand the Sabbath service when the thermometer is in the nineties, surely his congregation should. If he can preach earnestly and ably with the perspiration rolling down his face, the listener should be equal to the task of listening without complaint. Suppose the church is hot, that is no reason for neglecting it. You require your pastor, or his substitute, to be in his place; is there not then an equal obligation resting upon you to be in attendance? You need religion as much in July and August as you do in December and January. God's house has blessings for you at all times. Get the Summer mercies as well as the Winter. —Presbyterian.

***

Our thoughts, like sharp-cutting instruments, are day by day hewing and chiseling us into the shape we shall finally assume. Our deeds also determine us, and we are more or less affected by our feelings. But the thoughts are the prime operators, the most controlling factors in the formation of character; and they are the things most under our control. Very few people realize as they should the importance of closely watching the ideas which they cherish. Life is bound up in them. We grow holy or sinful as we think about holy or sinful subjects. No one can afford to let his mind wander at random. Its habitual direction constitutes the man.

Quietly, almost without any discussion since the last General Conference, the church seems to be settling into the mature conviction that the time-limit in the pastorate should be removed. It will probably go at the next session. Many who then voted against its removal did so because they wished to study the subject in the light of the then recent extension to five years. Besides, they feared that the removal of the time limit altogether would finally destroy the itinerancy. More extended observation and study have satisfied many of them on these points, while they are also convinced that the removal of the limit would greatly strengthen the pastorate in many cases. —California Christian Advocate.

The Woman's Board has done a wise thing in refusing to allow Miss Haygood to return to China at once. The work that she will do for foreign missions in the home field at the present time will ultimately yield results so abundant and far reaching as to compensate for her temporary absence from her chosen field of service. She is a woman who has few equals either at home or abroad. A woman of liberal education, broad views, and wide experience, having a great, loving heart for heavy-burdened and sin-sick humanity, so that her presence and words are a benediction to the average man and woman. To quote an expression used by one of the British delegates to the late Student's Convention at Knoxville, "Her sphere may be limited, but her spirit is world wide." Such a woman would make a good and wise leader in any cause she might espouse. We look forward to her return to the Kentucky Conference in the Fall with great interest and pleasure.—Central Methodist.

Brandon District Conference.

The Brandon District Conference of the M. E. Church was held at Steen's Creek, Miss., June 28 and 29 It assembled and was opened with prayer by Rev. C. McDonald, P. E, invoking divine blessings upon its deliberations. The roll was called, and seventeen itinerants, twenty-three local preachers and thirteen lay delegates responded present. An election was held for secretary, which resulted in the election of J. S. Melvin, and C. W. Taylor as assistant. The usual committees were appointed.

Reports from the different charges were called, and eighteen reports were read, showing good work was being done, and that the work for the Master was progressing, both spiritually and financially, notwithstanding the hard times. When the Brandon charge was reported, there arose an interesting discussion as to the best methods of raising missionary and Conference collections, participated in by Bros. W. J. Roberts, J. T. Nicholson, J. W. Elliston, Irvin Miller, W. M. Sullivan, W. L. Barr, H. E. Partridge, J. F. Robinson, B. H. Rawls, Louis Kendall, Jno. Evans, and Presiding Elder C. McDonald.

Bro. M. A. Thurman was licensed to preach. Bros. R. A. Sibley, Jr., and W. L. Blackwell, after being examined, were unanimously elected on trial.

The Board of Education report the church school at Montrose, Miss., in a prospering condition; 125 pupils in attendance last session, and that J. A. and S. D. Wall were elected principals for the ensuing term, and that many of our people were patronizing our Conference college at Jackson, Miss.

Dr. Irvin Miller represented the claims of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE before the Conference. The needs of our people for their church organ and other Christian literature were set forth in chaste and fervent language. Bros. Cooper and Nicholson also made interesting talks on this subject.

License to local preachers were renewed as follows, to-wit: Jno. J. Chilton, Jas. W. Thompson, R. A. Sibley, Jr.; H. B. Hinds, F. A. Lane, W. L. Blackwell, W. H. Lane, Jas. C. Williams, E. P. Parden, Amos Kendall, W. F. Donnell, J. M. Carley, T. W. Marble, J. C. Weir, Jno. H. McDonald, G. W. Haddleston, J. W. Simmons. Bro. McLaurin, the assistant superintendent of the American Bible Society, was introduced and made interesting talk on the Sunday-school feature of the society. Bro. H. E. Partridge was appointed to assist Bro. McLaurin in distribution of Bibles.

Jno. R. Enochs, W. M. Thornton, M. Cadenhead and Bro. Irvin Miller were elected lay delegates to the next Annual Conference, and G. G. Lindsay and C. C. Griffin, alternates.

Decatur was chosen as the place of meeting for the next District Conference.

Dr. Miller and W. M. Sullivan offered a resolution commendatory of Presiding Elder C. McDonald, which was passed without dissent.

Religious services were held as follows, to-wit: At 11 A. M., of twenty-eighth, Dr. Irvin Miller; at 8 P. M., Dr. I. W. Cooper. At 11 A. M., twenty-ninth, H. E. Partridge, and at 8 P. M., J. T. Nicholson. Sunday, 11 A. M., at the Methodist Episcopal Church, Dr. McLaurin; and at the Baptist Church, by T. B. Holloman. At 9 o'clock A. M. Love-feast by Rev. Dr. Miller; at 8 P. M., H. E. Partridge. Rev. R. H. Barr preached to the colored people at 11 A. M.

Resolutions of thanks were tendered to the people of Steen's Creek and vicinity for the kind hospitality and royal manner they entertained the Conference, and to our Baptist brethren for the use of their church.

The sessions of the Conference were largely attended. The sermons preached were fine; large, attentive and interested audiences. Harmony and good feeling prevailed; our brethren of other denominations vying with ours in their efforts to make it an occasion long to be remembered.

Conference adjourned on the evening of the twenty-ninth, to meet at Decatur, Miss., again next year.

SECRETARY.

The Epworth League Conference.

After reading the reports from the Epworth League Convention in several papers, secular and church, we hesitated not to give the palm to the NEW ORLEANS—abundantly full, explicit enough and satisfactory at every point. Your correspondent did his work well, for which your readers owe him a vote of thanks.

In our nomadic life we find nothing more pleasing than the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE. You keep your readers fully posted on general and home work. It ought to be in every Methodist family in the two States.

Meridian District.

The Meridian District Conference convened at Lauderdale, Miss., Thursday, June 20, at 3 P M, and closed Saturday, the twenty-second, at 3:30 P. M.

Presiding Elder R. J. Jones was in the chair. The clerical attendance was full and the lay delegates were present in unusual numbers. The routine business was carried out with care and dispatch. The general spiritual condition of the various charges, while evidencing no marked advance, yet were in a hopeful state. In each individual church, where its official Board had been induced to set the example of paying a tenth to God and then giving over and above that, there seemed an ease in meeting all the financial claims.

C. W. Huff and H. J. Moore were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection.

The following were elected as delegates to the Annual Conference: L. P. Brown, T. P. Bell, E. H. Hohler, D. S. Harmon. Alternates—J. A. Moore and H. J. Moore.

I trust the Holy Spirit was present to reprove, incite and instruct all in attendance, and that good to the individual, to the town and the entire district was done. L. P. BROWN, Sec.

Millsaps College.

Everything is bright and interesting connected with our work. We are making every effort to put 300 boys in Millsaps College next September. We can and must reach the mark. What would Bishop Galloway, Dr. Murrah, and the presiding elders of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences think of appointing the second Sabbath in August as a Millsaps College day. A great impulse would be given to our college if every pulpit would call attention to our work. What do you say, Bishop Galloway? I can furnish two or three schools with teachers. I have the names of two or three gentlemen on my books—first-class teachers—whom I can recommend.

Notice.

To the Pastors of the Louisiana Conference:

Last year the Church Extension Board donated to the Calhoun Church two hundred and fifty dollars, which they have been unable to pay up to this time. The church is in dire straits about it, and we beg them to take up this collection as soon as possible, and send same to Bro. R. Randle, that he may be able to come to their relief.

How a Woman Paid Her Debts!

I am out of debt, and thanks to the Dish Washer business for it. In the past five weeks I have made over $500, and I am so thankful that I feel like telling everybody, so that they can be benefited by my experience. Anybody can sell Dish Washers, because everybody wants one, especially when it can be got so cheap. You can wash and dry the dishes in two minutes. I believe that in two years from now every family will have one. You can get full particulars and hundreds of testimonials by addressing the Iron City Dish Washer Co., 145 S. Highland Ave., Station A, Pittsburg, Pa., and you can't help but make money in this business. I believe that I can clear over $3 000 the coming year, and I am not going to let such an opportunity pass without improvement. We can't expect to succeed without trying. MRS B.

Children's Day Fund.

Mr. Jos. A. Gnioe, Natchez, Miss., treasurer of the Sunday-school Board, Mississippi Conference, is very much surprised at the remissness of preachers in reference to the Children's Day collections. Do not neglect this further. See to it that these funds go to Bro. Gnioe. It is wrong to do otherwise with them.

Roanoke College.

The 42nd year of Roanoke College was very successful, the gain in the enrollment being 23 per cent. The students came from eighteen States and Territories and from Mexico, Nova Scotia, England and Korea. Fifty-eight students won distinction in their studies. Forty-five are candidates for the ministry, representing six denominations. A Choctaw is a member of the next Senior class. Surh Beung Kin, of Korea, has been at Roanoke two years, and Whang Hyen Mo, another Korean, will enter next session. The college offers many advantages at moderate cost. The outlook for next year is very bright. The catalogue of 60 pages, an illustrated circular, and the June Collegian may be had free by addressing the Librarian of Roanoke College, Salem, Va.

Whitworth College.

Have you a daughter to educate? If so, you should send her to Whitworth Female College, Brookhaven, Miss.; and for the following reasons:

I. Well Equipped—Whitworth is well equipped. Its president and faculty are the equals of those to be found in any educational institution of the country in everything that goes to make up suitableness for the position they occupy. The building and apparatus are ample and well suited for their purposes.

II. Prestige—The college is one of prestige. It will, on the eleventh of September, 1895, enter upon the thirty-sixth year of its usefulness. It has turned out many hundreds of young ladies, who are among the most excellent and refined women of the land, and who constitute a society, membership in which can but be beneficial to your daughter and enlist for her sympathy and kindly feeling with the best of people.

III. A Christian Institution—The college is a Christian institution. Christian in the true and proper sense. It does not aim to rival those schools in which aristocratic accomplishments are elevated above Christian graces.

Whitworth College is denominational in the sense that it belongs to and is governed by the Mississippi Conference of the M. E. Church, South, and it is proud of its connection with the church, but it is not denominational in the sense that young ladies of other Christian names and faiths are not welcomed to its advantages; and no effort whatever is made to influence the church preferences of students.

IV. Course of Study—The course of study is abreast with the best educational thought of the day. The curriculum is parallel with that of the higher grade colleges for young women.

V. Location—The location proverbially healthy; the sanitary conditions of the buildings and grounds is perfect.

VI. Accommodations—The accommodations afforded are such as to render the life of the pupils happy. The chapels, recitation-rooms, library and sleeping apartments are spacious, well furnished, attractive and elegant; the grounds beautiful, ornate and pleasing.

VII. Costs—The cost of attending the college is believed to be less than at any other institution of high grade. Whitworth certainly gives as much for the same amount of money as can be obtained elsewhere.

For these and other reasons you can not do better than to send your daughter to Whitworth Female College. The undersigned, the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the institution, give you their personal assurance of the facts stated, and invite you to make further inquiries concerning the present status of the college. For such information, catalogues, etc., address the president, Rev. J. W. Chambers, A. M., Brookhaven, Miss., or anyone of us.

The Malone College,

FOR GIRLS ONLY,

Is situated in the city of Holly Springs, which is the highest point in the State; hence is free from malarial influences. Accessible from all points, as it is at the junction of the Illinois Central and Kansas City railways.

The boarding department is under the special control of the president and his wife, who, with the teachers, eat at the same table with the pupils—all faring alike.

While the property of the college does not belong to the church, which is the case with many of our Conference schools, it is under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and every teacher is a member of the M. E. Church, South; three of them Methodist preachers' daughters, and one a Methodist preacher's widow. The preachers of the North Mississippi Conference are charged only half price, including board.

Prices have been put down to correspond with the low prices of everything.

The fifth annual session will begin Sept. 17, 1895, and run nine months. No money spent or time lost for elaborate commencements.

Our work free to the inspection of the public at all times.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to June, '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the sweeping reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain this price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to June, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate, $1.65.

IF ONLY MOTHERS KNEW.

If only mothers knew, she said,
How hungry children are for love,
Above each virgin little bed
A mother's lips would prove,
How sweet are kisses that are given
Between a rosy mouth and heaven.

If only my mama would kneel,
As you dear mother every night,
Beside her little girl, to feel
If all the wraps are folded tight,
And hold my hands, her elbow fair
Between my cheeks and her soft hair,

And looking in my dreaming eyes
As if she saw some lovely thing!
And smiling in each fond surprise
On all my hopes of life that spring
Like flowers beneath her tender gaze,
I could not stray in evil ways.

Reading Good Literature.

The printing press is without doubt one of the mightiest agencies on earth, either for good or evil. Who can estimate the vast amount of good or harm done by the reading of a single volume! We are either consciously or unconsciously influenced by that which we read. It is a powerful factor in the moulding of character. In reading we come in contact, and enter into conversation, with other minds. We make their thoughts our own. As the spring of water, gushing out of the rock, leaves deposits of iron, lime or sulphur upon the rock, so the streams of thought passing through the mind leave their deposits of good or evil upon the memory.

Our actions are influenced by our thoughts, and our thoughts are influenced by that which we read. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Let me see the books you love to read and the company you prefer, and I will tell you what you are. The books we read and the society we seek is a sure index to our character. It is, therefore, imperatively necessary that our reading matter should be the choicest and best. We are careful about the food we eat, the water we drink and the air we breathe. It is just as essential that we guard the avenues to the soul, the eye and the ear, and that we admit only that which is pure and elevating. Parents should be just as careful in selecting good, wholesome literature for their children as they are in observing the laws of growth and good health. Parents have a right to know what their children are reading, and should make it their business to know.

Our country is flooded with literature which is positively baneful in its character and destructive in its nature. Allow a child to read indiscriminately whatever may happen to fall into its hands, the taste for that which is pure and good will be destroyed. It will create a desire for the sensational and that which corrupts the imagination. It is painful to see the gross neglect in many homes in providing proper reading matter for the religious education of the family. On the table you may find a country paper, a political paper, a farm journal, stock magazine, etc., but not a single religious periodical is to be found in the house. These papers may be all right in their place, but should not be taken to the exclusion of good Christian literature. People should take, at least, as much interest in the intellectual and religious culture of their children as they take in politics, in husbandry and in their stock. Many procure secular newspapers, which constitute their entire stock of reading matter, in order to read what is going on in the world, and neglect to read their own church paper and thus inform themselves as to what their church is doing. They will pay $1.50 for a secular newspaper, one-fourth of which is advertisements, another one-fourth positively unfit to read, and yet object to paying $2 for a good clean church paper.

We believe that it is the duty of our people, their duty to the church and to their families, to take our church papers wherever possible, even to the exclusion of all others.

We should form a habit and taste for reading. A taste for reading can be acquired as well as any other attainment. What a store of knowledge we could gather during our leisure hours which would otherwise be tedious and lonely, if we improved them in reading some good books or other good literature. Our young people should be taught to spend them in gathering valuable information which will qualify them for usefulness in life. Reading in the evening will keep them off the streets and out of bad society.

Money spent in good reading matter is not money misspent. It will yield abundant returns. If people would invest only a few dollars each year in books and take care of them as they should, it would not be many years until they would gather quite a respectable library. Books should be our life companions. A book once read with profit may be laid aside and after a time may be read again with still greater benefit. We should read for drill. Be determined to master that which you read. Reflect, digest, assimilate. A good way to retain that which we read is to underscore or mark in the margin that which we wish to impress upon the mind. Most of all and above all we should read the Word of God. It will ennoble our character, elevate the mind and increase our admiration for the blessed Book.—Evangelical Messenger.

The Gambling Mania.

The growth of the gambling mania throughout the country is an evil sign of the times evident to any observer. Nearly every secular journal devotes at least a full page each day to reports of horse-races, ball games and athletic contests; upon all of these in pool rooms and other resorts sums of money whose daily aggregate is enormous, are staked; the race tracks and ball grounds themselves are in many cases given over to the control of sharpers; and, apart from the use of cards and other familiar implements of gaming, the land is crowded with the devices and allurements of the gambler. The offering of prizes in the game of progressive euchre is but one instance, out of many which abound in social life, revealing therein the prevalence of the spirit and practice of the gamester. Business men are on the alert, watching the habits and associations of their clerks, and warning the young men in their employ that they must not frequent the race track. With each week comes a fresh record of ruin wrought by the habit of gaming. The losses and gains of the day at the races are common matters of speech wherever crowds of young men gather in our great cities. The pastor who has not studied this phase of our modern life will find it full of suggestions and lessons for a message from the pulpit. Parents, teachers, employers, and others, ought to warn all within reach against the insidious and deadly fascinations of this habit. The young man who has begun to bet on race horses and on the results of base ball games, or to gamble in any way, has entered upon a sure, swift course to ruin.—Central Christian Advocate.

Touch Not, Taste Not.

Edward W. Bok, editor of The Ladies' Home Journal, in reply to a young man who wrote him, asking, "Is not a young man placed at a disadvantage when he refuses wine at dinners?" says: "I can only speak from experience. I have attended a great many public dinners, and am still a pretty constant attendant at such affairs. I have never touched a drop of wine upon these occasions, and yet I have never been made to feel that I was placed at a disadvantage. Indeed, I am under the impression that a young man who refuses wine is always at a distinct advantage. A strong adherence to any good principle is always a recommendation of a young man's character in the eyes of his elders."

To another, who asked if total abstinence from liquors is not a barrier to social success, he replies: "I can honestly say that a young man's best and highest social success is assured just in proportion as he abstains from wine. An indulgence in intoxicants of any sort has never helped a man to any social position worth the having; on the contrary, it has kept many from attaining a position to which by birth and good breeding they are entitled. No young man will ever find that the principle of abstinence from liquor is a barrier to any success, social, commercial, or otherwise. On the other hand, it is the one principle in his life which will, in the long run, help him more than any other."

A True Gentleman.

One of the highest encominms that can be pronounced upon any young man, worthy of it, is to say that he is a true gentleman. There is a world of meaning in the term. It means more than mere politeness. It is more than strict conformity to written rules of the best fashionable etiquette. One may be faultless in his adherence to the best form of social behavior, and yet lack much of the true gentleman. The true gentleman is the soul of honor, is beautifully candid, is deeply considerate of the rights of others, is quick to acknowledge his own faults rather than lay them on others, and consults the good of others rather than seek his own preferment. The true gentleman is known by his strict sense of honor; by his sympathy, his gentleness, his forbearance and his generosity. He is essentially a man of truth, speaking and doing right at all times, not merely in private behavior. Truthfulness is moral transparency. Hence the true gentleman promises nothing he has not the means of performing. He never breaks his word, for he scorns to lie, in word or deed, and is ready to brave all consequences rather than debase himself by falsehood. No dishonest man is a true gentleman, nor is he who purposely takes advantage of another, whether the latter be a foe or a friend. The true gentleman does by others as he would have others do by him.—Selected.

Living at Our Best.

Do not try to do a great thing; you may waste all your life waiting for the opportunity, which may never come. But since little things are always claiming your attention, do them as they come, from a great motive, for the glory of God, to win his smile and approval, and to do good to men. It is harder to plod on in obscurity, acting thus, than to stand on the high places of the field, within the view of all, and to do deeds of valor at which rival armies stand still to gaze. To fulfill faithfully the duties of your station; to use to the uttermost the gifts of your ministry; to bear chafing annoyances and trivial irritations as martyrs bore the pillory and stake; to find the one noble trait in people that try and molest you; to put the kindest construction on unkind acts and words; to love with the love of God even the unthankful and evil; to be content to be a fountain in the midst of a wild valley of stones, nourishing a few lichens and wild flowers, or now and again a thirsty sheep; and to do this always, and not for the praise of man, but for the sake of God—this makes a great life. —F. B. Meyer.

"Helping Somewhere."

"Is your father at home?" I asked a small child on our village doctor's doorstep.

"No," he said, "he's away."

"Where do you think I could find him?"

"Well," he said, with a considering air, "you've got to look for some place where people are sick or hurt, or something like that. I don't know where he is, but he's helping somewhere."

And I turned away with this little sermon in my heart. If you want to find the Lord Jesus, you've got to set out on a path of helping somewhere, of lifting somebody's burden, and lo! straightway one like unto the Son of man will be found at your side.

Hints for the Thirsty.

It is a mistake to suppose that the drinking of water in hot weather is injurious. The system requires a large quantity of water to enable it to carry on its functions to the best advantage. It is wise, therefore, to drink freely of pure cold water at all seasons, and especially during the hot weather. The system relieves itself from the effects of intense heat by free perspiration. If anyone doubts this, let him recall times when, in the midst of heat, the system, through some derangement, was unable to perspire. At such times we really suffer from heat. In order to carry on successfully the work of perspiration, the body must have a supply of fluid, and there is no way in which this want can be so well supplied as by drinking freely of cold water.

But water ice-cold does not come within this recommendation. It is too cold to be healthful, and in many cases is really dangerous. It chills the mouth, throat and stomach, checks the secretions of all, and increases rather than diminishes thirst. It is a good rule to raise the temperature to a safe degree, or to drink it very slowly. In no case should large quantities of ice-water be poured into the stomach. It is always injurious and often fatal.—Pittsburg Advocate.

Summer food is worthy of as much thought as its drink. In northern latitudes the natives live on fat meats, oils, etc. The system demands such supplies to feed its fires and enable it to resist the cold. In the southern climates the people live on fruits, vegetables and other articles of a light character. Here are hints for us. A Summer diet should be nourishing, but light and mild. Fortunately we have abundant supplies of delicious and nutritious berries, fruits and vegetables to supply our needs.—Exchange.

Antidote for Poison Oak.

This simple remedy for poison oak will be gratefully received by those who can never enjoy a day in the woods on account of that dread foe. Take a handful of parsley, cut it fine and fry in a large tablespoonful of lard until crisp, then strain the lard and allow it to cool, and use as an ointment, whenever the part affected feels irritated. Also take the root of parsley and make a tea by simply boiling, and drink it.—E. M. Lucas.

The best time to drink water is before meals, when the stomach is empty. Taken then, it cools and flushes the stomach, and, passing out rapidly through the system, supplies the fluid necessary for healthful action. It is then tonic in its effects, and not depressing. Taken in large quantities when the stomach is full and digestion is going on, it dilutes the gastric juices, impedes digestion, and produces many injurious results.—Exchange.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

SALLY LUNN.—Twelve hours before it is to be eaten set a sponge with one large Irish potato boiled and mashed, three tablespoonfuls of good yeast (one compressed yeastcake), one tablespoonful of sugar, and flour to make a soft batter. In three hours this should be light, when add one quart of sifted flour through which has been rubbed a cup of mixed butter and lard, four eggs well beaten and one cup of milk. The batter should be so stiff as to scarcely drop from a spoon. Beat long and hard. Five hours later beat again. Let it rise again until very light, and bake in a two-quart cake tin for supper.—Exchange.

STUFFED EGGS (French Style).—Take six hard-boiled eggs, shell and split them in half lengthwise, carefully noting the halves so as to fit them together again. Remove the yolks, rub them to a paste in melted butter, add four tablespoonfuls of minced ham, tongue or chicken. Season with salt, pepper, vinegar and mixed mustard. Stir all well together and fill the halved eggs with this preparation. Fit the halves neatly together and arrange them on a dish in the form of a pyramid. Garnish with sprigs of parsley or lettuce leaves, is a good dish for luncheon.—Good Housekeeping.

In Memoriam.

The sad death of Rev. Noel B. Norwood awoke a genuine chord of grief in many hearts throughout the bounds of the Louisiana Conference. A better man, as citizen, husband, and father; a truer Christian, as that subject is explained in fellowship and service, and more eloquent preacher of the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, the writer has not known. He was correspondingly distinguished for zeal and usefulness; and if the former sometimes ran the judgment of other people, rarely did his own, and never his conscience. The writer had many opportunities of judging, and this is his solemn conviction: He hated everything that was bad and loved everything that was good, and that of necessity put him in advance of the average Christian man, as did also his determination on all appropriate occasions to stand up for his convictions. He loved the souls for whom Jesus died especially, and for this cause suffered remarkable hardships to carry the gospel to them. Many who read these lines will be able to testify. No preacher among us received smaller salaries (with a large family), and did better work. He was eccentric in the pulpit and out of it, but it was of neither a hateful or a hurtful kind; and he had in an unusual degree, and contributing much of interest to his personality, those unfailing attributes of genius, humor, and pathos. How we enjoyed his visits to the parsonage, with unrivalled table talk and tete-a-tete, and laughed and prayed when it came his turn to preach! But the revival meeting! Of the merit of his preaching, he was heard by critical audiences for several weeks in one of our leading churches in New Orleans, and the very best judges did not hesitate to say that it was equal to the best. But independently of qualities like these, as a friend he was true as the day, and as unfailing as his strength in his pocket. A nobleman by nature and as generous as the sun that filled his heart with golden tribute, he was forced by temperament to dislike many things that are tolerated in our day, both in the world and the church. An unique personality indeed was this our friend who amidst the richest gems of natural and acquired graces of temperament rather than of deportment, and in the finest gold of character. It seems almost a strange providence that two such men as Bros. Norwood and Parker, so like and yet so unlike, and the glorious complement of each other in many particulars in which they differed, revealing individualities equally strong and eccentric, the acknowledged wits of the Conference, its north and south poles of humor, so to speak; both in the pride of their powers as self-denying itinerants, and reaping the fruits of faithful pastorates, and both waging the battle for sanctification at the opposite boundaries of the Conference field with unexampled devotion, should have been called away so suddenly, so mysteriously, and at dates so nearly identical. But mystery is perhaps the appropriate veil of the actions of the Great Being we serve; and if it were not, might we not be consoled by the reflection that he who buries two workmen can raise up an hundred?—and that he who has clothed past ministries with power can make those of the future, upon which his gifts descend, doubly efficient?

Let the dear orphans of Bro. Norwood, so suddenly bereft of both father and mother, and left almost destitute of the means of support, become subjects of prayer at every Methodist hearthstone in Louisiana.

HUNTER—Mrs. ELIZA C. HUNTER (nee Spikes) was born, July 13, 1809, in Edgefield district, S. C., and died June 20, 1895, at the home of her brother, Dr Joseph Spikes, in Water Valley, Miss She professed faith in Christ under the ministry of the Rev. Joel Townsend in 1832, and united with the M. E. Church, South, in which she spent a devoted Christian life. In 1839, with her parents, Wm. and Ann Spikes, she migrated to Chambers county, Ala. In 1848 she was happily married to the Rev. John Hunter, of the Memphis Conference, at which time she moved to Mississippi.

Although she was in her eighty-sixth year, she was apparently strong until last April, when she was smitten with a stroke of paralysis, from which time she was confined to her bed, where she suffered patiently. Her life and all were fully consecrated to the service of God. Her wonderful strength and activity of mind were maintained in this ripe old age. She was an intelligent Christian. There was a deep, common-sense meaning in all that she said. The religion which she had practiced and enjoyed for sixty-three years now sounded in every tone of voice, in every word of speech, and beamed through every feature of her face. Oh, blessed joy and peace and rapture of a triumphant faith!

I esteemed it a gracious privilege to be with her and hear her rich experience. Her last words to me were words of inspiration. As she grasped my hand, and seemed to look far out over the harvest fields of God, she said, "Preach the Word." These words continually burn in my heart. She was a true and noble type of Christian womanhood. She rests in peace. H. D. ESTES.

CAMPBELL—JOHN CAMPBELL was born in North Carolina, Oct. 23, 1816. His father moved from that State to Pickens county, Ala., when John was in his fifth year, and from there he moved to Carroll county, Miss., where he grew to manhood. In 1842 he went to Panola county, Miss., to care for a widowed sister, and while there he met Miss Anna Merriman, to whom he was happily married, Dec. 26, 1848. He was converted under the ministry of A. J. See in 1865, and joined the M. E. Church, South, at old Emory, near Sardis, where he was highly esteemed as a citizen, reverenced as a devoted Christian; was always ready to throw a veil of charity over the foibles of his fellow-men. He was a devoted husband, a gentle and loving father, and in his house many a wearied itinerant found a pleasant home, as some who have shared of his hospitalities will testify as they read this obituary notice.

He died near Carrollton, in Carroll county, Dec. 30, 1894. He was permitted to have a glimpse of the better world just before his death, and urged upon his family and friends to meet him there. He leaves an aged companion and a large family, with a host of friends, to mourn his absence. May they all be faithful unto death, and meet him there!

HOLLY—Mrs. ANN ELIZA HOLLY (nee Cochran) was born July 24, 1839, and departed this life at her home, Shrock, Miss., June 7, 1895.

Sister Holly united with the Protestant Methodist Church at old Union Church, in 1857, under the ministry of one Mr. Bankston, in which church she remained till death called her home. She was married to Jethro M. Holly, Oct. 2, 1856, who with seven children mourn her death. I am told that Sister Holly has been a great sufferer for several years, but bore it all patiently till the last, when she called all the family to her bed and asked them to meet her in heaven.

Sunday morning, at ten o'clock, I preached her funeral sermon to a very large congregation, and then laid her to rest in the old Fellowship Graveyard to await the resurrection morn.

May God's grace comfort and support the sorrowing loved ones, and lead them safely to heaven! R. A. BRELAND.

NEWSOM—PERCY WOODWARD, infant son of W. J. and Ella Newsom, was born Aug. 17, 1888, and died June 20, 1895, less than two months of seven years of age He was a Sunday-school scholar, and regularly attended Sunday-school before he could speak plain; and, as he grew older, his interest in all the Sunday-school exercises—singing, prayer, lessons and collections—increased with his ability to appreciate them. He was a well-developed child. His appearance and manner attracted attention as he passed about the village, and men and women were heard to say, "That is my boy." He would go to his mother, and say: "I love papa; I love you, mama; but I love God best." He has gone to his happy home in heaven, but leaves a sad home behind him. God bless the bereaved parents! J. D. NEWSOM.

To keep healthy in a malarial district one should eat a hearty breakfast before going out doors To keep the soul healthy in the world's sin-poisoned atmosphere one should feed heartily on the Word of God before going down to the store.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., July, '96. A little later it will be August, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

The special grand jury, called to investigate charges of corruption in the City Council of Chicago, met on July 11.

The National Educational Association convention, which closed in Denver, last week, had a registered attendance of 9,861.

Ex Governor Northen is colonizing Georgia. They say that he has located a colony not far from Atlanta of 1 200 families.

Episcopal Bishop Potter, of New York, is going to spend the coming month living in the slums of New York, doing some missionary work.

A cyclone swept over New York City, Jersey City and Cherry Hill, N. J., on July 13. Half a dozen lives were lost and scores of persons were injured.

Friends of Susan B. Anthony have raised funds to provide her an annuity of $800 a year. She has given to the woman's suffrage movement pretty nearly all she had.

On July 11, 53,000 delegates to the Christian Endeavor Convention were welcomed in Boston. The gathering was divided into three separate meeting. The 1896 meeting will be held in Washington City; that of 1897 in San Francisco.

The Navy Department has at last completed plans for the six new gunboats, to cost not more than $230,000 each, which were authorized by the last Congress, and it is presumed that bids will soon be invited from the ship-builders of the country.

A north-bound Illinois Central train ran into an open switch near Ponchatoula, La., and crashed into a lot of empty coal cars. The engineer was killed and the fireman and baggageman were seriously injured. Excepting a sharp jolt, the passengers escaped unhurt.

A Mr. McManus, who has recently leased a large estate on the Chestatee river, in Georgia, to work it for gold, says that there are twenty veins of gold ore or quartz in the property. He is working two shafts, which yield good ore, averaging from $8 to $10 a ton. In some streaks the yield is as high as $40 a ton.

Surgeon-Gen. Wyman is losing no time in making his preparations to meet the threatening invasion of yellow fever in Southern ports. Although the season at which this disease generally makes it appearance is still about a month off, arrangements have already been made to secure a thorough patrol of the Florida coast on both gulf and Atlantic sides.

They are going to have genuine Mexican bull fights at the Atlanta Exposition by a troupe now in training in Mexico. Some of the best Mexican matadors have been engaged, with trained horses and the best bulls to be had. It will be the full regular affair, with the trifling exception that provision will be made that neither the bulls nor the bull fighters can be seriously hurt.

Henry M. Stanley, the explorer, was elected to the House of Commons in the late election in England.

Seven hundred Chinese attacked Heinchu, Island of Formosa, on July 10. Two hundred of them were killed and many captured. On the Japanese side the loss was eleven men.

The natives of Ecuador burned the Catholic mission house at Caiceta, killed the priest in charge, and the sisters, who were employed in mission work among children, were driven out of the country.

The total results of the parliamentary elections in England, for which returns have been made July 15, are as follows: Conservatives, 151; liberal-unionists, 21; liberals, 23; Parnellites, 4; McCarthyites, 4; labor, 1; total, 204.

The negro colony in Mapimo, Mexico, has been abandoned. Four hundred of the deluded creatures having died from ill-treatment, the remainder became unruly, and the colony managers have resolved to get rid of them.

The reports received from time to time as to the course of events in the Island of Cuban are so utterly unreliable, no matter from what source received, that it is impossible to form an accurate idea of the actual situation.

The recent conference between the presidents of Salvador, Honduras and Nicaragua holds out an assurance of peace for those republics, by an arrangement that will practically prevent exiles from fomenting revolutions.

The Emperor has received letters from German princes insisting that unless the services of Prince Bismarck in 1870 have a proper tribute paid to them, the princes will refuse to be present at the celebration of German victories to be held in the Autumn in Alsace-Lorraine.

The relations between Prince Bismarck and the Emperor and his government continued to be strained. As further proof of this fact it deserves mention that Count Von Rantzau, Prince Bismarck's son-in-law, has resigned his mission as German minister to the Hague, and has left the state service entirely, in order to devote himself wholly to Prince Bismarck, at Friedrichsruhe, at the latter's request.

THE MAN SICK WITH PALSY CURED.

(Luke v, 18-26.)

1. Numerous are the ailments to which flesh is heir. Disease is hydra-headed.

(1) It has been computed that twenty-five per cent. of our race are afflicted with tuberculosis. Scientists experiment much, but the malady continues digging graves.

(2) Diphtheria and scarlet fever have come here to stay. Would that the anti-toxine serum proved an antidote.

(3) Bright's disease sadly increases. There must be something radically defective in our diet and mode of life.

(4) A visit to the sick-bed of friends, as well as a visit to our Charity Hospital, will rid us of damnable pride and vanity.

2. In the case of this man sick with palsy, his sin must have been the cause of his sickness. Forgiveness of his sin cured his sickness.

(1) Daily we come in contact with invalids who are the originators of their sickness. Sad that some men will run into the fire with their eyes wide open!

(2) In such cases the sickness is the punishment of breaking the natural laws. The salvation of Christ is not concerned—not chiefly so with such punishment. This salvation has to do with our state of the heart here below, and our doom in the hereafter.

3. But the fracture of the natural law, the punishment of which is ordinarily inevitable, includes the fracture of the moral law. Though we have to suffer on account of the former, we are still responsible to God for the latter.

3. The parties carrying the man sick with palsy were firm believers in the divinity of Christ. They believed that he could, and would, cure him.

(1) Faith begets zeal. The men uncovered the roof in order to bring the invalid before Christ. To encourage people to be zealous, useless. See to it that they acquire faith, and zeal will follow as a matter of course.

(2) Christ saw the faith of these zealous friends, and cured the object of their solicitude. Intercession is a privilege as well as a duty. Frequently the doom of unbelievers in our hand. Can we be saved if, on account of our neglect, they are lost?

(3) Then be up and doing!

"Rescue the perishing,
Care for the dying;
Snatch them in pity from sin and the grave."

The modest card of this long-established and celebrated school for young ladies will be found in another column. It is the oldest and most extensively equipped school for young ladies in Virginia. It seems to prosper under all conditions—it holds its own in times of peace and times of war, in times of prosperity and times of depression. During the war it was the only school in Old Dominion, for either sex, that kept up its organization and work, and during that period it overflowed with pupils; and now in this of sore financial depression it is still full. Parents and guardians would do well to look into this school. It possesses merits of a high order, or it could not so continuously prosper. It draws pupils from a wide area; 21 States were represented last session.

The Queen and Crescent Route to Chickamauga.

Veterans and their friends will all want to attend the great National Park dedication at Chickamauga this Fall. It will be a notable event.

Do you want to know how to make the trip and what you'll see when you reach the journey's end? Write to W. C. Rinearson, G. P. A. of the Queen and Crescent Route, Cincinnati. Illustrated and descriptive matter upon application.

The Queen and Crescent Route to Chattanooga is the best line, and has the reputation of unequaled service of handsome trains of palace day coaches and through sleepers from New Orleans, Meridian, Shreveport, Vicksburg and Birmingham to Chattanooga. Quick schedules and interesting scenery en route help to make the Queen and Crescent the Southern route par excellence.

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Palmer Creek Camp Meeting will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in October, and continue for nine days or more. This well-known camp ground has been a great blessing to all the country around, and if you wish to attend a good, old-fashioned, soul-saving camp-meeting, come and be with us at Palmer. A general invitation is given to all ministers of the gospel, and those who come will be met with hack at Mississippi City. There will be a public tent, furnishing meals at twenty-five cents, and two strawed sleeping tents—one for men, and one for women, where those may sleep, free of charge, who bring their own bedding. Come and be with us.

E. T. Breland, P. C.

The Fern Jones Camp Meeting will open on the second day of August, 1895. The camp ground is located on the L., N. O. and T. R. R., two miles north of Gloster. Trains will stop at the camp ground to take on and put off passengers.

The meeting will continue ten days. Gate fee, 25 cents per capita for season tickets, except on Sundays, when the gates will be thrown open to all free of charge. Board and lodging can be had for $1 per day, or 35 cents for single meals.

Ministers of the gospel are cordially invited to attend.

P. E. Natchez district.

Jackson, Miss.

The Topisaw Camp Meeting, located nine miles east of McComb City, will begin on Aug. 8, 1895, and run eight days.

Preachers generally are invited, and will be provided for. Hacks will run daily from McComb City to Camp Ground.

H. P. Lewis, P. C.

Our camp meeting at Bethel Camp Ground, Wilkinson county, Miss., will begin on the fifteenth day of August, 1895. We have no gate fees, but we have good order, large congregation, and good accommodations. We invite our brethren in the ministry to come particularly, and to come prepared to preach and work. There will be a hack running daily from Whitaker station, on the Y., M. and V. R. R., out to Bethel Camp Ground; distance, about six miles. Come one, come all; and Mr. Editor, too.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

The Problem Solved.

How to Exterminate House Flies.

CHEAP, NEAT, EFFICIENT.

A FEW WORDS, AND TO THE POINT.

For years we have been perfecting a cheap, neat and sure way to destroy flies, and have succeeded. For past three years our "TAR HEEL GRIP" has been on the market, and we have the highest endorsements from some of the most popular housekeepers, hotels, etc., from all over the country, as to its merits.

Every neat housekeeper wishes to know the secret, or get the preparation. It can be manufactured at home, the ingredients can be purchased at any Drug Store at a cost of not over fifty cents, for preparing enough to last a year. There is no poison whatever about it; no dead flies falling in everything, no flies to drown or burn.

We will send the complete formula, right to manufacture, and all necessary directions for $1.10, or we will send enough already prepared to last two years for $1.00. Eight $1.00 packages, $5.00. If we send the preparations, it should go by express, and charges are paid by purchaser. They are generally high, really more sometimes than the cost to manufacture; so it is best to send for the formula, then you can make it every Spring; also good money can be made furnishing it to your friends, if you desire. We guarantee the best satisfaction; we run this in connection with our seed business. Your orders shall have our prompt attention, and we will please you. Remit $1.00 in ordinary letter at our risk. Register larger sums, or send express money order or check.

SHOW ME THE WAY.

BY ELLA WHEELER.

Show me the way that leads to the true life.
I do not care what tempests may assail me,
I shall be given courage for the strife;
I know my strength will not desert or fail me;
I know that I shall conquer in the fray:
Show me the way.

Show me the way up to a higher plane,
Where body shall be servant to the soul.
I do not care what tides of woe or pain
Across my life their angry waves may roll,
If I but reach the end I seek some day:
Show me the way.

Show me the way, and let me bravely climb
Above vain grievings for unworthy treasures;
Above all sorrow that finds haim in time;
Above small triumphs or belittling pleasures;
Up to those heights where these things seem child's play:
Show me the way.

Show me the way to that calm, perfect peace
Which springs from an inward consciousness of right;
To where all conflicts with the flesh shall cease,
And self shall radiate with the spirit's light.
Though hard the journey and the strife, I pray
Show me the way.

A Chapter from Theology of Fatherhood (Revised).

BY REV. J. H. RENNEBREW, COLUMBUS, MISS.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

The first condition required of men in retracing their steps and coming back to God, that they may be saved, is faith. This comes by hearing, and implies something to be believed—a message. This message we have in the gospel of Christ, which Paul says (Romans i, 17) "is the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Again he tells us in Romans x, 9, "If thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved." He substantially makes the same epitome of the gospel of Christ to be believed unto salvation, in the latter part of the fourth chapter of Romans. But it was written, "For us also, to whom it shall be imputed, if we believe on him who raised up Jesus our Lord from the dead, who was delivered for our offenses, and was raised again for our justification." One may believe the gospel as stated (and perhaps many do) who believe "in vain." Their faith, as James says, "is dead," because it is inactive—not productive of good works. The subject of it does not believe "with the heart." Such a faith does not take hold upon the affections and so influence the life. In other words, it does not produce repentance. It may be that the subject of it is too much in love with the world—its forbidden pleasures and pursuits—hence is unwilling to make the self-sacrifice necessary to become a Christian, and, therefore, procrastinates for "a more convenient season." However this may be, the gospel believed with the heart is God's power unto salvation—that is, such a belief will work out or result in salvation, and those who have been brought under the influence of its mighty motives will always ask, "What must I do to be saved?" To this inquiry of the believing penitent Peter answered on Pentecost, "Repent, and be baptized, everyone of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

Christian baptism came after John's baptism, and was never administered before Pentecost. It is probable that even the apostles, up to that time, did not know what would constitute Christian baptism; only they knew that they would "baptize into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." But when they received the Spirit on Pentecost, who was their infallible guide in matters of faith and practice, then it was they learned that they were to "baptize into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ." Baptizo, in the classics, mean to immerse. We believe that all standard lexicographers agree to this; but Christian baptism is unknown in the Greek classics, and, as an evidence of this fact, baptizo in them nowhere implies water any more than oil, vinegar, air, or earth. On the contrary, in the New Testament it does imply water. We can't administer Christian baptism without water; therefore, we will not do, as many have done, appeal to the lexicographers. That would be to abandon practically the fundamental principle of Protestantism, for we believe that the Word of God is a sufficient guide in matters of faith and practice. Instead, therefore, of trying the Bible by the lexicons, we would rather try the lexicons by the Bible, and thus determine whether or not their definitions are scriptural. Let us not hastily conclude that because baptizo in the classics means to immerse, and in the New Testament always implies the use of water, that therefore Christian baptism is the immersion in water of the believing penitent in connection with the baptismal formula. Even should it be admitted that baptizo means "immerse" in the New Testament, and implies the use of water, we could not even then, in compliance with Peter's instruction on Pentecost, baptize into water, especially when we are told expressly to "baptize into the name of Jesus Christ." This is not exceptional. There is no warrant in the Word of God that the apostles ever, in a single instance after Pentecost, baptized in or into water, but, on the contrary, always "into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ."

The disciples at Samaria were baptized by Philip "into (eis) the name of the Lord Jesus." Also Acts x, 48, when Peter went down to Cesarea, to the house of Cornelius, after the Holy Ghost fell on them, "commanded them to be baptized in the name of the Lord." When Paul went to Ephesus, finding certain disciples there that had been baptized by Apollos, he said to them, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" And they said unto him, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." And he said unto them, "Unto what, then, were ye baptized?" The crucial character of this question is evident. It was designed to elicit the fact (if such was the case) that they were not baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus, else they would certainly have known that they had the promise of the Holy Ghost. Accordingly they answered, "Unto (eis) John's baptism," which was not baptism into the name of Christ, but only the baptism of repentance; hence Paul at once baptized them "into the name of the Lord Jesus." In writing to the Corinthians, some of whom were for Paul, some for Cephas, and others for Christ, he asked them: "Were ye baptized into the name of Paul? I thank God I baptized none of you except Crispus and Gaius, lest any should say that I have baptized in my own name." (I. Cor. i, 13) Here the apostle evidently refers to the fact that all disciples were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. But you say, "Did not Christ commission his apostles to 'disciple all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost?'" Yes. But that is not three names; it is one name, and that name is the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Besides, the practice of the apostles under the guidance of the Holy Spirit is the best exposition of the commission. We can not reasonably escape the conclusion, that inasmuch as the apostles baptized only into the name of the Lord Jesus, that this is what our Lord meant in the commission. There is but one baptism, but for the sake of being better understood, we might subdivide it into the sign and seal of baptism. The sign refers to that which is outward and visible; the seal to that which is within and spiritual.

The History of Sunday-Schools.

[Published by request of the Kosciusko District Conference.]

The history of the Sunday-school, although confined almost entirely to the nineteenth century, is so remarkable and so full of results that I can hope to do no more than present an imperfect sketch of it in this paper. Unmistakably the Sunday-school is the child of Providence, and its birth marked an epoch in the wonderful story of Christianity.

To Robert Raikes, a printer of Gloucester, England, more than to any other individual, has been accorded the honor of inaugurating the Sunday-school movement. It is a fact, however, that the suggestion of such an idea first came to him from a young Methodist woman, Sophia Cook by name, afterwards the wife of Samuel Bradburn, a Wesleyan preacher. In the year 1781 the two were discussing the condition of the neglected street waifs, when Mr. Raikes asked, "What can we do for them?" "Teach them to read, and take them to church," was Miss Cook's reply. Acting on the suggestion, Mr. Raikes at once founded a Sunday-school for the instruction of these unfortunate children, and Miss Cook was its first teacher.

That there did exist, however, something akin to this many years prior to the above date, seems to be the fact. There was Hannah Ball, of Wycombe, England, another Methodist woman, who, in 1767, organized a Sunday-school, "and was instrumental in training many children in the knowledge of the Scriptures." And Ludwig Hacker, in Pennsylvania, in 1747; John Wesley, in Savannah, Ga., in 1736, whose aim was "to teach reading, writing, 'casting accounts,' and the catechism;" Joseph Alleine, of England, 1688; the Pilgrim Fathers, 1674; Bishop Borromes, of Milan, 1580; John Knox, 1560, and Martin Luther, 1527.

All these, however, appear to have been merely tentative efforts, and none of them attracted more than local and passing notice, until Raikes gave it a thorough trial for three or four years, and then published an account of the Sunday-school in his own paper, and in 1785 in Wesley's Arminian Magazine. Mr. Wesley seems to have taken hold of the movement vigorously. It was he who "originated and put into practice the idea of enlisting unpaid teachers" for the Sunday-school. It was almost prophetic when he said: "Perhaps God may have a deeper end therein than we are aware of. Who knows but some of the schools may become nurseries for Christians!"

About the time Mr. Raikes established his school in Gloucester, Benjamin Rush and Matthew Cary started one in Philadelphia; so that a gracious Providence seems to have been leading in this important matter on both sides of the Atlantic at the same time.

Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut says that Bishop Asbury, in the house of Thomas Crenshaw, in Hanover county, Va., in 1786, organized not only the very first Sunday-school in American Methodism, but what is claimed to have been the first on the American continent; and, further, that "the Methodist was the first of the churches in America to recognize the Sunday-school and take it under its care."

"In 1790 the General Conference directed a Minute to be made concerning the Sunday-school." The "Minute" is in part as follows: "Let persons be appointed . . . to teach . . . from six o'clock in the morning till ten, and from two o'clock in the afternoon till six, where it does not interfere with public worship." I wonder if children stayed for preaching in those days!

Let us note two facts just here: 1. The Sunday-school idea was first put in practice in behalf of poor and neglected children; and, 2. That the teachers were paid for their services.

In 1803 Rowland Hill and W. B. Gurney departed from the accepted custom in that country, and established a Sunday-school in which teachers were employed without pay.

In the same year the first "Union" was formed, called the "London Sunday-school Union," which still exists. In 1816 the "New York Sunday-school Union" was formed, and in 1824 the "American Sunday-school Union."

Like all epochal movements, in the church or elsewhere the Sunday-school in its formative period met with opposition, and from men in high places. "The Bishop of Rochester denounced it and urged the clergy" of the Church of England "not to support it." The attacks made upon it by the clergy of the Establishment are said to have been prompt and fierce. "The Presbyterian Church of Scotland also opposed it as a dangerous innovation."

But not by all those prominent in the church was it opposed or neglected. Far-seeing men and women saw in it great promise for the future. Such were John Newton, William Cowper, and others.

From those days until now the Sunday-school has grown in public favor, so that to-day every church worthy the name is moving like a conquering army to take all the children of the world for Christ; and until, as we consider the origin of the Sunday-school, its unpromising and unpretentious beginning a little more than a hundred years ago, with a little band of street arabs for a class, and to-day we behold the scene of many millions of children and young people gathering every Sabbath in 225,000 places of worship to study God's Word, we are ready to exclaim, "What hath God wrought!"

But to return to the line of history: To Rowland Hill and W. B. Gurney's school in London literature was furnished by the "Religious Tract Society of London," founded in 1799. This is the first account, so far as I know, of a regular supply of "literature" for Sunday-schools.

On this side the Atlantic it is said that from 1808 to 1823 several Sunday-school societies were formed in New York and Philadelphia. In 1824, as already stated, these were all consolidated in the American Sunday-school Union, which, in 1826, recommended a system of "uniform lessons."

A writer on this point says: "But denominational fences were then too high to accept the recommendation. It required forty-six years to level the mountains and fill up the valleys preparatory to the Sunday-school millennium, inaugurated in Indianapolis in 1872. It reflects great honor on this society that it had the wisdom and catholicity to anticipate by so many decades the uniform system of lessons now accepted by Protestant Christianity throughout the world."

The Sunday-school Union of the Methodist Episcopal Church was formed in 1827. To-day all important branches of Methodism, and Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists, Protestant Episcopalians, and others, have their Unions, Boards of Publication, and so on, for supplying their Sunday-schools with literature, the Primitive Baptists alone refusing to have anything to do with this great work. Even "Roman Catholics, Jews and Mormons have Sunday-schools."

Thenceforward from 1824 each denomination selected its own lessons and pursued its own plan of teaching them, until the adoption of the international system.

In his excellent little book, "The History of Sunday-schools," to which I am largely indebted in the preparation of this paper, Dr. Cunnyngham says that there was first "an era of mission Sunday-schools, teaching only the children of the poor, and for the most part secular studies;" and next the "era of Bible schools for children, teaching the Word of God in consecutive order from Genesis to Revelation," etc. He says that at this period "the mania for memorizing Scripture raged." He denominates this "an abnormal method" that "soon exhausted itself."

I wish to turn aside long enough to say that what the good and wise author calls a "mania for memorizing the Scriptures" was not without advantage. Portions of Scripture committed to memory by this writer under that system were permanently fixed there, and have been helpful ever since.

The "Limited Lesson" system following next, opened the way in the course of years for the international system.

Then we had the "Question Books," with Longking's notes as a help; and thus, from one thing to another still better, development went on until April, 1872, when the first National Sunday-school Convention was held in Indianapolis, Ind., where the present, or international, system was adopted by a practically unanimous vote. A committee of twelve leading men, ministers and laymen, was formed, whose duty it should be to "select a series of Bible lessons for twelve years." All Protestant denominations were ably represented in this convention. The committee, as now composed, "represents the United States, Canada, and Great Britain."

By thus systematizing the work, and broadening the scope and design of the Sunday-school, the best biblical scholarship and wisdom of the several Protestant Churches have been, and are being, utilized in the preparation of the lessons, so that with Quarterlies, Magazines, and "Notes on the Lessons," no one is excusable for not having an intelligent understanding of these lessons.

Vast results of Sunday-school work are seen in several directions:

1. Thousands and tens of thousands of young souls are being brought to Christ annually through this agency.

2. Everywhere the missionary spirit is being instilled into the hearts of the young people, and an enthusiasm awakened for the conversion of the heathen; so that, whereas only a little more than a century ago Robert Raikes and Sophia Cook started the movement in England by collecting a few "ragamuffins" together to "teach them the Bible," to-day more than 20,000,000 of Sunday-school scholars and workers from the best elements of Christian society everywhere constitute a mighty factor in the conquest of the nations for Christ.

3. There are Juvenile Missionary Societies and Christian Endeavor Societies everywhere, while our own Epworth League is fast forging its way to the front in all good works, and millions of copies of purest, best literature, the press-forms of which would never have been made up but for the Sunday-school, are going everywhere to bless and bring the world to Christ.

Now, I wish to close this paper, already too long, with a few figures showing the phenomenal growth of the Sunday-school: In 1803, 250,000 Sunday-school scholars were reported; fifty years later, 6,000,000; thirty years later still, or in 1884, 15,775,000. Today, in the United States alone, there are 9,718,432 scholars, with 1,305,939 teachers, while in all the world there are 224,562 Sunday-schools—these almost equalling in number the scholars of ninety-three years ago—2,239,728 teachers, and 20,268,933 scholars. In our own Southern Methodism, abundantly supplied with literature unexcelled and of all necessary grades, including the Magazine established by Rev. A. G. Haygood, D. D., in 1872, and the Sunday-School Visitor by Rev. Thos. O. Summers, D. D., in 1851, there were reported in 1893: Sunday-schools, 13,363; teachers, 95,204; scholars, 765,286—making a total of teachers and scholars of 860,490.

Thus the little seed has become a "great tree;" the "streamlet scant" has swelled to a mighty river, bearing its freight of souls on its broad bosom to the haven of eternal peace.

From China.

The following, which reaches us through the Mission Rooms from Bishop Galloway, will be read, we think, with great pleasure: "I have just received a cheerful letter from Rev. D. L. Anderson, presiding elder of the Soochow district, China Mission Conference, which accentuates the call for a speedy increase of our missionary force in that great field. Speaking of the District Conference, which had just adjourned, he says: 'It was decidedly the best thing of the sort we have ever had. The attendance was large—everybody in good spirits—and the Holy Ghost evidently with us. The reports from all the works were very encouraging. I have never heard such out here, and when I compare these reports with those made five or six years ago, I can hardly believe them. New probationers and new members reported from every charge—some more, some less—but everywhere indications of life and growth. Yesterday, the Sunday of the Conference, was, on the whole, the best day I have ever seen in the church in China. God was with us all day long, and I just can't keep back the tears of wonder and thankfulness as I write. I wish you could have been with us; it would have made your heart glad. One day of the Conference five men were baptized. Baptisms are not such a rarity with us now as they once were.' Of immediate and urgent needs growing out of changed and changing conditions, he thus speaks with the earnestness of strong conviction and full information: 'Everything indicates, more so now than when you were here, that now is the time to push our work. We ought to have been preparing for this several years ago; but as we did not, the best thing possible is to get out a number of good men immediately. Opportunities will be lost while they are getting the language, but there is no help for that now.' Of young Dr. Fearn, who has safely landed and entered heartily upon his work, he makes this kindly mention: 'Send us, if possible, more men like Fearn. We are all delighted with him. He comes to us like Barnabas "full of the Holy Ghost and faith."' In the face of such momentous facts, and with an ear to hear such an inspiring appeal, what will be the response of the church? The marvelous opportunities of the hour lay upon us a burden of tremendous responsibility. The world has never seen such a time as this. No harvest fields have ever waved such banners of golden promise. The laborers are ready, sickles in hand, and only waiting the word of command. Will not the churches ring out the order to-day, 'Go — go quickly — and reap for your Lord'"?

In the Living Present.

Inhabitants of San Francisco have selected Alaska as a Summer resort. It will soon be the American Switzerland. Sitka is already an American town. The Indian aborigines are rapidly decreasing. One of their medicine men well said, "My people are rapidly moving to the shade of the setting sun." The United States paid Russia three and a half million dollars for the peninsula. A good investment.

Our Mr. Eustis, American plenipotentiary at the court of France, has fallen a victim to an interviewer. Unbecoming his office, he said that he favored Cuban independence, annexation of Canada to the United States, etc. Mr. Eustis apologizes, saying that the reporter had been introduced to him as a journalist, not as a newspaper man. Thus he had expressed himself unguardedly.

The English (so-called) Liberals, composed of radicals, political schemers, socialists, etc., have met their Waterloo in the recent Parliamentary election. Even the former Secretary of Ireland, John Morley, has not been re-elected. Gladstone, "the Grand Old Man," as the Irish agitators call him, resigned his premiership in time to save himself the humiliation of this overwhelming defeat. Rosebery can now give his entire attention to his race horses.

The assassination of Stambuloff ex-premier of Bulgaria, at the capital of that country, on the fifteenth instant, was a most brutal affair. He was literally cut to pieces by the murderers. It is feared that the government, whose present chief is Prince Ferdinand, is party to the dark plot. Stambuloff was opposed to Russian influence; Ferdinand, on the other hand, is courting the same.

George W. Vanderbilt invests many millions in the South. For his mansion in Ashland, N. C., he has already paid four million dollars. Before it is completed it will cost that much more. Thus the grandchildren squander what the old Commodore amassed. Are not afraid of the money power. It requires wisdom to retain what is inherited. Wisdom. Yes, and the fool and his money are soon parted.

Cuba will ultimately be free, the same as the United States in 1776. Spain will wreck herself in attempting subjugation. What? Annex Cuba to the United States? No. The inhabitants are too much of the South American order—chronically revolutionary. Besides, the Roman Catholicism on that island is threateningly dark.

In stock speculation the operators are classed as bulls and bears. Usually, though, the ass is more prominent in said operations than the two mentioned brutes. ICH DIEN.

Young Men Wanted.

MR EDITOR: I learn that at the last session of the Mississippi Conference the question, "Who are admitted on trial?" was not asked because the Conference was already full, although a number of applicants had passed an approved examination. We need ten young men, who have in them the elements of success, to take work in this Conference; consecrated young men, who can, if need be, go beyond our present limits and build up a good circuit or station on a meager salary, and with plenty of hard work. This is one of the grandest States in the Union, and is overstocked with sinners; but it is a grand field for a young man full of religion, good judgment and zeal to develop himself, and to bring out all the man that is in him. Great opening here to develop and to grow up with the country. I have been here twenty years, and know whereof I speak; and if there are any young men of the above description in the bounds of the Mississippi Conference who wish to come and cast their lot with us in this heaven-ordained work, let them write to me at this place for all desired information (stamp inclosed), and I will give them the desired information. Our Conference convenes on the twenty-ninth of August. If any should come, it would be greatly to their advantage to be here before or at Conference. I write this in behalf of our church here, which has suffered so much for want of efficient workers.

A SERMON IN RHYME.

If you have a friend worth loving,
Love him. Yes, and let him know
That you love him, ere life's evening
Tinge his brow with sunset glow.
Why should good words ne'er be said
Of a friend—till he is dead?

If you hear a song that thrills you,
Sung by any child of song,
Praise it. Do not let the singer
Wait deserved praises long.
Why should one who thrills your heart
Lack the joy you may impart?

If you hear a prayer that moves you
By its humble, pleading tone,
Join it. Do not let the seeker
Bow before his God alone.
Why should not your brother share
The strength of "two or three" in prayer?

If you see the hot tears falling
From a brother's weeping eyes,
Share them; and, by kindly sharing,
Own your kinship with the skies.
Why should anyone be glad
When a brother's heart is sad?

If a silvery laugh goes rippling
Through the sunshine on his face,
Share it. 'Tis the wise man's saying—
For both grief and joy a place.
There's health and goodness in the mirth
In which an honest laugh has birth.

If your work is made more easy
By a friendly, helping hand,
Say so. Speak out brave and truly,
Ere the darkness veil the land;
Should a brother workman dear
Falter for a word of cheer?

Scatter thus your seeds of kindness,
All enriching as you go—
Leave them. Trust the Harvest Giver,
He will make each seed to grow.
So, until its happy end,
Your life shall never lack a friend.

Prayer in Public Worship.

I want to call the attention of the church to page 99, paragraph 217 of the new Discipline, on the subject of the posture in public prayers, to be observed by our preachers and people.

Answer 1: "The morning service shall be conducted in the following order":

(1) Singing, the congregation standing.

(2) Prayer, the congregation kneeling.

(3) Reading a lesson out of the Old Testament and another out of the New.

(4) Singing, the congregation sitting.

(5) Preaching.

(6) Singing, the congregation standing.

(7) Prayer, the congregation kneeling.

(8) The benediction.

Paragraph 218: "The afternoon and evening services shall be conducted the same as the morning, except that one of the lessons, or both, may be omitted at the discretion of the minister."

Now, you see our Discipline requires all our people to kneel in time of prayers in our public services, both before and after preaching. And to fail to do so is a violation of our church vows, unless we are so afflicted that we are not able to do so—a vow we took voluntarily before God, the church, and the world.

Let me refer our ministers to page 69, paragraph 146: "And do not mend our rules, but keep them." "Are you willing to conform to the Discipline of the church?"

Now we, as ministers, all answered in the affirmative. Well, have we been faithful to our vows and a wholesome example to our people? Have we the right to violate a solemn vow we took before God and the people? No, surely not.

And now let me call the attention of the laity to page 211, paragraph 441, new Discipline: "Will you be subject to the Discipline of the church?" "I will endeavor so to do, God being my helper." One of the rules is to kneel in time of public prayer in our services. Do we obey, or do we keep, our vows? Have we the right, preachers or people, to disregard our vows at any point? If so, at what point? What part of the rules shall I keep, and what part disregard? Have I the right, as a minister or layman in the Methodist Church, to sit or stand during the public prayers? No; unless I am so afflicted I am not able to kneel. I would have the same right to attend the theater or dance that I would to sit or stand during the public prayers. I do not say it would be as bad a sin, for it would not. To attend the theater or dance would be a double sin. The attending would be a sin itself, and the breaking of our vow, where we promised not to go, would make it a double sin; while the sitting or standing in time of public prayers would be only the sin of breaking a vow. "Pay thy vows." Oh, what a grievous sin in the sight of God to fail to pay our vows! "One sinner destroyeth much good." (Eccl. ix, 18.) One, by violating his or her vows, may lead many astray, and especially a leading member of the church. Guard your influence. "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all." (James ii, 10.) I am afraid insubordination is one of the leading sins of the church now. We do not have enough respect for the forms and rules of the church and for our vows. The Discipline says we shall kneel in the public prayers, but we sit or stand. We ought to change the rule, or obey it. If it is wrong, take it out; if it is right, keep it; and if you have vowed to keep it, do it by all means.

I can remember hearing my parents say that the people used to kneel at their seats when they first came into the church, but they do not do that now, and many of them never kneel at all.

May God help us to be obedient and submissive to the law of the church, and keep the church floor so nice and clean it will not soil our nice clothes to kneel on it in prayer to God!

Correspondence.

Up to Date—July 8.

Since my last "musings by the way" I have been out among the dear Methodists soliciting their favors for East Mississippi Female College. Just as other candidates, I have met with varied experiences. In these rounds I have met aspirants for every office from governor and United States senator to justice of the peace and constable, and, doubtless, I have shaken hands with as many as they. In these travels I have heard much about the high plane upon which this political campaign is being made—the marvelous educational campaign—and yet I have heard as much that was demagogic, as much appeal to prejudice and passion, as ever before. In the same little towns I have seen the gatherings referred to by the local papers (all Democrats) as the grandest successes, or the most stupendous failures, just as the paper might, or might not be, in agreement with the sentiment of the meeting. The Bimetallic Convention at Memphis is referred to by one class as: "Magnificent Failure—Handful Present—Great Disappointment—Only a Half-Dozen States Represented—Bimetallists Gloomy." The other comes out with equally conspicuous headlines: "Tremendous Gathering—Never Equalled—Twenty-Eight States Represented—Three Thousand Delegates on Hand—First Men of the Nation Deliver Enthusiastic Speeches—Bimetallism Bound to Win."

Now, Mr. Editor, I must confess that I see no high plane represented by this procedure; and, to me, the educational feature is certainly not in the right direction. Why can't our public journals have the manliness to see something worthy of their respect in their opponents? Why try to influence public opinion by such methods? The truth is, the common people are not so easily deceived, and long since have learned to take what they see in the average political paper with much allowance.

In this day of newspapers let not the office seeker think he can fool the average American citizen.

In my travels I have rubbed up against not a few "gold bugs," though I saw naught but the bug, the gold being conspicuously out of sight.

I've had a golden time, and confidently expect to add largely to our matriculations next September, and promise to make no discriminations against payment of bills, whether in the yellow coin or in the white, at sixteen to one.

Within two weeks I have taken in four District Conferences, one Children's Day, and a grand barbecue. Everywhere there was an appearance of peace, plenty, and good cheer. Farmers are rejoicing in the prospects of good crops, especially of corn. While, as a rule, the preachers reported "nothing as yet" on many collections, and in most instances meager supplies for themselves, yet all were cheerful and hopeful. What a trusting, happy set these Methodist preachers are! I owe them lasting gratitude for their patience and encouraging words. I have met many old friends and formed many new friendships, which will be a delight in years to come. While I have found the high school system is giving satisfaction, I find many ambitious young men and women who long for a college training.

The only shadow that has fallen over me during these pleasant associations with the people has been just at this point. How I have wished for a small portion of the receipts of Wall street, that I might help these aspiring young minds to secure their coveted prize! Would that all could so see it!

Christian Citizenship.

When Wesley said, "I favor a league, offensive and defensive, with every soldier of Jesus Christ," he entran his age by a hundred years, and indicated the method whereby the world is to be conquered for righteousness.

It is our proud and happy privilege to live in the land of Uncle Sam, under a 'government of the people, by the people and for the people." For the first time in history, the common people are in power. The theory of the past was, that the masses are born saddled and bridled to be ridden, and that the classes are born booted and spurred to ride. Our fathers repudiated this theory—the probate court theory of government, that wealth and education are to hold the people in perpetual tutelage. Without any precedent on file, they held that it is safe to trust men with the exercise of all their rights. And they based the state on manhood suffrage.

Selfish wealth and dilettante scholarship seek to excuse their own sins of commission and omission, by laying all the blame of the present unhappy situation upon universal suffrage. "What can be expected," asks Mr. Purseproud, "when hod-carriers and 'dagos' neutralize the votes of gentlemen?" "True," lisps Mr. Vertigo Topiofty, 'quite true; what can be expected?"

This is an un-American whine. When our fathers established universal suffrage, they "builded wiser than they knew." For, by giving every citizen a vote, they took hands of wealth and education to give the poorest and the most ignorant an equal opportunity and a chance for scholarship. Since the title-deeds of property may be appreciated or depreciated by the popular vote; since the existence of educational institutions depends upon the estimation in which they are held by the masses; they are compelled to put morality on one side, and at least rudimentary learning on the other side, of every cradle. One day, the baby hand will hold a ballot. Without some sort of tuition, that ballot may be Thor's hammer, to strike and smash the dearest interests of society.

This is the real value of universal suffrage—it compels the well-to-do and cultivated classes, not as a matter of philanthropy, but out of a selfish regard for their own interests, to open the arena and school the brain of the poorest and the dullest.

Moreover, let it be remembered that the corruption so rife to-day is oftener found among the flouters of universal suffrage than among the exercisers of it. Who are the offerers of bribes? Men of wealth, large corporations, greedy monetary institutions! Who defend such offenders? Men whose talent has been trained in the higher schools! As in chemistry, the scum floats uppermost. If the rabble sell votes, the railroads and gas trusts buy them. Why disfranchise those who sell, and enfranchise those who buy?

Universal suffrage has come to stay. Wealth and education must join the church in the purpose to smooth its path, and instruct and inspire it with Christian motives and ideals.

What the country needs, and all it needs, is the reduction of the Golden Rule to practice. Someone has said that the 'Vicious are a helpless minority, and the good a hopeless majority." Well, as Albion W. Tourgee puts it, "The mission of Christian citizens is to inspire this 'hopeless majority' to become a hopeful majority—in the party, at the polls, and especially in the great tribunal of public opinion." Ignorance and vice and crime rule by the neglect of intelligence and virtue and law.

Nay; let us personalize it. We are to blame. What have we done, what are we doing, to improve the public situation? To the extent of our power, under such a government as ours, we are responsible. The rights, privileges and liberties of American citizenship call for the careful training of the young. Our children will not grow into Christian citizenship without tuition. We complain of "ignorant foreigners." How many of us contribute anything towards their civic education? Do we not leave them to graduate from the slums, the grog shops and the brothels?

If it be true (and it is true) that honest and law-abiding people are in the majority in America, then is it not our fault that affairs are as they are?

The supreme need of the hour is the personalizing of duty; individual recognition of civic obligation, followed by appropriate action; and the creation of better conditions after the example and in the spirit of Jesus Christ.

That is a wise direction which bids us "learn of the enemy." When the grog shops, brothels and gambling dens are organized, under the skillful and experienced captaincy of the professional politician, it is not only stupid, but criminal for Christians to conduct a guerrilla campaign. Raw militia can not hope to make headway against veteran regulars. Even though they may win an occasional victory, their enthusiasm soon exhausts itself. The regular is always on duty, and knows with Philip II. of Spain that time and he are a match for any two.

Organization must be met by organization, discipline by discipline, determination by greater determination. The contest of the vicious for vice must be defeated by the onset of the virtuous for virtue. Shall it be forever true that "the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light"?

Just after the signing of the Declaration of Independence in the historic hall at Philadelphia, one of the fathers rose and said, as he pointed to the immortal document lying on the table, behind which sat George Washington: "Now, gentlemen, in signing that paper we have committed treason against Great Britain. We must all hang together—or we shall all hang separately!"

If Christians do not hang together, they are likely in the near future to hang separately.

If we want our cities and towns redeemed from boodle and boodlers, from brothels and gambling dens and groceries, we must go to work to redeem them; and then, but not until then, ask God to crown our efforts with success. God will not reward our laziness by miraculous intervention. But he is sure to help those who help themselves.

It is time that Christian people went into politics—and stayed in. We can't take the churches into politics—would not if we could. We know that any union of Church and State would make a bad matter worse. Neither do we seek to govern the State through the Church, for that has always secularized the church without christianizing the state. But the members of our churches ought to go into politics. The National Christian Citizenship League provides the means. This league is, locally, a union of individuals; nationally, a league of leagues. And its object is to educate the public conscience and to secure a more generous and united support for all movements which work for the public welfare. Everywhere the vices are allied, arrogant, aggressive. 'When bad men associate," says the great English writer on political philosophy, Edmund Burke, "the good must combine; else they will fall, one by one, an unpitied sacrifice to a contemptible struggle." The friends of law and order are in the majority, but they are scattered, and must be united; indifferent, and must be made to feel their responsibility; ill-informed, and must be enlightened. Great civic problems must be torn open and riddled with light. The watchwords for the hour are: Inform the public mind! Inflame the public conscience! In mayors' chairs and common councils let the saints replace the sinners. Luther said the devil wasn't entitled to all the good tunes. Neither is he to be given the control of all the city governments.

The direct yearly cost of intoxicating liquors in this country is $1,000,000,000. The indirect cost is as much more—the cost of labor lost by drunkenness, resultant sickness, crime, pauperism, etc. Two thousand millions a year for liquor!

At the same time we pay for bread $505,000,000; meat $330,000,000; woolen goods, $237,000,000; boots and shoes, $196,000,000, and for foreign missions, $5,500,000. We send a nickle to convert the heathen, and they spend $20 on a spree in honor of our philanthropy. Would it not be better if we put more in our head and less in our mouth?

The hour is ripe for reform. New York has awakened from the nightmare of Tammany. Even Chicago is arousing from its long debauch. "America," says Emerson, "is another name for opportunity." Let Christian people see what o'clock it is. The good book tells us that "the wicked flee when no man pursueth." True; but they make better time when they know they are being chased.

The way in which to save America is by saving the cities. The way in which to save the cities is by Christian consecration and activity. Good local government means lower taxes and higher wages; cheaper house rent, and ampler accommodations; fewer brothels and more churches; less gamblers and more school teachers; closed grog shops and open meat markets; hard times gone, and the stock yards, the factories and the merchants busy; pitfalls closed, and women and children safe and happy; irresistible virtue safeguarded and absolute vice relegated to the pit.

Is not such a result worth what it would cost?

A certain faithful man was asked by an unbeliever how he treated the difficulties which he found in the Bible. He replied: "Reading my Bible is like eating fish. When I come to a difficulty, I treat it as a bone, and lay it aside. There is no sense in continually choking on the bones when there is so much wholesome meat for me." This will not answer objections or solve riddles, but it is a sensible way for the honest reader to dispose of the few non-essential difficulties which he finds in the Holy Scriptures. It will be time enough for him to worry over these things when the critics agree among themselves.

God has a definite life plan for every human person, girding him, visibly or invisibly, for some exact thing, which it will be the true significance and glory of his life to have accomplished. . . . Away, then, O man, with thy feeble complaints and feverish despondencies. If God is really preparing us all to become that which is the very highest and best thing possible, there ought never to be a discouraged or uncheerful being in the world.—Horace Bushnell.

It is not a sign of character or of intellect always to be giving emphasis to one's disbeliefs. If a man does not believe this thing or that, why should he trouble himself or others about it? If there is anything that he does believe, that is the thing for him to emphasize. If, indeed, he does not believe anything, the less he says about himself the better.—Sunday-School Times.

The temptations which follow our greatest spiritual uplifts are testings for future service. An engine that has been tested is not worthy to be compared with an engine that has not been tested except in the matter of appearance. It is a good thing to be strong; it is better to know exactly how strong we are.

The future is not a matter of overwhelming importance to one who prefers character to preferment, a good conscience to a good robe. It is when a man keeps his eye on his clothes or his position or his money and forgets himself—his soul—that he is exposed to the darts of the enemy.

There is happiness in having and getting, but more in giving; and half the world is on the wrong scent in the pursuit of happiness. They think it consists in having and getting, and in being served by others. It consists in giving and in serving others.

We never know through what divine mysteries of compensation the Father of the universe may be carrying out the sublime plan, and these three words, "God is love," ought to contain, to every doubting soul, the solution of things.—Miss Mulock.

The growing good of the world is partly dependent on unhistoric acts, and that things are not so ill with you and me as they might have been is half owing to the number who lived faithfully a hidden life and rest in unvisited tombs.—George Eliot.

Said Oliver Wendell Holmes to a clerical friend: "I don't like to listen to those everlasting negations that some ministers deal out from the pulpit. When I go to hear a preacher, I want to hear one who believes more than I do."

Infidelity reproves nothing that is bad. It only ridicules and denounces all that is good. It tears down; it never constructs; it destroys; it never imparts life. It attacks religion, but offers no adequate substitute.—J. R. Paxton.

Do to-day's duty, fight to-day's temptation and do not weaken and distract yourself by looking forward to things which you can not see, and could not understand if you saw them.—Charles Kingsley.

If I can only place a little brick in the pavement of the Lord's pathway I will place it there, that coming generations may walk thereon to the heavenly city.—Phillips Brooks.

True glory consists in doing what deserves to be written, in writing what deserves to be read, and in so living as to make the world happier and better for our living in it.—Pliny.

Wherever souls are being tried and ripened, in whatever commonplace and homely ways, there God is hewing out the pillars for his temple.—Phillips Brooks.

It is the crushed grape that gives out the blood-red wine. It is the suffering soul that breathes the sweetest melodies.—Gail Hamilton.

Nothing can be more indecent than to hear a dead preacher speaking to dead sinners the living truth of the living God.—Baxter.

The people who are in the most danger of going to hell are those who expect to start for heaven to-morrow.—Ram's Horn.

It is blessed to be so shut in with God that amid the whirl and confusion of life our fellowship with him remains undisturbed.

The only antidote to the bitterness of life is the sweetness of Christ's love.

North Mississippi Conference W. F. M. S.

The sixteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference was held in Columbus, Miss., June 22-25, with Mrs. T. B. Hargrove presiding. The delegation, both adult and juvenile, was the largest we ever had, and a large number of visitors seemed deeply interested, but we fear the town and community were not benefited as much as we had hoped, since they failed to attend our business meetings to any considerable extent.

We were especially blessed by having with us Rev. B. W. Waters and wife—Lula Lipscomb Waters—our missionaries to Japan, and Miss Mary Bruce, missionary to Brazil. We could but feel it a blessing to have these earnest laborers, fresh from the foreign field, in our midst to testify as eye witnesses to the glorious work being accomplished through the influence of the blessed gospel of Christ among even the most degraded heathen nations. He can indeed "save to the uttermost." These brave workers were so earnest in urging upon us the great need of sending the glad tidings more quickly, and we are working so slowly. This year, instead of advancing, our financial report fell behind—only $3,007, barely $1 per member, counting pledge money, special offerings, offerings, and everything. Somebody fails to pay her dues regularly. The watchword for the next year is 1,000 new members. Then we want more faithful, zealous work from the old ones. We must get in earnest about this "bringing the world to Christ." The missionaries we send out are handicapped by the half-hearted, lukewarm service of the workers at home.

Miss Bruce, in speaking of the lack of faith in the Holy Spirit, said: "If the church at home really had faith in God, as manifested through his Holy Spirit, we could bring the heathen world to him in a few years." Let us look to it that we fail not here.

Rev. B. W. Waters, in his sermon on Romans i, 14, forcibly impressed upon us our obligation.

We learned much of the condition of the people and progress of the work from Miss Bruce's address on Brazil, and Mrs. Waters' address on Japan, and more fully realized that with so much to be done, we have barely made a beginning.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. T. B. Hargrove, president; Mrs. S. M. Thames, vice-president; Mrs. S. E. Dean, corresponding secretary; Miss C. E. Gillespie, recording secretary; Miss Mollie A. Clark, treasurer; Mrs. J. F. Evans, auditor; and the following district secretaries: Columbus district, Mrs. Winans Drake; Aberdeen district, Mrs. J. H. Shumaker; Corinth district, Mrs. J. W. Bell; Holly Springs district, Miss Sallie Hinton; Sardis district, Mrs. E. P. Coleman; Grenada district, Mrs. W. M. McIntosh; Greenville district, Mrs. G. C. Jones; Winona district, Mrs. Ben L. Jones; Kosciusko district, Mrs. E. A. Clower.

On selecting place of next meeting, Tupelo, Greenwood and Grenada asked for it. On taking the vote, Tupelo won it. C. E. GILLESPIE, Rec. Sec.

A letter received a few days ago by the Conference secretary from Mrs. W. H. LaPrade, the delegate from the W. P. and H. M. S. to the Shreveport District Conference, contains the following cheering information:

"While at Keachie I organized a P. and H. M. Society, and promised them you would send literature at once. The list of officers is as follows: President, Mrs. E. A. Fullilove; first vice-president, Mrs. Hester; second vice-president, Mrs. Jay; recording secretary, Miss Lizzie Paxson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Dr. Horn; treasurer, Mrs. Dr. Horn.

"They have a small membership at Keachie; ten members in the society. They seemed glad to go into the work.

"Bro. Sheppard, the presiding elder, asked each preacher, as he gave in his report, whether he had a P. and H. M. S. in his work.

"Bro. Boynton reported one at Fort Jessup. They had no church building there until this year, and Bro. Boynton built that with his own hands. He has had to move three times this year; says it is impossible to rent a comfortable shelter. With aid from our society, he hopes to have a parsonage there before long.

"Bro. A. S. Lutz has a society in Shreveport City Mission. The brethren at Conshatta, Benton and Greenwood promised to send for me during the year to organize societies at those places.

"Bro. Crews has no society at Mansfield, but a few individual members; said he would organize at once."

We hope to have as encouraging a report from our representative to the Arcadia District Conference.

Memoir of Rev. N. B. Norwood.

Bro. Norwood was born in St. Helena parish, La., Nov. 23, 1846, and died June 3, 1895. He joined the church of his choice when quite young. He was converted at Winans' Chapel, near Wilson, La., in 1868 or 1869. Shortly after his conversion he felt called to preach the gospel. He applied; was granted license to preach. He was admitted on trial some five or six years ago into the Louisiana Conference. Shortly after Bro. Norwood's conversion, while working in his blacksmith shop one day, lightning struck a tree close by. This was a narrow escape. After the fright was over the thought came to his mind that he was not quite ready to meet his God. He began to search to know what was lacking in him. He found that he needed entire sanctification. He enquired of his preacher about it. He said he knew nothing about that; but, nevertheless, he sought and found the great blessing of God. Afterwards he lost the blessing by using tobacco.

Last year, while helping me in a meeting at Ponchatonla, Bro. Norwood sought again nearly all night. Next morning he claimed the blessing by faith. Bro. Norwood preached it from that time until his death. On June 3 he wrote me a postal, saying he was still in the experience, and expected to preach sanctification until he died. I am told that he was as happy (just a few hours before he died) as he could be; was making great preparation to do a large work.

Bro. Norwood spent thousands of dollars preaching the gospel. Many souls have been converted to God by his preaching. He was the first one who ever called on me to pray. I will never forget the twenty-ninth of August, 1886, at the Sam Jones Camp Ground. Once, while he was selling Bibles, he left an appointment at a bar room, and was there at the appointed time with Bible and hymn book in hand. A large crowd had gathered there. They were drinking whisky and gambling when he commenced. Before he had finished many were converted, the bar keeper among the number.

Bro. Norwood leaves five children to mourn his death. I will say to the loved ones: Weep not for him. Let us be ready to meet him when we are called to go. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them." He has received his crown. W. T. CURRIE.

Mississippi to the Front.

Just now the people of Mississippi are more interested in the subject of Christian education than ever before in the history of our great State. Especially are the poor boys of Mississippi being fired with an ambition for higher education. Many influences have combined to make a college education possible for the poor boys of our State. Methodism, although born in a university, has had its eye on the struggling masses from its very beginning; and in these latter times it has lost none of its interest in the world's multitudes. Mississippi Methodism is waking out of her long sleep, and taking her rightful place among her sister States in this great educational movement.

Millsaps College has already achieved such success as to challenge the admiration of every loyal Methodist in the State. This institution of learning is growing in favor with the people every day, and, with that prince among men, Dr. W. B. Murrah, for its president, with its able corps of professors, with the co-operation of Bishop Galloway and Maj. R. W. Millsaps, and with 80,000 Methodists as its supporters, Millsaps College ought to be the leading Mississippi college. The appointment of Dr. I. W. Cooper to canvass for the college for a few weeks was a wise appointment. He has the interest of Millsaps and the future of the church at heart. He reads a man on meeting him, and knows how to present Millsaps College to him. He is genial, wise, and wide awake. He is the right man in the right place. If the pastors of the two Conferences will co-operate with Dr. Cooper, and send to Dr. Murrah the names of young men who are thinking of going to college, there will be 400 or 500 matriculates in Millsaps College next session. Brethren, let us have a strong pull, and a long pull, and a pull altogether.

The Malone College,

FOR GIRLS ONLY,

Is situated in the city of Holly Springs, which is the highest point in the State; hence is free from malarial influences. Accessible from all points, as it is at the junction of the Illinois Central and Kansas City railways.

The boarding department is under the special control of the president and his wife, who, with the teachers, eat at the same table with the pupils—all faring alike.

While the property of the college does not belong to the church, which is the case with many of our Conference schools, it is under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and every teacher is a member of the M. E. Church, South; three of them Methodist preachers' daughters, and one a Methodist preacher's widow. The preachers of the North Mississippi Conference are charged only half price, including board.

Prices have been put down to correspond with the low prices of everything.

The fifth annual session will begin Sept. 17, 1895, and run nine months. No money spent or time lost for elaborate commencements.

Our work free to the inspection of the public at all times.

How is it that many thoughtful persons, and by no means hostile to religion and its institutions, are averse to public worship? The answer is not far to seek. When they are religiously disposed at all, they prefer some form of Christianity; and when they desire food for the higher nature, they do not care to waste their time and vitiate their tastes by listening on Sunday to themes which have been exhaustively thrashed out every other day of the week in the columns of the daily press. They object to the secularization of worship. Having spent six days in perplexing cares and anxieties as to mundane affairs, they protest, and no can blame them, against any disturbance of the restfulness of Sunday by the intrusion of week-day thoughts and themes upon it hallowed quiet. It can not be helpful to a jaded and weary mind, and it certainly is not morally quickening and inspiring, to have some appalling crime retold with all its harrowing details, and condemned for the hundreth time, from the pulpit, to be compelled to listen to a homily on millionaire weddings and yacht races; to receive instruction on the physical and moral value of the bicycle or the esthetic worth of the opera; to hear rebuke of some hoary old sinner of national note. All this betrays the intellectual poverty and spiritual destitution of those who indulge in it, and also a grave misapprehension of what average man and woman care to hear on Sunday or what they need for their moral elevation.—Exchange.

FROM THE WORK.

Rev. H. P. Crowe, Cleveland, Miss., July 11: "We are having a great revival in Cleveland, such as has never been known in the history of the town. The church has been wonderfully awakened, and the oldest sinners are being converted. Glory to God! Hallelujah! Amen!"

Rev. F. N. Sweeney, P. C., Dry Creek circuit, July 15: "Bro. Jno. B. Kent was with us in our meeting at Spring Hill, and did good work for the Lord. Five accessions, several backsliders reclaimed, and the church greatly revived, as a result of the meeting. The Lord is blessing us in these parts, and to him be all the glory."

Rev. Thomas B. Clifford, Courtland, Miss.: "The ante-bellum church-building at Pope's station has been taken down to make room for a more modern and more convenient structure. We hope to have it ready for use early in August. We have an active, working membership there, good Epworth League, and a Juvenile Missionary Society of which we have cause to be proud. A representative from this Epworth League attended the International Conference at Chattanooga, and the Juvenile Missionary Society sent a delegate to annual meeting of Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, recently held in Columbus. Children's Day has been observed at some of our churches with wonderful success, and the others are arranging for the service. We are in the column that is moving forward, and what we do it—'All for Christ.'"

Rev. W. D. Pickens, Vinton, La.: "On Wednesday night, June 12, we began a series of meetings at this place. A deep interest was manifested, and quite a precious service was held to begin with. Bro. R. M. Blocker came to us Thursday night, and remained a week. By his preaching the people were edified and strengthened spiritually. The meeting was a blessing to the town and community. We feel that we are better equipped for battle than ever before. The meeting resulted in fifteen accessions, nine of them by letter. All denominations took part in the meeting, and we do praise the Lord for the spirit of unity that yet exists. After all this glorious revival we very much regret that some of our Methodist families allow dancing in their homes. May God save! We begin a meeting to-night at Niblet's Bluff, five miles west of Vinton. Pray for us."

Rev. R. H. Barr, Trenton, Miss., July 18: "I have just closed out a meeting at Garoe Chapel with good results. The church has been stirred and moved to seek a higher life in the Christian world. Sinners were struck with conviction, and some blessed. On Wednesday we administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Our hearts were made to rejoice when we saw fifteen or more young men and ladies come forward to commune with their fathers and mothers at the sacramental board. A proposition acceded to revealed the fact that twenty family altars were being kept up at that church, which sounded the key-note to deep piety among those people. I was assisted by Bros. J. F. Robinson and W. J. Roberts, of Brandon, Miss., who preached with unusual power. Bro. W. J. Roberts is one of the coming men of our church. God bless those brethren for their help in the meeting."

The young preacher who imagines that the way to succeed in his work is to copy the style or methods of some eminent man makes a huge blunder. He may succeed in making a goose of himself, but that is about all the success he will attain. Be yourself and do your level best.—Baltimore Advocate.

Were the scrofula sores on my poor little boy. They were especially severe on his legs, back of his ears and on his head. His hair was so matted that combing was sometimes impossible. His legs were so bad that sometimes he could not sit down, and when he tried to walk his legs would crack open and the blood start. Physicians did not cure. I decided to give him Hood's Sarsaparilla. In two weeks the sores began to heal up; the scales came off and all over his body new and healthy flesh and skin formed. When he had taken two bottles of Editorial Paragraphs.

Cultivate sunniness of temper. It will add length and happiness to your life.

Indulgence in mud throwing may besmirch your neighbor's garments, but be well assured your own hands will not escape being soiled.

The Rev. A. C. Courtice, of Canada, said at the recent Epworth League Conference: "The man who shouts for temperance and votes for whisky is no good." We utter a hearty "Amen."

Prohibitionists must not forget that eternal vigilance is the price of immunity from the whisky curse. The work is only half done when the saloon is voted out. The gospel of temperance needs constantly to be preached, and the work of educating the people along temperance lines must never be allowed to cease. Agitation of the subject is exactly what the whisky men do not want.

Some churches court the presence of the rich and cultured, to the neglect of the poor. To all such the words of the sacred writer James are applicable: "My brethren have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory, with respect of persons. For if there come into your assembly a man with a gold ring, in goodly apparel, and there come in also a poor man in vile raiment, and ye have respect to him that weareth the gay clothing, and say unto him, Sit thou here in a good place; and say to the poor, Stand thou there, or sit here under my footstool: are ye not then partial in yourselves, and are judges of evil thoughts?" True Christians will neglect neither the one class nor the other.

A Day at Seashore Camp Meeting.

We had expected to spend Sunday, July 14, at Talladega. Failing to get off in time, we spent the day at the Seashore Camp Ground. The attendance was good. At eight o'clock Dr. H. Urquhart preached a sermon that was full of good things—a most excellent discourse. Dr. W. B. Murrah, of Millsaps College, occupied the pulpit at eleven o'clock. As was to be expected, the sermon was able, thoughtful, well prepared, and well delivered. At three o'clock Rev. S. S. Keener delivered a strong, earnest, deeply spiritual discourse, full of the pith and marrow of the gospel. At night Rev. W. P. Hurt, of the Alabama Conference, preached a sermon which was regarded as one of the best of several good ones which he had preached during the camp meeting.

Among the converts during the meeting was an old man, seventy years of age. Several bright young men also experienced a change of heart.

The Spirit of Fellowship.

So far as our observation goes, live, growing churches are always the ones where there is cordial fellowship. In proportion as Christians lose in spirituality, just in proportion are they characterized by icy indifference and exclusiveness. Of course, the church is not intended to be a social club; but unless the members meet and greet each other, and mingle to some extent socially, one of the great advantages of church membership is lost.

We do not speak unadvisedly when we say that in some localities Methodism has suffered grievous losses because of the lack of the spirit of fellowship. The members go to church, but as soon as the service is over hurry away without exchanging greetings or taking any notice of strangers. Then, again, newcomers, instead of being hunted up and invited to the Methodist Church, are left to wander where they will, and the result, in many instances, is that having been pressed by some loyal Baptist or Presbyterian to come to his church, they do so, and ere long are lost to Methodism.

To speak to strangers without being introduced is not exactly in accordance with the notions of Dame Fashion; but where souls may be gained by doing so, what true Christian ought to hesitate? Next to good music and good preaching, there is hardly anything so calculated to attract people to church as kindly ushers and a cordial welcome from the members. A hearty hand-grasp and an urgent invitation to come again are by no means lost upon visitors. People are more than apt to attend church where they feel most at home. The indifference with which some church members treat their fellows is not only impolitic, but positively unchristian.

In the house of God, if nowhere else, we all meet on a common footing, all alike being in need of atoning grace, striving for the same goal, having "the same Lord over all who is rich unto all that call upon him." The spirit of Christianity is at the furthest remove from the spirit of caste. If rich Christians associate only with rich Christians, what reward have they? for do not sinners even the same? And if church members of culture mingle not with the unlearned, how much better are they than the non-professors? That every man is my brother is the teaching of Christ, and whoever would follow the Savior must render to his fellow whatever of service and encouragement he can. "There is neither Jew or Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." (Gal. iii, 28.)

We have little patience with Methodists who prate about the coldness of the church, but who do nothing themselves to warm it into life. Interest yourself in your fellow church members, visit them whether others do or not, speak to the strangers, hunt up the new families that have just moved in, invite them to church and Sunday-school, patronize Methodists in business as far as you can, and see if your spiritual vision is not brightened and your enjoyment of religion deepened thereby.

We think it an excellent plan to call all the members together occasionally in order to let them get acquainted with each other. It is absurd to preach about "the fellowship of the saints in heaven," unless there is "fellowship of the saints on earth." "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light," says the Apostle John, "we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth us from all sin." Due regard should be had for the proprieties; but let us beware of excessive formality. Behold how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to know and love each other without partiality and without hypocrisy. Whatever we do, let us not pattern after those denominations in which fellowship simply means "good society." Among us Methodists it means friendship, sympathy, love, helpfulness, and sweet communion—the exhibiting to each other of the love wherewith Christ loved us.

The Epworth League Conference at the Seashore Camp Ground

On July 18 and 19, immediately following the close of the camp meeting, a goodly number of Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana leaguers met in conference together by the seaside. While the attendance was not large, many excellent speeches were delivered, much of instructive and helpful information was gained by those present, and interest in League work was greatly stimulated. Many young people who were not leaguers will return to their homes from this meeting resolved to engage heartily in League work.

The sunrise prayer meeting—an institution of the League—was a part of the regular programme of exercises.

THURSDAY'S EXERCISES.

The 8:30 o'clock morning service was conducted by Rev. F. N. Parker, of New Orleans, and consisted of a song service, Bible reading, and love-feast. It was a deeply spiritual service. At 11 o'clock Rev. John W. Chambers, in the absence of Dr. W. C. Black, delivered a capital address on "The Young People and Missions." President Chambers said that the preachers must give the young people something to do. The pastor who fails in this particular fails in his duty. He expressed the hope that he would never reach the time when he would be out of sympathy with the young people, and urged the young people present to consecrate all to the Lord, but not as our fathers—by keeping it in their pockets.

The evening devotional exercises were conducted by Rev. W. P. Hurt, of Union Springs, Ala. "How to Make the Devotional Meetings Spiritual" was then discussed by Rev. N. B. Harmon, of Bay St. Louis, who emphasized the necessity of mental preparation and the baptism of the Holy Spirit in making these meetings successful. Rev. R. H. Wynn next made a vigorous speech upon the same subject.

The third speaker was Rev. J. J. Smylie, who discoursed upon "Music in the Devotional Meeting."

"The Value of Testimony in the Meeting" was now discussed by Rev. W. G. Forsythe, who said that Mr. Wesley's work was to bring men to a conscious experience of salvation.

An attentive hearing was given to Rev. S. J. Davies, the last speaker, whose subject was "Jesus in the Meeting."

Rev. J. L. Pierce was to have made an address at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, but being absent, the service was omitted.

FRIDAY'S EXERCISES.

Nearly every young person on the grounds was present at the morning exercises. The subject of discussion for the 8:30 o'clock service was: "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God," Rev. F. S. Parker, of New Orleans, being the first speaker. "The object of our life," Mr. Parker said, "is the glory of God." Singleness of heart is the test of our religion. We can not consecrate ourselves for tomorrow, but must "die daily." It was an earnest, thoughtful speech.

Rev. J. B. Tate next spoke of "Leaguers as Domestic Mission Workers," and said in substance that there is really but one mission in life—the salvation of the souls of sinners. There is no grander field than that which lies near our very doors.

The third speaker was Rev. C. M. Lyons, who delivered an admirable address on "Leaguers as Recruiting Officers." Other speakers of the early session were Rev. Robt. Selby and Dr. W. L. C. Hunnicutt, each of whom made some good points. Owing to the lateness of the hour, the Doctor's remarks were rather brief.

At 11 o'clock the leaguers were treated to a magnificent address by the eloquent and scholarly Dr. C. G. Andrews, of Vicksburg, Miss., his theme being: "The Pioneers of Methodism in Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, and the Southwest: A Lesson of Self-sacrifice." The Apostle Paul was first cited as an example of a gospel hero—"the man who was proud to push the plowshare of the gospel in the virgin soil where the gospel had not yet been preached." No men had made up their minds more fully to take what God would send them than the men who came as pioneers of Methodism in the Southwest. The Doctor mentioned the case of one of these pioneers in Southwest Louisiana, who stopped at a sugar house to warm himself, but was driven off by the cruel planter, and died from exposure. He also told of Richmond Knolley, who swam a swollen stream in the month of December in order to reach an appointment, the result being fatal. In conclusion he said: "We have a glorious inheritance. Let me beg of you to catch the step of the triumphant army marching to Zion."

The closing exercises of the Conference took place at 4 o'clock. Rev. J. W. McLaurin led the devotional service. An instructive address on the "Literary Work of the League" was now delivered by Rev. H. H. Ahrens, of New Orleans. Rev. J. M. Henry followed him in a suggestive, pointed speech on the "Social Work of the League."

The benediction was pronounced by Rev. C. A. Powell, and the League Conference stood adjourned.

The attendance upon the camp meeting and the League Conference together is estimated at something over 1,000.

On account of the success of the meeting this year, it is very probable that a League Conference will be held yearly at the Seashore Camp Ground.

The Alabama Chautauqua.

We had the pleasure of spending a few days at the Alabama Chautauqua at Talladega. We had an engagement to preach on Sunday, and to give two lectures. On account of press of business we failed to meet the sermon engagement, but arrived in time for the lectures.

The Alabama Chautauqua is different from any other Chautauqua we have seen, in the fact that it is located in the very heart of the town. The Assembly Hall is one of the best-constructed buildings of the sort we have seen. Its dimensions are eighty feet by one hundred and twenty. The seating capacity is estimated at a little less than two thousand. Talladega is a beautiful town of about three thousand inhabitants. So far as we are able to judge from what we could see and hear during our short stay, it is a nice, refined community, above the average on the score of morals. The citizens take great pride in the Chautauqua. Besides the several schools which are in operation, there are four lectures each day. In our judgment, this is a mistake at nearly all the Chautauquas—too much programme. Three lectures a day are enough, especially in hot weather. The people ought to have the afternoons for rest. We remained over a day in order to hear Talmage, and then were disappointed, being too unwell to leave our room. We had the pleasure of meeting the Doctor, however, and of exchanging a few words with him. We heard a fine temperance talk from Mrs. Beauchamp, of Kentucky. Prof. Reese, whom we had previously heard at Monteagle, was on hand with his illustrated lectures on his travels in Europe. We missed Dr. J. J. Tigert, he having finished his engagements before our arrival. The people were pleased with his work in the pulpit and on the platform. We owe him one for having occupied the pulpit in our stead; we will pay him when he gets to be a Bishop. We have no doubt that he made fully as much noise as we would have done. During our stay in Talladega we were delightfully domiciled in the State Deaf and Dumb Institute, presided over by Prof. Johnson. We also enjoyed the hospitalities of Dr. Newman, presiding elder of the Talladega district. We met several members of the North Alabama Conference, among them the Talladega pastor, Prof. Sturtivandt, formerly of the Southern University. We were pleased to find one of our old parishioners in charge of the Chautauqua School of Elocution—Miss Jessie Goodall, principal of the Alexander High School, Macon, Georgia.

The Alabama Chautauqua is already a decided success. The commander-in-chief, Rev. S. P. West, deserves great credit for his energy, enterprise and tact. We are glad to see the Chautauqua movement spreading. We hope to see the day when there will be a number of these educational gatherings in every State in the South.

The Oldest Minister of the M. E. Church, South, Dead.

Southern Methodism has sustained a severe loss in the death of the venerable David Rice McAnally, of St. Louis, who passed away on Thursday, the eleventh instant, after a long and painful illness. Dr. McAnally was born in Tennessee in 1810, and was the oldest minister in Southern Methodism. He had served longer as editor of a religious weekly than any other man in American Methodism, his connection with the St. Louis Christian Advocate dating from the year 1851. Martial law ordered the suspension of his paper in 1862, because of his advocacy of the cause of the Confederacy. He was imprisoned for a few weeks, and for some time after his release was regarded as an object of suspicion. The war being over, Dr. McAnally again resumed the editorship of the St. Louis Advocate, and remained actively in charge until about four years ago, when paralysis seized him, and practically ended his editorial career.

Dr. McAnally was a man of vigorous intellect and versatile talent. He was widely known and beloved, not only as an editor and minister of the gospel, but also as an educator and author. Licensed to preach at the age of eighteen, he soon after began to itinerate, serving as pastor successively in Tennessee, Virginia, and North Carolina. In 1842 he was elected principal of the Knoxville (Tenn.) Female Institute, where he remained until 1851.

The Doctor was fond of polemic discussion. Many were the word-wars which were fought between him and the editors of the Central Christian Advocate for two decades following 1866. A great and good man has gone to his reward.

Rev. A. C. Millar, president of Hendrix College, is at the University of Chicago employing his vacation in preparing for better service in the position in which he has hitherto served so well. Professors Hawley and Cotham, of Hendrix College, are similarly employed.—Arkansas Methodist.

NOTES

The postoffice address of Rev. J. A. Randolph will be Iuka, Miss., for the next few weeks.

***

Bishop J. C. Keener was in attendance upon the Seashore Camp Meeting, but was too feeble to preach while there.

***

Rev. R. W. Bailey and Rev. M. L. Burton, of the Mississippi Conference, have been recently enjoying the breezes of the Crescent City.

***

A card from Rev. E. F. Edgar reached us as we were going to press announcing the death at Magnolia, Miss., of Sister J. A. Godfrey.

***

***

Rev. Dr. John Hunter, who for over thirty-five years has been the faithful and beloved pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Jackson, Miss., has tendered his resignation. His retirement will be universally regretted.

***

Rev. Dr. George G. Smith and family, of Vineville, Ga., are the guests of his father-in-law, John Lipps, Esq., of this place. Dr. Smith was the pastor of the M. E. Church, South, here twenty-five years ago, and this is his first visit since.—Greenbrier (Va.) Independent.

***

Rev. W. B. Burke, one of our China missionaries, with his wife and three children, is now visiting his father, Rev. J. W. Burke, of Macon, Ga. His wife, formerly Miss Addie Gordon, of Port Gibson, is well known in Mississippi, having been sent out by the Woman's Board about eight or nine years ago.

***

We note with pleasure that a very valuable piece of property, the Tuskaloosa Female College, has been purchased by the citizens of Tuskaloosa and donated to the Methodist Church. The Rev. J. D. Simpson, one of the most popular preachers of the North Alabama Conference, has been elected president. Success to you, Bro. Simpson.

On our first page will be found an article on baptism by Rev. J. H. Kennebrew. Mr. Kennebrew was for some time a minister in the Christian Church. At the time when he severed his connection with that church, he had open to him ministerial positions of great prominence. Having become convinced, however, that the tenets of that church are not in accordance with the teachings of the Scriptures, he withdrew from it, and has signified his intention of uniting with our church. He resides at present in Columbus, Miss.

A Great Revival.

No fair-minded Christian can listen to Sister Snell without being convinced that she is called of God to preach, and has a message for the world. She seems to be more deeply conscious of the presence of Christ than anyone I have ever known. Were she in bodily form in the midst of the church, he could not be more real to her. The eye of faith is just as keen as physical vision. It seems to permeate every fiber of her being, that this world has been redeemed. All Satan's authority is by usurpation. He does not own a foot, and it is the Christian's privilege to claim the territory and drive him out. Her contact with the world has quickened and deepened those finer sensibilities of the woman. She is modest and refined, and there is nothing masculine in what she says or does. Her methods of altar work indicate utter dependence upon higher powers. Sometimes the penitents are invited singly to the altar, and after prayer returns to the seat, while another comes. When the altar is crowded with seekers, passing from one to the other with hands on their head, a special prayer is offered for each.

The question is often asked in regard to evangelists, Does the work abide? I see no reason why her work should not stand. There were fifteen received into the church; one little girl, who was at the point of being confirmed in the Episcopal Church restored to membership, and three applications for membership, making nineteen in all. The majority of these gave satisfactory evidence of thorough change of heart. For example: Five boys, about the age of eighteen, assembled at a neighbor's, were engaged in music and dancing, when suddenly one of them, under deep conviction, arose and said: "Boys, this is no time for such as this. Let us all pray." At first they paid no attention to his request, but when he knelt and began earnestly to pray for them, they were all soon in tears and upon their knees, and they dishanded with a covenant to find the Savior. At the next service, when opportunity was given for testimony, a young man came down from the choir, with face aglow with the light of another world, and told of the meeting, the praying and agreement on previous night, and how he had found the Savior, and how happy he had been since. In the afternoon of the same day I met another of these young men, who said that he had been praying all day, and had just now found Christ. These two are not exceptions. The majority of those received into the church give evidence of a thorough change of heart.

Sister Snell preaches full salvation, and eight or ten professed the experience of entire sanctification.

The interest was at the highest point when the meeting closed. At the last service the pastor had already begun to read the formula for reception of members, when two other young men took their stand, and after the ordinance of baptism they were all received into the church.

Help on a Good Cause.

To all those who are interested in the salvation of the masses of this city through the instrumentality of the Word of God, to you we appeal for support. A space has been rented in the Peters Avenue Electric Line for the purpose of advertising Scripture texts for the spiritual benefit of the masses unreached by the churches. We have only one set of Scripture cards (one text), and change is necessary to do good. Send us funds sufficient to carry on the work. It is hoped to be able to extend the work on all lines. God has promised that his Word will not return unto him void. Mr. Jas. Sherrard, of the Y. M. C. A., receives all moneys. This is unsectarian work.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

P. S.—Should you fail to get the full quota of subscribers, you will get a good cash commission. W. C. B.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

Grenada Collegiate Institute.

It gives me great pleasure to announce to the friends and patrons of the Grenada Collegiate Institute that the first year of the new management has been highly gratifying. Fifty-five boarding pupils were matriculated, and a total in all departments of 235 pupils. Our excellent agent, Rev. W. M. McIntosh, has raised $755, with which twelve young ladies have been assisted and some improvements made. Besides the above, we have gladly given reductions to nine daughters of our North Mississippi Conference preachers.

Much encouragement is being given Bro. McIntosh and myself for a full school next year. The prospect is that we will have all we can accommodate when the term opens Sept. 11.

Let every pastor in the North Mississippi Conference who has a daughter to educate write me at once, also send names and postoffice addresses of all Methodist girls who intend to go off to school next Fall from their charges. This will help me much, brethren. It is our purpose to make your female college an institution of which you can be proud; but we must have your prayers, sympathy and co-operation. We are planning to pitch the school for next year on a much larger scale. Improvements are being made, facilities increased, and more teachers employed. Our faculty is composed of the best teachers we can find—all Methodists. The course of study, already good, has been advanced. We offer to the North Mississippi Conference a standard female college, and we shall spare no pains to merit their continued support. J. W. MALONE.

Notice.

The Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society of the Mississippi Conference will convene at Wesson, July 28, 29, 30. Let every auxiliary in the Conference send a delegate with a written report of work for the year. Delegates' names should be sent at once to Mrs. T. L. Mellen, Wesson, Miss. Let all come praying for the Holy Spirit to guide us.

THE DEVIL'S PLAYGROUND. A Story of the Wild Northwest. By John Mackie. New York: Frederick A. Stokes Company, Publishers.

The above is the title of one of the purest and brightest little stories that it has been our fortune to meet with in many days. The scene is new to the realm of fiction—the Canadian Northwest—and many of the characters are fresh and vigorous. Some of the incidents are new, though many are not. The word-painting is excellent, and the delineation of character far better than is usually found in modern stories. There are no long, tiresome discussions; no straw-men demolished—in fact, there is not a dull page in the book from cover to cover.

In this story the devil is represented as playing a deep game to ruin the home of one of the chief characters. For a time it seems as if he will win the game, but at the critical moment he loses his position, and Right triumphantly checkmates him. Read the book. It is well worth the time, and will make one of these hot days pass very quickly. Clear type, good paper, and beautiful illustrations add much to the attractiveness of this convenient-sized volume. J. C. B.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. AHRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND. (Matt. xiv, 15; Mark vi, 30; Luke ix, 10; John vi, 1.)

When the sad news of John the Baptist's decapitation was brought to Christ, he went to a desert place. Solitude is befitting intense grief. The deepest sorrow has no words.

1. When Jesus was apprised of the presence of the multitude, devoid of food, he concluded miraculously to feed them.

(1) Sympathy was one of Christ's chief characteristics. It led to his incarnation.

(2) During his sojourn with men he repeatedly displayed this sympathy. It led to his crucifixion.

(3) At the right hand of God he still manifests his sympathy. "He ever liveth, making intercession for them."

2. Christ multiplied the existing food. He could have created a sufficient quantity of food without this, but he designed thereby to teach an important lesson.

(1) When incipient grace, repentance, asserts itself, the fullness of same is soon acquired.

(2) When in a state of grace, we acquire grace for grace.

(3) God has established the rule, that whosoever hath, to him shall be given. 'Tis thus that unbelief shuts itself out from the kingdom of heaven.

3. Preceding the meal, Jesus prayed for a blessing. Saying grace at table, right and proper. At a hotel a preacher silently prayed, folding his hands as he did so, preceding the meal. Other guests noticing this, desiring to ridicule him, remarked, "Suppose in your village everybody prays." "No," said the preacher, "our oxen and asses in the stable do not pray."

4. In ordering the fragments gathered, Christ taught a wholesome lesson on frugality. "That nothing be lost."

(1) Frugality no less a duty than liberality. John Wesley's motto included, "Save all you can." Many people have nothing to give, because they save not.

(2) Benjamin Franklin's old saying, "A penny saved is a penny made," should be generally heeded. Parents should teach their children frugality.

A Positive Cure for Freckles.

The following is a voluntary testimonial for "Helmell's Ointment" as a cure for freckles. While the manufacturers have never made any claims for it as a factor in the removal of these annoying blemishes, yet they have always known that such was the case, and the following bears out that opinion:

Messrs. JOHNSTON HOLLOWAY & CO.,
815 Commerce St., Phila., Pa.

Gentlemen:—I want to tell you that your "Helmell's Ointment" is the finest cure for freckles that I have ever used. Rubbed well into the skin night and morning, in five weeks every freckle will have disappeared, leaving the skin soft, white and smooth. Found it out accidentally and want you to advertise it as a cure for freckles, so that others may be benefited. Respectfully,

EDITH E. RUSSELL, Ord, Neb.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to July, '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to July, '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the sweeping reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain this price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to July, '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate $1.65.

Offers advantages equal, if not superior, to any female college in the South. With a superior faculty, dormitory accommodations increased and improved (including a new brick building) and all the equipments necessary for a first-class female college, we say, without hesitation, that there is no necessity for a girl to leave the State for educational advantages. The Conservatory of Music is presided over by three male professors, who have had the best European advantages. The art teacher is now in Europe pursuing her studies. Forty pianos, a fine telescope, a well-equipped gymnasium and beautiful home, constitutes some of the advantages of this school. Two hundred and thirty boarding pupils during the past session, representing ten States and Territories. For catalogue address

Art and Elocution for Girls and Young Ladies.

One of the three oldest Female Colleges in the World. The Largest Female College in the South.

Three hundred and eighty-two (382) pupils enrolled during present year. Three hundred and fifty-two (352) last year.

Twenty-six (26) officers and teachers, besides distinguished lecturers.

Thoroughly equipped Gymnasium and Bowling Alley. Extensive grounds adapted to recreation. Hot and cold water and baths throughout buildings. Thirty-four Pianos and Organs, besides other musical instruments. Fifty-four members of college orchestra. Musical director, native German, trained in Europe. Art director, trained in Europe. Vocal teacher, pupil of Ratoli. Elocution teacher, trained by Emma Banks and Madam Behl. One of the rare teachers of the natural bird tones. Library of over 6,000 volumes.

History prosperous and progressive. Our motto: Thorough work and good discipline. Not a case of serious sickness in several years. During twenty-one years of college work the present head of the school has never lost a boarding pupil by death. This is due mainly to the careful oversight given our girls.

WHEN I HAVE TIME.

When I have time, so many things I'll do
To make life happier and more fair
For those whose lives are crowded now with care;
I'll help to lift them from their low despair—
When I have time!

When I have time, the friend I love so well
Shall know no more those weary, toiling days;
I'll lead her feet in pleasant paths always,
And cheer her heart with words of sweetest praise—
When I have time!

When you have time! The friend you love so dear—
May be beyond the reach of all your sweet intent!
May never know that you so kindly meant
To fill her life with sweet content—
When you had time!

Now is the time! Ah, friend, no longer wait
To scatter loving smiles and words of cheer
To those around whose lives are now so dear—
They may not need you in the coming year—
Now is the time!

—Golden Censer.

Scattering Sunshine.

A lady friend, who does not forget that she is a lady even when shopping, and who carries her bright and kindly religious life into a store as truly as into a drawing-room, gave me this little incident from her experience. She went the other day into a busy store to purchase some article. The shop-girl was attentive, but rather quick. Turning suddenly she said to the lady: "O, I beg your pardon, I fear I appeared abrupt; I only wanted to give you prompt service. Perhaps there is something more you would like to look at." The lady assured her that her promptness was much appreciated, and that she always liked to trade at her counter because she was not only prompt, but bright and sunny. Tears came at once to the girl's eyes. Her heart was opened by the loving words of the lady, and she told the little story of her life in a few words. She said, I quote as nearly as I can her language: "I had a great ambition to study and fit myself for teaching. I had some evidence in my quickness in studies that I could perhaps rank well as a teacher if I could only secure the necessary education. My mother and father died suddenly. My brother is still young, but supporting himself, and we have an invalid sister whom we two must care for. I could not study as I had hoped to fit myself for my life work. I must do what I could. I got a place in this store and began work here. I at first thought all my hopes were defeated. There is nothing for me to look forward to but the treadmill of a shop girl's life. It is not the hard work, but it shut me out from all the privileges that I most longed for.

"Then I thought, No, I am a Christian girl. God in his providence has led me to this place and this work. I must do it for others' sake as well as my own. I will try to use my life to the best advantage where I am. I looked over my checks one night and found that I had waited upon seventy-two people that day. I said to myself, What a splendid opportunity for doing good! And I determined that I would try and make everybody who traded with me just a little bit happier, and perhaps, even though a shop girl, I might bring sunlight into a good many lives in a day. I have been trying it some months now, and surely life has taken on a new meaning to me, and my work is pleasant and I am happy."

Who has a better secret for a happy life than that? Whose life so humble that he or she can not make it nobly useful? Whose light so small that it may not shed a few rays of light into a darker life? Whose comforts so limited that they may not awaken thankfulness that shall overflow to some more sorrowful heart? The quiet, cheerful consecration of that shop girl gives us each a lesson.

On the other hand, is there not in this little incident a lesson to those who stand on the other side of the counter? How many women make it a rule to speak some kind and appreciative word to the girl who waits upon them in the shop? How many of you never pull over the goods on the bargain counter, nor poke things here and there with your parasols, and barter and squeeze and browbeat just a little these girls who can not answer back, although the unladylike conduct of some women in silk and satin merits it? Should not we each one of us determine, as our friend the shop-girl, that every day we will make the lives that we touch, whichever side of the counter, brighter and sunnier and better. "He went about doing good."—The Congregationalist.

A Cheerful Home.

A single bitter word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day, one glance cast a gloom over the household; while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and weariest hours. Like unexpected flowers which spring up along our path, full of freshness, fragrance and beauty, so do kind words and gentle acts and sweet dispositions make glad the home where peace and blessing dwell. No matter how humble the abode, if it be thus garnished with grace and sweetened with kindness and smiles, the heart will turn lovingly towards it from all the tumults of the world; if it be ever so homely, it will be the dearest spot beneath the circuit of the sun.

And the influences of home perpetuate themselves. The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughter long after her head is pillowed in the dust of death; and fatherly kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons who come to wear his mantle and fill his place; while, on the other hand, from an unhappy, misgoverned and disordered home go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable, and perpetuate the sourness and sadness, the contentions, strifes and railings which have made their own early lives so wretched and distorted.

Toward the cheerful home the children gather "as clouds, and as doves to their windows," while from the home which is the abode of discontent and strife and trouble they fly forth as vultures to rend their prey.—Exchange.

Vain Excuses.

So you are not going to church this morning, my son? Ah, yes; I see. "The music is not good." That's a pity; that's what you go to church for—to hear music. And the less we pay the better music we demand.

"And the pews are not comfortable." That's too bad; the Sabbath is a day of rest, and we go to church for repose. The less work we do during the week the more rest we clamor for on Sunday.

"And the sermon is so long, always." All these things are to be regretted. I would regret them more sincerely, my boy, did I not know that you will often squeeze into a stuffed street car with a smell of whisky, beer and tobacco, and hang on a strap by your eyelids for two miles, then pay fifty cents for the privilege of sitting on a rough plank in the broiling sun for two hours or longer, and come home and talk the rest of the family into a state of aural paralysis about the "dandiest game you ever saw played on that gronnd."

Ah, my boy, you see what staying away from church does? It develops a habit of lying. There isn't one man in a hundred who could go on a witness stand and give, under oath, the same reasons for not going to church that he gives to his family every Sunday morning. My son, if you didn't think you ought to go you wouldn't make any excuses for not going. No man apologizes for doing right.—Robert Burdette.

Sensible Advice.

A young man out of employment went recently to an older man asking advice. "I have," said the junior, "commanded a certain salary. If I accept the place which offers itself at one-third my previous remuneration, will I not let myself down, practically say that my value has decreased? Is it not better to do nothing than to do what is poorly paid?"

"John," said the older man, "my advice to a man needing work and out of it always is, to take the first honest thing that comes along. Hard or easy, obscure or conspicuous, ill-paid or well-paid, take hold of the work that offers itself to your hand, and do it with your might. You are more likely to find work, if at work somewhere, than if sitting at home doing nothing. In my own day, I once could get no employment except to help the porter in a factory at a dollar a day. I took hold of that, it was all I could find; to-day I control the factory and am owner of the business."

"That," said the youth, "was nearly forty years ago. Things in the business world were different then."

"Things are never different," was the reply. "An energetic man will gain nothing by sitting still and waiting for the large place. Let him take hold at once of the small place and fill that till he overflow it."

The Sin of Fretting.

There is one sin which it seems to me is everywhere and by everybody underestimated, and quite too much overlooked in valuations of character. It is the sin of fretting. It is as common as air, as speech, so common that unless it rises above its usual monotone we do not even observe it. Watch any ordinary coming together of people, and see how many minutes it will be before somebody frets—that is, makes more or less complaining statement of something or other which probably everyone in the room, or in the car, or the street corner, it may be, knew before, and probably nobody can help. Why say anything about it? It is cold, it is hot, it is wet, it is dry; somebody has broken an appointment, ill cooked a meal; stupidity or bad faith somewhere has resulted in discomfort.

There are plenty of things to fret about. It is simply astonishing how much annoyance may be found in the course of every day's living, even at the simplest, if one only keeps a sharp eye out on that side of things. Even Holy Writ says we are prone to trouble as sparks fly upward. But even to the sparks flying upward, in the blackest of smoke, there is a blue sky above; and the less time they waste on the road, the sooner they will reach it. Fretting is all time wasted on the road.—Helen Hunt.

Reading.

If young people only knew the value of their youth! A half hour each day steadily given to the vanquishing of some real books in history, science, literature, is three hours a week, is more than twelve hours a month, is more than twelve solid days of twenty-four hours each a year. What can not the busiest man accomplish by such seizure of the fragments of his time? Oh, if the young people only knew the culture possible for them by such simple means! And forevermore it is the man that knows who gets to be the man who does, and to whom the chance for doing comes. Merely frittering newspaper and novel reading—a youthhood devoted only to that, how pitiably sad! No ship drifts into harbor. No young person drifts into an achieving manhood or womanhood.—Wayland Hoyt, D. D.

If you want to succeed in the world, you must make your own opportunities as you go on. The man who waits for some seventh wave to toss him on the dry land will find that the seventh wave is a long time coming. You can commit no greater folly than to sit by the roadside until some one comes along and invites you to ride with him to wealth or influence.—John B. Gough.

If I wished to raise up a race of statesmen, higher than politicians, animated, not by greed or selfishness, by policy or party, I would familiarize the boys of the land with the characters of the Bible.—John Hall.

The Curse of Overwork.

The curse of work is overwork—nothing but work. The art we need to cultivate is the art of resting, the art of doing nothing, when the time comes that we can do nothing. With all of us it should be a sacred duty to rest; to make time for rest; to cultivate the power to rest, and the capacity to enjoy rest. Is it said that repose is the very thing that men long for, but can not get? That I doubt. People are very fond of saying how tired they are; but they only want to let you know how hard they have been working, in order to get the credit of working hard. There are few men who will rest when they might as well as not. They sigh for rest when they know they can't have it. They discharge their sentimentality in that way. Is it said that work is imperative? that circumstances keep us at it? that our family expenses keep us at it? It is better to reduce expenses than to reduce being.

It is said that work is an ordinance of God which can not be escaped; that work is the law of existence; the doom passed on living men; the destiny to which God holds them; that Providence makes endless provision for work, and creates everlasting necessity for it, and that rest is a thing simply impossible.

REST SLEEP.

I reply by pointing out God's most bountiful provision for rest. In the tropics, where no labor is required of men, the night is scarcely divided from the day; but in temperate climes, where man's working powers are in the highest state of activity, the night nearly halves the day—at the season of intensest activity it does halve it—God lights his candle late and puts it out early. All the remainder of the time is for rest. Then labor naturally stops; office and shop are shut; machinery is still. The decree goes forth that the places of business shall be deserted. Then comes sleep—the long sleep, knitting up the ravelled sleeve of care; pouring balm into hurt minds; immersing Nature in her bath of oblivion; untying the knots of the brain; sifting and disentangling the thoughts; carrying sufferers away into the land of dreams, and bearing the weepers off among their loved and lost ones. Sleep, answering questions that could be answered in the day time; putting to rest doubts that had made the mid-day wretched; keeping all low cares and tribulations in their place, and calling out the imagination which revives and transports the mind.

MURDERING SLEEP.

But we murder sleep. We turn its darkness into day; its silence into revelry; its peace into pain. Fashion murders sleep; pleasure murders it; yes, and work murders it. In the days of youth, when we might cultivate the habit of long, still, deep sleep, we scorn its heavenly privilege, and throw its divine opportunity away; and then in middle age too many of us can not sleep. We are nervous and restless; and God's great immeasurable night is all in vain for us. We wake exhausted, the night's fever spoils our day. We stumble and bungle in all we do. That is a touching story in the gospel which tells how Christ was asleep in the fishing-boat, when the storm came up, and shipwreck seemed inevitable. His companions who had been watching their nets all night, were nerveless, and had lost command of the vessel. He wakes from slumber, rebukes the winds and seas, and there is a great calm. The good sleeper goes safely over life's turbulent sea. He rules the storm, for he has rested. He is himself. We should cultivate sleep while we can. Woe be unto us if we do not. In sleeplessness is utter weakness; they may be madness in it at last. Get all you can of it; it is God's daily boon of rest to the workers.—The Journal of Hygiene.

Mrs. Elmira T. Blacksher.

MRS. ELMIRA T. BLACKSHER, wife of U. T. Blacksher, and daughter of Maj. Benjamin and Martha Taliaferro, was born in Tuscaloosa, Ala., July 8, 1827, and died near Opelousas, La., May 24, 1895. She was raised in Demopolis, Ala.; was married to U. T. Blacksher, May 20, 1852. They moved to Louisiana in 1867. She was baptized by Benezer Hearn; was led to the altar and to Christ by (then) Rev. J. C. Keener and Dr. Irwin at the great revival in Demopolis in 1857, and joined the Methodist Church, and has kept even step with the church in its movements and enterprises ever afterwards. She has led many into the kingdom by the melody of her voice in song and godly example. She was ever found a willing supporter of the institutions of the church and its enterprises by her presence and means. As to her spiritual life, she was not demonstrative; but the chord always vibrated when touched by the Spirit. The tears of joy, the radiance of face, betoken a heart and soul moved by love divine. Her influence was always felt in the social circle or religious assembly. She possessed the happy art of making it pleasant and profitable to those she mingled with. She was cheerful in spirit, always looking on the bright side, and causing sunshine where she went. She loved the house of God, and was seldom absent; was punctual in her devotions, retiring three times a day to her closet, where her voice could be heard in prayer, as she said it did her more good to pray, so as to hear herself, as Daniel of old. She sought and obtained the higher life in religion. The last letter she wrote her husband, she said all her doubts and fears were gone, and it was so sweet to trust Him.

Not many months before her death, as her husband came into her room, she seated herself by him, laid her head upon his bosom, and said: "I have obtained the blessing. I feel that God has sanctified my soul. I feel that I am entirely his." Some of her last expressions, when going down in the chilly waters of death, were: "I am thinking of mercies of the blessed Savior. Oh, I love the blessed Savior! I love everybody;" and then she went into an ecstasy of praise and prayer. The last intelligible expression was, when asked if her faith was firm, after only a moment of reflection, "Yes, it is all right." Thus she lived; thus she died—all right. She leaves a husband, two daughters, one brother, and a host of friends, to mourn her absence. HUSBAND.

To see thee die and go alone, mother;
No, not alone, O precious Word of God,
Jesus was there.
How oft the path of shadows he hath trod
To soothe despair!

DAUGHTER

A TRIBUTE OF LOVE.

The many friends of Mrs. Uriah Blacksher will regret to hear that on May 24, 1895, she passed from earth. Enfolded by the tenderest love of husband, children, grandchildren and friends, she bade farewell to the home below to enter the city of many mansions whose maker and builder is God.

When nearing the closing hour, her soul seemed deeply meditating, and she murmured, "I am thinking of him." When questioned, answered, "I am thinking of my Savior." In that lonely hour, "when one by one without recall" earth's beauties faded, hope in its full splendor arose upon death's deepening mists, even while her eyes in death were closing, the sweet spell bound her spirit, bearing it on, till those who had gone before said the voice of the Savior welcomed her to the house where no tears, no sighs can come.

Memory, in reverting to the light of other days, pictures her bright, expressive countenance, the winning glance of her deep brown eyes as she cheerfully mingled among her schoolmates. Her presence was ever welcome, and no gathering seemed complete unless her happy laugh mingled with the voices, where friends harmonious meet. In sorrow's dark hour none were more tender, the fear of sympathy was ready and the hand of love ministered to suffering, while her cheerful spirit ministered as balm to the troubled mind.

In 1813, during the great outpouring of the Divine Spirit upon this city, she united herself with the people of God, and with all the native warmth of her nature entered the service of that Savior who stood by her when life's labor ended. It could be said of her, "She hath done what she could."

Several years since, after an absence of many years from the home of her girlhood, she was happy to meet with her loved friends, who also, though time had wrought outward changes, found in her warm heartedness the same Elmira Taliaferro of Auld Lang Syne. Her short stay was one mingled with pleasure and sorrow. The old homestead was gone; a few cedars planted by herself and the venerable mulberry that shaded the veranda was all that remained. A handsome residence and its surroundings had arisen; it was better that the old home was faded away; the hand of desolation did not mark the spot where so many happy hours had passed. She had much to say and much to hear in that brief visit ere the farewell hour came that parted her from those true and tried friends. Some of them have preceded her to the better land and welcomed her with joy: she entered through the gates into Jerusalem the Golden.

To those who grieve for the "sound of her voice that is hushed, and the touch of a vanished hand," let us not sorrow as those who have no hope. "She sleeps in Jesus, blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep." L. J. C.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT.

Whereas, It has pleased our heavenly Father to remove from our midst our beloved sister, Mrs. E. T. Blacksher, who died May 24, 1895; and,

Whereas, She was an honored member of our mission society of the Methodist Church of Opelousas, and remained a member until her death; be it

Resolved, That in the removal of our sister we have lost a noble Christian woman, who was a faithful and consistent member of our society and church, and one who did much for the cause of Christ; and while we grieve over our loss we rejoice in the fact that she has entered into eternal rest in the beautiful home beyond.

The community has lost a kind and sympathetic friend, the husband and daughters a loving and devoted wife and mother.

That we extend to them our deepest and sincerest sympathy in their sad affliction.

MRS. M. M. HAYES,
Committee.

MOORE—Dr. L. R. MOORE was born Aug. 6, 1833, in Sumpter county, Ala. He moved with his parents to Scott county, Miss., in 1846. In 1860 he was married to Miss Virginia Sims. By this union there were two children. The wife and two children soon died. In 1868 he married Miss Pattie Pettus, who still lives. There were given them eleven children, nine of whom are living.

He was a kind husband and an indulgent father, leaving his impress for good in all the relations of life.

As a physician, he was in great demand in Morton, where he lived for twenty-eight years.

He was an honored member of the Masonic fraternity, and was buried with its ceremonies.

He joined the church early in life. He was a faithful member, and was for twenty-five years an efficient steward. His faith was unwavering as he came to death's door. His end was in great peace. His family, pastor and friends rendered every assistance in their power. Also the nearest physicians kindly afforded medical relief, of whom we mention Drs Sims, Harralson, and Brook.

The end came Nov. 7, 1894. He was buried in the Sims Graveyard. His memory will live in the hearts of those who knew him.

C. MCDONALD.

Forest, Miss.

GENTRY—Mrs. MARY E. GENTRY was born in Monroe county, Ala., Nov. 4, 1854, and joined the Methodist Church there in 1865. She was the daughter of Rev. Levy Daily. She moved to this State in 1879; married William H. Gentry, June 21, 1888; died at her home, near Glenmora, La., June 18, 1895, and has left a husband and four little children to mourn her loss.

Sister Gentry was a good Christian woman. The writer was her pastor. She was a member of my church at Glenmora, which was built by her husband, Bro. Gentry, last Fall. She was a great friend to all of God's ministers, and tried to do all she could for their happiness when they were about her. I have often heard her say that she did wish that she could do more to spread the gospel. May God comfort her loved ones that she has left behind! R. C. GRACE.

SOWELL—Died in Amite City, La., July 9, 1895, HARLIE H. SOWELL, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Sowell, aged four months and fifteen days.

"Harlie" was with us only a few days; but his mission may have been a very important one. Six dear children in this family, now equally divided—three on earth and three in heaven.

The Good Shepherd is calling father and mother very earnestly to look up and follow him in a higher life of faith and obedience. May God sanctify this sorrow to the whole household! W. H. P.

Bear always in mind that God will never do for us what we can do for ourselves. See that spoiled child on the floor, pettishly demanding that the mother bring him an article that he has just thrown away, and that is allll nearer him than the mother. Unreasonable demand, is it not? And thus we often ask God to give us things easily within our reach, and, sometimes, things that we have thrown from us. It is unreasonable to expect an answer to such a prayer. God's part is the super-human. Never forget that.—Holston Methodist.

Are there any of us who can look back on wrong and injury done to us by our fellowmen? This, if we were wise, we would not wish to forget. Far more noble is it to remember in full, and yet forgive; to retain our sensitiveness unimpaired, and yet to take the offending brother to our hearts as if he had done us no wrong.—A. P. Peabody.

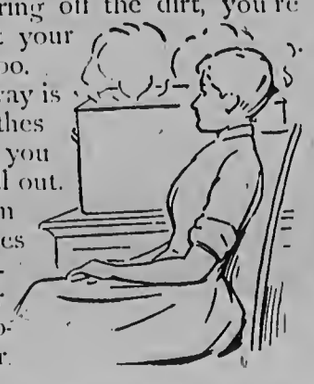
Two ways of washing.

One is the same way your grandmother washed—but there wasn't anything better, in her day. You rub soap into the clothes—then you rub them up and down on a washboard till you get the dirt worn off. This is hard work—and while you're wearing off the dirt, you're wearing out your clothes, too.



The other way is Pearline's. You put the clothes into Pearline and water—then you wait. Pearline gets the dirt all out.

A little rinsing makes them perfectly clean. Pearline does the work. There can't be anything so easy, so economical, or that keeps your clothes so absolutely safe from harm and wear and tear.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you, "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, if your grocer sends you an imitation, be honest—send it back. 426 JAMES PYLE, N.Y.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., July, '96. A little later it will be August, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1 35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Mississippi Chautauqua Association is being held at Crystal Springs.

The city of Cincinnati has presented the United States cruiser "Cincinnati" a fine silver service, worth $5 000.

A Boston clergyman told the Christian Endeavorers that "No Protestant creed offers a platform broad enough to be a meeting ground for all Christians."

It seems that last Winter's phenomenal cold did not do so much damage to the Florida oranges as was thought. Late reports say that 90 per cent. of the trees are still alive.

It is estimated that the late convention of Christian Endeavorers, in Boston, cost the members in railroad fares, hotel bills, and other necessary expenses not less than $1 000,000

Mississippi's National Guard went into camp at Columbus, Miss., last week. Twenty-seven companies are in camp out of a possible thirty-one, and 1,000 soldiers under military discipline.

A number of Second Adventists whose crime was working on Sunday, after observing Saturday as the Sabbath, are working the roads of Knox county, Tenn., in the prison gang with common felons.

A detachment of the Salvation Army made a raid on the encampment of Illinois State troops, but they found the devil strongly entrenched there, and were repulsed with great violence. Some of them were seriously hurt.

The United States Printing Office, in Washington, is the largest establishment of the sort in the world. It employs more than 3 000 people, with a pay roll of nearly $3,000,000 a year, and in 1891 turned out more than 40 000 000 copies of various documents.

St. Bernard parish has awakened from its long quietude, and along with the great terminal facilities which will be given by the New Orleans and Western railroad will have an electric line. The line will run from the Slaughter House to Chalmette.

The coming rice crop promises to be larger than the largest crop yet recorded, that of three years ago, when the total yield approximated 20 000,000 bags. All the reports from the country point to a banner yield, unless the equinoctial storms should prove uncommonly severe.

The Ballot Reform League, on last Saturday, held a very satisfactory convention in Washington Artillery Hall, this city, and, after completing its work, adjourned. Many parishes were represented, and the resolutions adopted state very clearly the object of the league, which is to so restrict suffrage in this State as that the ignorant and shiftless classes and unnaturalized foreigners will be deprived of the ballot; while, by the adoption of the Australian system, it will be practically impossible to falsify the results of elections.

The largest transaction in the history of the Southern lumber trade has just been closed by the execution in St. Louis of a contract by an extensive lumber firm of Lumberton, Miss., to furnish 100,000,000 feet of yellow pine lumber to a large manufacturing company of that city. It will take the mills four years to saw this lumber, and require 10 000 freight cars to convey it to its destination.

There is a marked increase in yellow fever cases in Havana, Cuba.

Prince Henry of Prussia has been sending home quantities of water from the Jordan for the baptism of royal babies.

The Pope has ordered triduum of prayer to be made in all the churches for the conversion of England to the Catholic faith.

By a vote of 18 to 6 the School Board of Toronto, Ont., has rejected a resolution condemning feminine teachers in the schools who wear bloomers.

Ex-premier Stambuloff the Bulgarian statesman, who was murderously attacked and wounded in the streets of Sofia, died of his injuries on July 18.

It is estimated that 70,000 pilgrims will arrive in the City of Mexico in October to attend the ceremony of coronation of the Virgin of Guadaloupe. The holy see has ever made it obligatory on Catholics to believe in the apparition of the Virgin.

It is said that Li Hung Chang is tired of official cares and wishes to be free of them and spend some time in travel. He is seventy-six years old, very rich, and has never been outside of China, except on the occasion of his recent visit to Japan. If he can obtain the Emperor's permission, he will spend the coming Winter in the United States, where he is especially anxious to visit.

The English Parliament will have a clear tory majority over all groups, including the liberal unionists. The things voted down and out there are sumptuary theories of trades union politics and socialistic experimentation. The things postponed from present consideration are home rule, the disestablishment of the English Church and abolition of the House of Lords. The matters brought to the front are reform in the laws, a policy of largeness rather than local liberty for Ireland; vigorous colonial development, and eventually bimetallism.

After the Grip, diphtheria, pneumonia, scarlet fever, typhoid fever, etc., Hood's Sarsaparilla is of wonderful benefit in imparting the strength and vigor so much desired.

Hood's Pills for the liver and bowels, act easily yet promptly and effectively.

Half consecration is a misnomer. You can not serve God in fractions. Your half-devoted Christian looks toward God, but leans toward his own idols.—Baltimore Advocate.

BUFFALO LITHIA WATER

Springs Nos. 1 and 2.—Their Relative Value as Nerve Tonics, and as a Remedy in Uric Acid Diathesis, Gout and Rheumatism.

Dr. William A. Hammond, Washington, D. C., Surgeon-General U. S. Army (retired), formerly Professor of Diseases of the Mind and Nervous System in the University of New York:

"I have recently made much use of the No. 1 Spring BUFFALO LITHIA WATER and in my opinion it is equal, and in several respects superior to the water from the noted No. 2. Spring. Thus, while quite as efficacious as a solvent for any excess of uric acid existing in the blood, it appears to have greater power in dissolving the deposits of urates that appear about the small joints in gouty and rheumatic persons, and in dissipating the tenderness of the bones and articulations which so generally is attendant on these conditions. In such cases I have known it to act with surprising thoroughness and rapidity.

"Recognizing the fact that the water of Spring No. 2 is an admirable tonic to the nervous system and a promotor of digestion in cases of nervous dyspepsia, I am very sure from the personal experience that the water of Spring No. 1 is superior in many cases. It's difficult to lay down any definite rules to establish the relative value of the two springs when both are so good. I think, however, that the water of No. 1 Spring is especially to be relied upon in cases in which the patient is decidedly anæmic. I have definitely established this point by examinations of the blood, with a hæmacytometer and hæmotometer."

Dr. Wm. T. Howard, of Baltimore, Prof. of Diseases of Women and Children in the Univ. of Maryland, referring to Spring No. 1, says:

"Were I called upon to state from what mineral waters I have seen the greatest and most unmistakable amount of good accrue in the largest number of cases in a general way I would unhesitatingly say the Buffalo Springs; in Mecklenburg County, Virginia."

This water is for sale by druggists generally, or in cases of one dozen half-gallon bottles $5.00 f.o.b. at the Springs. Descriptive pamphlets sent to any address.

What thoughtful mind can study the annually recurring miracle of the blossoms without realizing that the Creator is a lover of beauty. Out of the infinite resources at his command he beautifies the seasons with manifold charms; he paints the sky, the passing cloud, the great ocean, the majestic mountains, the forest, the field, and the glen, with a richness and variety of hue, and a splendor of form and a unity of design, and a harmoniousness of combination, which afford untold joy to his creatures. It should bring him near to us, the fact that he is the Creator of all beauty, and the infinite Lover of the beautiful.

God spoke to Moses, in the olden time, out of the burning bush. He speaks to us in this wonderful springtime out of the trees, the bushes, the orchards, the gardens, all aflame with his glory. Blessed are they who are able to say: "I have seen the Lord today. He has come near to me in the orchard-blooms; he has spoken to me in the blossoms?" — Central Advocate.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials. Address,

CAMP MEETINGS.

The Palmer Creek Camp Meeting will begin on Friday night before the first Sunday in October, and continue for nine days or more. This well-known camp ground has been a great blessing to all the country around, and if you wish to attend a good, old-fashioned, soul-saving camp-meeting, come and be with us at Palmer. A general invitation is given to all ministers of the gospel, and those who come will be met with hack at Mississippi City. There will be a public tent, furnishing meals at twenty-five cents, and two strawed sleeping tents—one for men, and one for women, where those may sleep, free of charge, who bring their own bedding. Come and be with us.

E. T. BERLAND, P. C.

The Sam Jones Camp Meeting will open on the second day of August, 1895. The camp ground is located on the L., N. O. and T. R. R., two miles north of Gloster. Trains will stop at the camp ground to take on and put off passengers.

The meeting will continue ten days. Gate fee, 25 cents per capita for season tickets, except on Sundays, when the gates will be thrown open to all free of charge. Board and lodging can be had for $1 per day, or 35 cents for single meals.

Ministers of the gospel are cordially invited to attend.

L. S. JONES, P. E. Natchez district.

Jackson, Miss.

The Topisaw Camp Meeting, located nine miles east of McComb City, will begin on Aug. 8, 1895, and run eight days.

Preachers generally are invited, and will be provided for. Hacks will run daily from McComb City to Camp Ground.

H. P. LEWIS, P. C.

Our camp meeting at Bethel Camp Ground, Wilkinson county, Miss., will begin on the fifteenth day of August, 1895. We have no gate fees, but we have good order, large congregation, and good accommodations. We invite our brethren in the ministry to come portionately, and to come prepared to preach and work. There will be a hack running daily from Whitaker station, on the Y., M. and V. R. R., out to Bethel Camp Ground; distance, about six miles. Come one, come all; and Mr. Editor, too.

The Queen and Crescent Route to Chickamauga.

Veterans and their friends will all want to attend the great National Park dedication at Chickamauga this Fall. It will be a notable event.

Do you want to know how to make the trip and what you'll see when you reach the journey's end? Write to W. C. Rinearson, G. P. A. of the Queen and Crescent Route, Cincinnati. Illustrated and descriptive matter upon application.

The Queen and Crescent Route to Chattanooga is the best line, and has the reputation of unequaled service of handsome trains of palace day coaches and through sleepers from New Orleans, Meridian, Shreveport, Vicksburg and Birmingham to Chattanooga. Quick schedules and interesting scenery en route help to make the Queen and Crescent the Southern route par excellence.

An educated Hindoo was once asked what, in modern missionary effort, made him fear most for the stability of his own religion. He replied: "We do not greatly fear your schools; we need not send our children. We do not fear your books; we need not read them. We do not fear your preaching; we need not listen. But we do fear your doctors and your women; for your doctors are winning our hearts, and your women are winning our homes. And when our hearts and homes are won, what is left for us?"

YOUR CROSS.

BY GEORGE BANCROFT GRIFFITH.

Ev'ry smile and kind word spoken,
Ev'ry gift, love's true, sweet token,
Is a recompense for loss;
Thankful be, though you're heart-broken,
For these flowers that God delights in Wreathe your cross.

Ev'ry thought that prayer may waken
For you, bowed, but not forsaken,
Is equivalent for loss;
Ev'ry mite from small hoard taken
Glows a gem in helping others,
Stars your cross!

Ev'ry tear that pity offers,
Ev'ry wish she kindly proffers,
Balances your daily loss;
Richer than wealth's rusting coffers
Are the jewels angels gather
For your cross.

Though your life is sad and lonely,
One has always known and loved ye,
Counted ev'ry thorn and loss,
Which, at last, as flowers only,
Shall breathe odors everlasting
Round your cross.

Selections.

What to Read.

BY REV. W. H. M'CLENNAN, BERWYN, ILL.

(An address delivered at the International Epworth League Conference.)

Books are not good simply because they are books—just as men are not all men because they stand on two legs. We have good men, bad men, and newspaper reporters. You are familiar with Channing's memorable words: "God be thanked for books. They are the voices of the distant and dead, and make us heirs of the spiritual life of past ages. In the best books great men talk to us, give us their most precious thoughts, and pour their souls into ours." And he might have added: In some books the arch-fiend, who dares not suggest to the ear those thoughts that blast all noble aspiration, interprets them to the eye through the pages of the modern society novel. An auctioneer of old books, holding in his hand a dog-eared and worm-eaten specimen of the last century, said: "Gentlemen, here is a very valuable work. It has marginal notes by Alexander von Humboldt." The marginal notes were as follows: "This book is not worth the paper it is printed on." Tons of the so-called literature of the day, which is crowded upon us in the railway trains, at stations, hotels, and even in bookseller's shops, the Trilby's, et id omne genus, ought to be thus indorsed. We need to emphasize in these days, as Schopenhauer says, "the paramount importance of acquiring the art not to read." The lamented Josh Billings used to say, "Better to know fewer things than so many things that are not so." Better, I should say, not to read at all than to read books that do not make for character. A few great books are of infinitely more value than a whole library of sickly, sentimental novels, untruthful histories, doggerel and jingles misnamed poetry, or falsehood dignified by the high-sounding name of philosophy. We should reject:

1. All books of low moral tone. Is not the life more than realistic pictures of swill barrels, barnyards, and gutter scrapes, or the soul than the knowledge of French amours and poems of passion? Tennyson voices with bitter irony his disgust of those who encourage such reading in his memorable lines:

"Feed the budding rose of boyhood with the drainage of your sewer;
Send the drain into the fountain, lest the stream should issue pure;
Set the maiden fancies wallowing in the trough of Zolaism;
Forward, forward—aye, and backward—downward, too, into the abysm."

2. All books that are frivolous, thoughtless, carelessly written, or written merely to sell, containing a grain of wheat in a bushel of chaff.

3. All books that misrepresent man as to his life here and hereafter; all that represent him as a worthless worm, and, on the other hand, all that makes him out a god, having no accountability to a higher power; all that insinuate that he is not immortal, and that for him there is neither reward nor punishment after life's fitful fever is over.

Finally, we should reject:

All faddy books; all that treat of esoteric Buddhism, theosophy, astral bodies, Christian science, and—shall I add?—woman's rights. In the years to come, after we are well grounded in history, science and philosophy—after we are prepared to think consecutively and logically—it may be well to read up the fads, if only to know just how many kinds of fools there are in the world.

Said I to a young girl whom I was advising regarding her reading, "How can I know a book is good or bad until I read it?" Only by cultivating the art of tasting. If we could not tell the value of food until it had passed through the various processes of digestion and assimilation, we might, like the Irishman, wake up some time and find ourselves dead. As with what we eat, so with what we read. We must cultivate the tasting powers. It is my duty each week to write reviews of books for one of the metropolitan dailies. Do I read the books through? By no means. That would be an endless, not to say profitless, task. Let me illustrate my method: I first look at the title page, then at the closing words, glancing meanwhile at the mechanical construction of the book. I then inspect the table of contents and read a few sentences of the opening chapter. Then the book is opened at random several times, and sentences, sometimes pages, are scanned. By that time one has a pretty good idea whether the book is good, bad, or simply commonplace. If it is good, it has degrees of goodness. Only the best require a careful and extended reading. Technical works must, of course, receive different treatment.

If you are very young, or have not cultivated the powers of observation, I would advise you to get a true foundation for a literary taste by communing often with nature. That will give you a sanity that is indispensable. Many of the fads are born in the cities, where God's sky and field and woods are never seen. The lark rises from, and pours out his flood of melody over stubble fields. It is the crazy sparrow that finds his home in the cities. If you do not like anything but story books, you should, by all means, read travels until you are interested in the real people of the world and their doings. But if you are fond of books and earnest in your wish to choose only what is best, I would advise you to select first the best poets. "Poetry," says Macaulay, "is the art of doing by words what the painter does by means of colors." Its secret, according to Matthew Arnold, lies in its interpretative power.

"The poet in a golden clime was born, with golden stars above,
Dowered with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn, the love of love;
He saw through life and death, through good and ill;
He saw through his own soul;
The marvel of the everlasting will, an open scroll,
Before him lay."

A poet is, then, if Tennyson be right, one who can see into the heart of things; into life, death, good, ill, his own soul. He is an interpreter of nature and of nature's God. Mere fact, the stuff out of which science is made, he ignores for truth, of which fact is but the outward expression. He has

"The child's sight in his breast,
And sees all new. What oftenest he has viewed,
He views with the first glory."

Poetry regards not the things that are seen and not material, but the things that are not seen and eternal. It lifts us above the commonplace into the region of faith and hope. It cultivates the "What Is," as Browning calls it, rather than the "What Knows" and the "What Does." It lays the foundation for true culture, which is the very antithesis of that snobbery which is sometimes referred to as "culchah." True culture is the state of being free from all that is coarse, rude, inelegant, and debasing. Better than music or art, poetry quickens the imagination to see the beauty of common things. Simplicity of life and manner, the lives of the poor, the artlessness and innocence of childhood are by the poet glorified.

After poetry we should read history, which comprises, besides chronicles and annals, biography and travels. But it is something more than a bare record of events. It tells of the triumphs of man in his struggles against animalism within him and materialistic forces without. By it we may know what man has done, how he has failed, at what sacrifices have come the institutions of our civilization. By the light of history we are enabled to direct our steps, with some degree of assurance, toward the goal on which is inscribed victory for the race of men.

After history, science, which is co-ordinated, arranged and systematized knowledge gained by observation, experiment and reasoning. Science trains the mind to be exact. It is the persistent foe of superstition, of looseness of thought and expression, of opinions based only on hearsay and prejudice. It is only science falsely so called that seeks to destroy faith. True science leads us to the borders of the known, confesses its limitations, and then, committing us to faith, a fairer guide, bids us seek and find the unseen and eternal.

After science we may read fiction, which is a prose product of the imagination in narrative form. That is not fiction which has nothing but story in it. Mere story-telling, which holds the solution of the plot to the last chapter, when Reginald and Guinevere—their enemies having meanwhile been killed off—are married, serves no higher purpose, as Prof. Moulton observes, than the gambler who stakes all on the last throw. Genuine fiction is to be classed with poetry. Though not historical, the real novel may be truer than fact, because it deals not with what is incidental, but with what is essential in character. The book of Job is largely fictitious; so is the Song of Solomon. Jesus spoke in parables. The Pilgrim's Progress is a novel. Read Dickens, Scott, Kingsley, Hugo, George Eliot, and adjure mere stories, however piously phrased, or sanctimoniously printed, or beatifically praised.

Finally, we should read philosophy, which is, as Sir William Hamilton says, "the science of things divine and human, and the cause in which they are contained." Certain truth we may know early in life, because God has revealed it unto us, but speculation on what has not been revealed we may postpone until we have read and thought and felt. As young people, we must acquire knowledge now, while the brain is active and blood is pure and right. Then, when the years have brought their mellowing influences, we may enjoy the delights of reflection on God and his world; and if we find it hard to choose the best books we should like to own, such conditions will bring the richest blessings to us if we are, on that account, driven to that Book of all books—God's Book and man's—the Bible. Were all other books destroyed, and we had the Bible, we should still be rich. "It lives on the ear like music that can never be forgotten." There is no poetry like the Psalms, no history like the Gospels, no fiction like the parables, no philosophy like the Proverbs and the letters of St. Paul. For inspiration, meditation, truest culture, this Book is yours:

"Within whose silent chambers treasure lies,
Preserved from age to age, more precious far
Than the accumulated store of gold
And Orient gems which, for a day of need,
The Sultan hides deep in ancestral tombs;
These hoards of truth you can unlock at will."

—Chattanooga Times.

The Sabbath.

Mr. Moody, in addressing the citizens of Toronto, lately said: "If any of you people want to give up the Sabbath and have it for a day of recreation, before you vote just slip on a train, go to Chicago, stay there thirty days, then come back and vote to give up the Sabbath. You will cut off your right hand first. If you are a Christian, you will never cast your vote to give up the Sabbath for recreation. The workingmen would make a great mistake if they should give up the Sabbath and let it go for a day of recreation. I remember when we didn't have the horse cars or the Sunday newspaper in Chicago. I remember how these horse cars got to running; it was to accommodate the church-going people. There are a few star preachers and a few people who have to go the entire length of the city to hear a star preacher. They got the cars, and it looked as if Satan had got aboard and said: 'I'll take charge of this now.' They have emptied the churches, and all the steamboats and barges are employed on Sunday carrying excursions. There are four hotels on the corner where I am stopping, and last Saturday night—there had been a football match—the boys shouted their papers until midnight, and then silence reigned for twenty-four hours. I said: 'Happy city!' Thank God for such a city on the American continent! I believe the greatest curse we have in America to-day is our Sunday newspapers. If you can keep them out, keep them out. They talk about Tammany in New York, but I believe these great dailies that bring out their paper every day of the week have done as much harm as Tammany."

Correspondence.

Missouri Letter.

We live far north of you, but we hear from you and study you, and learn from you all we can. So you may be pleased to hear from us now and then. For three years past we have had less than the average amount of rain until recently. Springs and wells were dry this Spring that never failed before. Now the rain is abundant, and so we need it. While it came too late to bring out the meadows fully, it is boosting the corn wonderfully, and it nothing occurs to cut it short, it will be up to our very best. The stringency of the times has relaxed a very little among us, and we feel hopeful; but the improvement is slight and of slow growth.

This is not our revival season, and I hear of few successful meetings. The Fall and Winter is our reaping-time. A few camp meetings are being held, and some others.

The Methodists, Baptists and Disciples are about equal in numbers in our State, and keeping well together. Our better system of reporting and pruning allows them the advantage in counting.

The League is growing rapidly, and much good will come out of it. I hope it will not be captured by some General Board, and switched out of harmony with the pastor and local church. It must be a part of the local church, and be left free to aid the pastor in his regular work, or hurtful antagonism will arise to the injury of both League and church.

We are interested in the holiness discussion, but far more so in the holiness movement.

Let the brethren of all shades of opinion lift high their voices to a backslidden church, and lead back into the old paths all those who are unmistakably living below the lofty standard of the gospel.

Our Northern brethren are discussing just now the time limit. That limit is bound to go. The tide is that way. It would put a check to the growing evil of transfers for special places. That is a necessity now, but an evil none the less. Our city churches need a more settled pastorate than our law now allows them. We can never do our best work in cities with a shifting ministry. The itinerancy would not be hurt, but helped by the plan. Every pastor's time would still expire annually, and he could be either removed or returned, as the authorities might judge best. Every preacher would begin to look to a longer term, and labor to deserve it. If it were possible to hold an Annual Conference and not move one man, it would be a blessing to the church. Every church would strive to become one of the unchanging ones, and thus mutual forbearance and co-operation would result. J. S. SMITH.

South Carolina Letter.

It has been quite a while since this scribe took his pen in hand to write anything for your valuable journal, but I presume neither you, Mr. Editor, nor your readers have had any serious objections to my long delay. Doubtless, the only regret that you now have is, that I have decided to write even at this late date.

And now, Mr. Editor, let me say, before going further, that if you do not find anything in this communication worthy the attention of your readers, you hereby have conveyed unto you the authority to consign it to the waste-basket, and it shall be kept a profound secret between thee and me from this time forth and forevermore.

Now, I really have something to say to your readers, and I propose to say it, provided you give me space to say it in. The good news that I have to tell is the fact—I say fact, for it is really and truly a fact, whatever others might think to the contrary—that your scribe had the exquisite pleasure of attending that tremendous gathering of Epworth Leaguers at Chattanooga, Tenn., in the month of June, during the year eighteen hundred and ninety-five Anno Domini. It was, undoubtedly, the biggest thing I ever saw; and if it all had been like some parts of it, I could say that it was almost the best thing I ever saw. First of all, they had a big tent. By the way, I was told that it was Barnum's old tent. Wonder if you, Mr. Editor, or any of your readers, know who Barnum was? Well, I'll tell you. Mr. Barnum was the big show-man who used to go around over the country with large animals for church members to go to see. Now, I wish it distinctly understood that I never went to see any of his wonderful animals; but I used to hear the Methodists talk about going to the show to see the animals. I suppose the animals must have been grand, as so many people went to see them.

And then there were the big speeches and the big sermons. What a treat it is for a little fellow to get off to such a place and hear such! That introductory address by the mayor of the city was good. It was a glorious thing to see an Israelite with an Epworth League badge on. As that great and good man, Chaplain McCabe, said, 'It was enough to make Susannah Wesley smile.'' The other address of welcome by Dr. J. P. McFerrin was grand. Then those addresses in response were enough to repay a man for the trip. In fact, all the addresses and sermons that I heard were good. It is worth a great deal to hear such men as Bishops Galloway, Hendrix, Fitzgerald, Joyce and Merrill, and Doctors Potts, Steel, Schell, Kelley, and all the rest.

And then there was wonderful sympathy. It was grand to see delegates, old and young, male and female, black and white, from all parts of our country, holding sweet communion on the very spot where, only a few years ago, our fathers met in bloody conflict. I am glad I went. It has enlarged my sympathies and widened my vision.

South Carolina was not so well represented as she ought to have been; but when the roll is called up yonder in Canada at the next convention, we hope to be there in full force. I'll tell you what I wanted to next time.

A Church Dedication.

On Sunday, June 23, it was my privilege to be present at the dedication of a church in Harrison county, Miss., about eight miles back of Mississippi City, on the line of the Gulf Port and Ship Island railroad. It is but a short distance from the home of Dr. J. B. Walker, through whose zeal and enterprise largely the church was built.

Ever mindful of the interests of Zion, he longed to see a house where the people might be instructed in the things of God. Accordingly, he laid his plan before his neighbors, which was to the effect that the ground should cost them nothing, and the material would be furnished if they would erect the building. This plan was agreed upon, and carried out under the Doctor's supervision, and, in his absence, his devoted wife and life-long partner looked after the interests of the work.

June 23 was selected for the dedication. It was a beautiful Sabbath, and the people came from far and near, in carriages and buggies, on horseback and on foot. There were present the pastor, Rev. Elbert Breland; Rev. J. M. Pugh, of Hansboro, Miss., and Bro. J. C. McAllister, of New Orleans. At eleven o'clock the house was filled, and, under the shade of the pines, breathing their sweet perfume, we listened to the dedicatory sermon by Dr. Walker, who, though feeble from his late sickness, was enabled once more to preach the Word with power. He spoke of God's efforts, through the arrangement and worship of the Temple, to teach his all but unapproachable holiness, and showed the necessity for reverence and solemnity in God's house to-day.

After the sermon the three trustees presented the house, and Dr. Walker dedicated it to God's service, calling it St. John's M. E. Church, South.

It is a plain country church, but is well built and of good material. The weather-boarding is dressed, and the interior is finished in headed ceiling. The windows, which are glazed, are large, affording plenty of light and ventilation. It is seated with one hundred and forty-four light-colored, comfortable chairs. The pulpit furniture is the same that has stood in Carondelet Street Church for many years. When the pulpit was offered to Dr. Walker, he was delighted. It recalled many pleasant memories to him who had stood behind it so often to proclaim the Word.

I believe the church, as it stands, is free from debt. A little more money, however, is needed to paint it, fence it in, and dig a well.

A church was much needed at this place, and God be praised that his people found it in their hearts to build one! May his blessing remain with them and their work!

The Grenada District Conference.

The twenty-sixth session of the Grenada District Conference was held at Duck Hill, Miss., July 12-14, 1895; Rev. R. A. Burroughs, P. E., in the chair, who presided with satisfaction to all present. There was a good representation both of clergy and lay members.

The reports made by the preachers showed that some charges are advancing on all lines, and that all of them are moving on fairly well. The preaching done at the Conference was good. The people of Duck Hill entertained the Conference in fine style, and most heartily.

The presiding elder had prepared an excellent programme for the occasion, which was carried out. The discussions were, in the main, good; some of them splendid, and they will result in good.

The new church was dedicated on Sunday by R. A. Burroughs. The session closed Sunday night with a fine sermon and good communion service.

R. W. Jones, T. S. Beadle, M. G. Dubard and J. A. Townes were elected delegates to the next Annual Conference. The next session will be held at Grenada.

In the Living Present.

Rumors of criminal practices led to a governmental investigation of a monastery at Aix la Chapelle. The result is the close of its private hospital and incarceration of two of its monks. Recalcitrant theologues and obstreperous church members had here been punished under the guise of being medically treated.

In our public school system Roman Catholicism recognizes its most dangerous foe. When, on the Fourth of July, a patriotic procession proceeded in the streets of Boston, displaying, besides the colors of our country, a miniature representation of a public school-house, a Roman Catholic mob attacked the patriots, causing a riot. One man was killed.

Rev. George D. Herron, a professor of Grinnell College, Iowa, is charged with anarchism. In a lecture he is reported to have said among other extravagancies: "Our boasted liberties were born, not in the faith of the Puritan fathers, but of the atheism of France. Our nation is to-day a social dung-hill. Yes, we've betrayed our trust, and Nemesis is at our door. Expect to wade in blood ere I pass away."

Is not our boasted civilization but a thin veneering? At Clanwell, Ireland, Bridget Clery has been burned for witchery. Her husband, assisted by six men, performed the cruel deed. In their trial in court they offered as their plea "that they had not designed to kill the woman, but simply to drive the evil spirits from her by slowly roasting her on fire."

Oliver Cromwell, being dead, yet speaketh. The collapsed Liberal government in England desired to erect a statue in Westminster Abbey in honor of the named patriot. But in Parliament the government failed to secure the necessary approval. The Irish members voted against the bill. Though Cromwell had executed a king and temporarily abolished the House of Lords, it was remembered that he had at one time said: "The only way to give peace to the Irish people is to submerge the Emerald Isle for twenty-four hours in the Atlantic Ocean."

The Memphis Commercial-Appeal inveighs against boy preachers. Calls them a nuisance. Their utterances a travesty of things sacred. The New York Christian Advocate endorses the utterances of the Appeal. Boys ought to go to college or work on the farm. The boy preachers usually become inafferably dull when attaining to maturity. SECRET THOUGHTS.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

I hold it true that thoughts are things,
Endowed with bodies, breath, and wings,
And that we send them forth to fill
The world with good results—or ill.

That which we call our secret thought
Speeds to the earth's remotest spot,
And leaves its blessing or its woes
Like tracks behind it, as it goes.

It is God's law. Remember it
In your still chamber as you sit
With thoughts you would not dare have known
And yet make comrades when alone.

These thoughts have life, and they will fly
And leave their impress by and by,
Like some marsh breeze, whose poisoned breath
Breathes into homes its fevered death.

And after you have quite forgot
Or all outgrown some vanished thought,
Back to your mind to make its home,
A dove or raven, it will come.

Then let your secret thoughts be fair.
They have a vital part and share
In shaping worlds and moulding fate—
God's system is so intricate.

A Chapter from Theology of Fatherhood (Revised).

BY REV. J. H. KENNEDREW, COLUMBUS, MISS.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

Different modes of applying the water in baptism would not indicate different modes of baptism, but of applying the water to be used to the subject, for Christian baptism is not with water, nor in water. That is John's baptism; he baptized with water, but Christ's was to baptize with the Holy Ghost. Doubtless, when the apostles administered baptism, they recited a formula like the following: "Upon a profession of thy faith and repentance, I baptize thee into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Amen." At the same time sprinkling clean water upon the subject. This constituted the outward and visible sign of baptism. We say above, "sprinkle clear water," because, while we have no intimation in the New Testament as to just how the water was applied in Christian baptism, the prophets afford very precise and definite instruction upon this very point. When there was room for controversy, they always gave their authority from the Old Testament for their preaching and practice unto the gospel dispensation. But upon this point there seems to have been no difference of opinion. Take, for example, that passage from Ezek. xxxvi, 25: "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean; from all your filthiness and from all your idols will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you; and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh; and I will give you a heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments and do them."

I can hardly conceive how the prophet could have made a more complete statement of Christian baptism than he has done in the above passage, and it is most reasonable to suppose that the apostles, acting under the infallible guidance of the Spirit, with one accord assented to the fact that water should be sprinkled upon the believing penitent, who is being baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus. Now, inasmuch as water is the great cleansing agent in nature, and was used for the purpose of ceremonial cleansing under the Old Testament dispensation, he says, "I will sprinkle you with clean water, and ye shall be clean." When we consider that in connection with this outward sign of the baptism of the believer into Christ by the Spirit, what more appropriate symbol of the inward cleansing could have been designed than that of water sprinkled? The ceremonial cleansing by the sprinkling of water under the old dispensation was, doubtless, designed to educate them and prepare them for a proper conception of its place in Christian baptism. The ceremonial of baptism into the name of Jesus Christ by the sprinkling of water is the outward sign of the baptism within, by the Spirit into Christ; and inasmuch as the believer is thus baptized into Christ, there is a beautiful propriety in symbolizing thus his cleansing. And what is so cleansing as water sprinkled? — so suggestive of the rain distilled from heaven?

Christian baptism takes the place of circumcision in the old dispensation. It unites the believing penitent with his Lord in his death, burial, and resurrection. "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ . . . for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." (Gal. iii, 27.) "For as the body is one, and hath many members, and all the members of that one body, being many, are one body, so also is Christ. For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." (I. Cor. xiii, 12.) From which it appears that in connection with ceremonial baptism into the name of Jesus Christ, the believing penitent is really baptized into his Lord, into his body, which is his church. Husband and wife are one. The church of Christ is his wife; therefore, if baptized into Christ by the Spirit—that is, into his church—we should be baptized into his name, inasmuch as the wife always takes the name of her husband. Thus, as we may say, Christian baptism is a marriage ceremony by which the believer is made one with his Lord.

It is, doubtless, in reference to our baptism into the name of Christ, and of our being thus united with him, that the following was recorded by Luke in Acts viii, 12: "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." The believer who has been baptized into Christ by the Spirit and united, or made one, with him, has put on Christ, and hence has put on the righteousness of Christ, having died, been buried, and risen with him. He has been baptized with that baptism to which Jesus alluded in Mark x, 39: "Ye shall, indeed, drink of the cup I drink of; and with the baptism I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized." Alluding to his baptism into death and suffering; hence the apostle says in Rom. vi, beginning with the second verse, "How shall we that are dead to sin live any longer therein?" The believing penitent is dead to sin in that he has abandoned it, and vowed to live no longer in sin. And besides, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death?" That is, "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ by the Spirit were so united with him that we were baptized into his death?" "Therefore we were buried with him by baptism into death, that, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." That is, when we were baptized into Jesus Christ, and so united with him as to be baptized into his death, we were on the same account—viz., by the baptism into death—"buried with him," because of our oneness with him. That, like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we, being quickened with Christ in his resurrection, should walk in righteousness, being one with him in his death, burial, and resurrection. Verse 5: "For, if united with him, we are in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

We may be untrue to our profession of faith and repentance, and hence derive no benefit from our baptism into the name of the Lord Jesus; but if such is not the case, and we have been united with him in the baptism of the Spirit so as to become in the likeness of his death (that is, dead to the law) we shall be in the likeness of his resurrection. "Knowing this, that our old man is crucified with him; that the body of sin might be destroyed; that henceforth we should not serve sin." That is, in our oneness with Christ in his death, our Adamic nature is crucified with him, that our body of flesh and blood, which loves sin, may be so subdued by the power of the Spirit within that we shall not serve sin. In Col. ii, 11-13, we have about the same thoughts presented as in the above passage, as follows: "In whom also we are circumcised with the circumcision made without hands, in the putting off of the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ." Circumcision symbolizing the putting off the body of flesh and blood; therefore, when Christ rose and ascended to heaven, he may be said to have been circumcised with that "circumcision made without hands." So, if we were united with Jesus in our baptism into him in his death, burial, and resurrection, we may be said to have put off the body of the sins of the flesh by the circumcision of Christ, which is his resurrection, because we were "buried with him in baptism, wherein also we are risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."

He continues in verse thirteen: "And you, being dead in your sins and the uncircumcision of your flesh, hath he quickened together with him, having forgiven you all trespasses." That is, when you were baptized into Jesus, being dead in your sins, under the sentence of the law, and in your body of flesh and blood which is prone to sin, you were quickened from this death by the life-giving Spirit of the resurrection of Christ into newness of life, that you might live for Christ and work righteousness.

Church and State Schools.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a clipping from the St. Louis Advocate, which will apply to all parts of our Zion as well as to the Methodists of Missouri.

If there is anything to be gained to church or people because of the existence of church institutions, we should think on these things; if not, let the church stop this outlay of men and energy, and turn over the whole cause of education to the State and private institutions. Give these numerous college agents, professors and presidents work in the pastorate. Sell the various colleges, and apply the money to the great cause of home missions.

How often do we hear our institutions of learning referred to as though they were the private property of the men who are elected to preside over them! Instead of "our school," they are spoken of as "your school."

If the recent action of our General Conference on the subject of education shall awaken our people to their duty to their educational interests, it will be a full compensation for the time and money spent by that body.

Our school men tell us that with the support of the church they can compete at all points with the schools of State and individual, and yet it is by constant persuasion and tireless drumming that they can persuade the church to support its own.

I hesitate not to say that with the spirit of loyalty upon our people that the Methodists of Mississippi and Louisiana could fill every institution to its utmost capacity, and maintain as high-grade colleges at as small an outlay of money as any other in our land.

We have before us the catalogues of East Mississippi Female College, and Millsaps College for boys. If any reliance is to be put in catalogue statements and figures, then we can safely say that for curriculum, faculty and prices they offer as much as any institutions in our section. What is said of them may be said as truly of all others.

Athens does not supply better advantages nor better work than the schools at Jericho. BEN EZRA.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BEN ELI.

MY DEAR YOUNG FRIEND: That you are a youth of parts and piety, no one who reads your letters will question. Your heart is in the right place and your head is pretty clear. But your desire to have our Conference school at Jericho an ideal college, has led you to forget existing conditions. To have an ideal institute, we must have behind it an ideal people. Yet to this condition our people have not already attained, nor are they already perfect. Were all who claim to be Christians loyal to the church and ready to support its institutions, Bar-Gamaliel might do what you desire. But so long as our people are what they are, to make the school too religious would be to unmake it as a school. You forget that parents no longer send their sons to college; the boys go where they list, and the old folks foot the bills. The college at Jericho is now as religious as it is safe to make it. There are now more Christian young men attending the great Gentile College at Athens than we have at Jericho, and they are at Athens rather than at Jericho because they prefer a school where attendance at chapel service every morning and at church every Sunday is voluntary.

It is true that free tuition and two changes of raiment a year attract some, as was the case with one youth whose father is a church member and worth one hundred thousand shekels. The father encouraged the youth to go to Athens—free tuition and two changes of raiment were not to be sneezed at. The greater moral risks were not so tangible; and, besides, we have a church and preacher at Athens, and the boy can be religious if he wants to. But not many get the free tuition and two changes of raiment. The Christian young men who are at Athens spend, on an average, more shekels per year than the students at Jericho do; so economy is not the reason they prefer Athens. Nor are they getting better work. The average results in scholarship and manhood are better at Jericho for this reason.

If you will work on your people and bring them to a higher standard, and the other preachers will do the same, so that our people can be depended on to support our Conference school instead of Gentile colleges, then Bar-Gamaliel will have no trouble in making the Jericho College more and more religious in its spirit and in its course of study. Let Bar-Gamaliel alone, and work on the people. ISHMAEL.

Report of Committee on Publications, Vicksburg District Conference.

We note with pleasure and pride the ability with which the Nashville Advocate is edited. Its circulation ought to be quadrupled. It deserves our patronage, because it has earned a high place in our confidence, and represents our great church.

The General Conference was wise in the choice of Dr. Tigert as editor of our Review. That publication has at last landed on a safe financial basis, and is paying its way. Its high standard has been sustained under Dr. Tigert's administration, perhaps improved.

We commend the very apparent improvement that has been made in our Sunday-school literature; and as to one feature of same, would suggest to the editor the dispensing of the "Lesson Text," substituting therefor the printed reference to the chapter and book in the Bible, thereby increasing demands for the Bible in our Sunday-schools and in our homes.

The Review of Missions, and other periodical literature which is issued at our Publishing House, should be taken and read by all our people. If taken and studied by every man, woman and child, there would be an increased interest in mission work.

We offer hearty co-operation to Dr. Black, and would like to see the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE in every Methodist home, and deplore the action of some of our preachers in circulating papers—not organs of the church, and outside of our territory—of doubtful theological consistency to the apparent injury of the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE, and to the injury of our membership, because of the attitude of inconsistency and rebellion of disciplinary laws and vows. While the NEW ORLEANS ADVOCATE is published and controlled by Dr. Black, and while we would not presume to dictate to him in the least, yet the paper is ours as a church, and we would suggest to him the propriety of collecting his claims by the usual methods of mail and home agents — the preachers — and not through the help of commercial collecting agencies. We know of several instances where receipts were in hand of members being "dunned" and threatened with law suits by said agencies. This will make enemies to the paper; has done it. Require the cash of every man, and stop the paper when the time is out.

Bolton, Miss., June 29.

Notes by the Way

This is my report of one month's canvass in the interest of Millsaps College: Nine hundred and fifty miles traveled, sixteen sermons preached, quite a number of addresses for the college, many personal interviews with young men who are thirsting for an education, four hundred catalogues judiciously distributed, two hundred names sent to Dr. Murrah for catalogues.

Every attention has been given me for the college's sake; brethren of the North Mississippi and Mississippi Conferences vying in co-operation. Every prospect for 300 boys. The number 300 is now the cry of 250 Methodist preachers. This means success. It is easy to canvass for a college which has a great president and a learned faculty. The college is daily growing in favor with the Methodists of Mississippi.

I am asked constantly, "What will it cost at Millsaps College for ten months?" Answer: Matriculation fee, $25; incidental fee, $5; library fee, $1; board in the two halls—the Williams Hall and Asbury Hall—$12. This includes furnished room, fuel and light. Board in excellent private families, $12. Table board in halls and private families, $10. A number of students who lived in the cottages by "clubbing" brought their expenses below $6 per month.

Blessing on the young men of Mississippi! I. W. COOPER.

Selections.

Daniels or Joshs.

No one can choose his duties. He must accept or reject those which Providence presents. There is no third course. He may shut his eyes to the light, and try to persuade himself that some things more pleasant, and not these painful, difficult things, are what is required of him. But it will be of no use. They will remain duties just the same. If they come to him in the order of God's will, his only hope of true peace and prosperity lies in manfully performing them. He will not, by endeavoring to flee, escape the pain or the trouble from which he shrinks. Pain and trouble are inevitable to every one who lives. But one may very easily lose the consolation, the high support, the glorious thrill of joy, the developed character, the ennobled manhood or womanhood, which come only to him or her who stands firmly in the place allotted and holds bravely till death the post assigned. Genuine heroism may be shown in humble homes. Daniels and Jonahs—alas! many more of the latter than the former—are seen on every side. To trust in God and do the right remains, amid all changing fashions, the one path to lasting renown.—Zion's Herald.

Practical Praying.

Many professing Christians will pray for their children's spiritual healing and then poison them; they pray that their sons may be sober, and then tempt them with a decanter of wine on the table; they pray that their daughters may be pure, and then carry them off to see shameless and salacious plays in a theatre. On Sunday morning they ask for a blessing on God's Word. When the church service is over they come home to a sumptuous dinner to crack jokes about the sermon, or the singing, or a neighbor's dress, and by every possible means to drown out any serious impressions that faithful preaching may have produced. As far as their influence goes, it is right against the very results for which they pretended to pray. Their petitions become solemn mockeries. It will be a terrible thing for such inconsistent parents to meet their own prayers at the day of judgment. God might say to such, "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou unfaithful servant!" —Theodore Cuyler.

Controlled Temper Better Than No Temper.

It is a good thing to keep one's temper in control. It is a sad thing to have no temper to keep in control. Some men are disturbed because they are disturbed. They regret their temptation to get angry; whereas they would be worth a great deal less in the world if they couldn't get angry. Unless they were temptable, they would be neither admirable nor efficient. Thank God if you have a quick, strong temper; and pray God to enable you to keep it in due check, and to use it wisely.

It has been said that the hardest words to pronounce in the English language are, "I made a mistake." When Frederick the Great wrote to the Senate, "I have just lost a battle, and it's my own fault," Goldsmith says, "His confession shows more greatness than his victories." Such an acknowledgement is a sign of genuine nobility of character. It has, however, been a puzzle to us how people can be so ready in their prayers to confess their offenses and yet be so reluctant to frankly admit their mistakes to their fellow-men.

Festus says that Jesus is dead, Paul says he is alive. That is all. And yet that—a live Jesus or a dead Jesus—that is the world-question, on which all others hang. If there be a bad thought, a bad word, a sinful era, a hindered progress anywhere in man's history, it comes from some assertion or other that Jesus is dead. If there be a good impulse, a sincere truth, an onward step anywhere, it comes just as surely from the power of a living Jesus.—Phillips Brooks.

It was a capital hint which a certain minister made in his quiet way in giving out the notices, when he said: "If there had been as many men as women at the last prayer meeting, the attendance would have been about seventy; if there had been only as many women as men, the attendance would have been about a dozen." It was unnecessary for him to add any more.—Mid-Continent.

Prayer is "the Christian's vital breath;" he can no more live without prayer than the physical man can exist without breathing.

The Conference of the W. F. M. S. at Crystal Springs.

The Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society held its sixteenth annual session at Crystal Springs, June 14-18—that place so renowned for warm-hearted hospitalities, abundance of pure water, and large shipments of vegetables and fruits. Although our annual gathering dates one year younger, we are really only a few months younger than our mother organization, the Woman's Board.

Beautifully and affectionately were we welcomed by Miss Maggie Jones in behalf of the church, and Mrs. Middleton's warm greeting, elegantly expressed, at once aroused warmest thanks, and feelings of indebtedness to the auxiliary society. Mrs. Rohr. Reed responded fittingly and well. A tender chord vibrated to the touch of "the fellowship of kindred minds" when Mrs. Robinson, of the Presbyterian Society, and Mrs. C. A. Owens, of the Baptist, with Christly spirit, bid us welcome. We were made glad that we came, and Mrs. R. R. Parker was called out, and from the inspiration of the moment expressed this gladness, and the honor conferred on us by these societies of the sister denominations, tenderly recognizing the beautiful thought of dwelling together in unity.

The presence of Miss Bruce, the returned missionary from Brazil, and Miss Barnes, editor of the Little Worker, caused this to be one of the most interesting meetings ever held. Full of loving loyalty, heroism and holy zeal, eloquent words from overflowing hearts, accompanied with pathetic appeals, were lavished upon us, causing our hearts to come in closer touch with the foreign work. Surely all were impressed with the great need of missionary intelligence, and greater diligence and efforts among the young people and children.

The children's mass meeting conducted by Miss Barnes was very interesting, and all enjoyed the familiar songs sung in the Portuguese language by Miss Bruce. Miss Bruce's address on Brazil called forth encomiums of praise and well-merited appreciation, with the request by the Conference that it be published in the W. M. Advocate, and in leaflet form for distribution. The Board had requested her to prepare a paper for publication in leaflet form.

The strong, thoughtful address of the president, Miss Marshall, at the anniversary was listened to with interest by a full house.

STATISTICS AND MISSIONARIES.

Fifty-eight adult auxiliaries, 1,500 members; 9 young people and juvenile societies, 200 members. Total members—1,700. There are 38 life members, 6 auxiliaries added during the year, 300 subscribers to Woman's Missionary Advocate, 117 subscribers to the Little Worker, besides those obtained by Miss Barnes at this meeting. Treasurer reported $1,149.21 total amount received. Meridian the banner district. Conference pledges for outgoing missionaries, $114; Mo-Nemar Fund, $200.

By obtaining 600 subscribers to the Evangel, the paper published at the Training school, for twenty-five cents per annum, we are privileged to place a pupil there for one year, free of charge. A young lady that desires to become a missionary, and recommended by Mrs. Galloway, was chosen by the Conference as the beneficiary, if we succeed in our efforts.

Bro. T. B. Holloman, our warm friend, who honors us by claiming to be one of us, encouraged and helped us, and made this offer: If the missionary society sends ten girls to the East Mississippi Female College, who take regular literary course only, we will take Miss McNemar (or other) for $100. If five of the ten take extras in the course, the expense shall be only $50. If the society sends five girls, who take regular literary course, we will take Miss McNemar (or other) for $150. If these five take extras, we will take Miss McNemar (or other) for $100.

If the society can aid us in securing $2,500 in $50 bonds, we will give one girl's tuition free of all charge. For every bond secured when 150 $50 bonds shall have been secured, a credit of $5 for every such bond.

The vote was made unanimous that the next annual meeting be held in Natchez.

A memorial service was held for Mrs. Juliana Hayes, our beloved honorary president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, who was the first president. Papers were read by Miss Annie Linfield, Miss Sallie Smylie, and Mrs. Chatfield. Resolutions were drafted by a committee, and read by Mrs. Bishop Galloway, the first president of the Mississippi Conference Society. These were ordered published in the Woman's Missionary Advocate and the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

Bro. Burton, our Conference host, kindly aided us during the meeting, and won for us eight subscribers for the Woman's Missionary Advocate by a fine talk in behalf of the magazine.

We enjoyed having Bro. Moore with us.

ANNIVERSARY SERMON.

Bro. A. F. Watkins tarried with us awhile, rendering valuable help. He preached the annual sermon, on Sunday, from the "high priestly prayer," selecting the eighteenth verse of the seventeenth chapter of St. John's gospel: "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world." Manifesting careful study of missions generally, being truly alive to the interests and needs of the church, he presented most encouraging features, proving that grand opportunities are ours to-day as never before offered, which implies the awful responsibility that rests upon everyone who has been blessed with Christian privileges, that grand victories await us in the near future, referring to the sad fact that so few of our women comparatively are engaged in this great work. He reminded us of the time when the embroidery needle, wielded by the deft fingers of a woman, was the entering wedge for the introduction of the light into the darkened abode of woman, proving the exhaustless store of God's resources. He spoke of the world's being massed in Christian Protestant countries awaiting the arousal of the missionary conscience to bring it forth, etc.

Most impressive and opportune was the administration of the Lord's Supper that followed.

It was midnight when our blessed Savior, bright Morning Star, was bedimmed in order that his radiance be shed in all its brilliancy, calming and comforting all saddened hearts with soothing strains of redemptive music. Then let us glean lovely flowers from our Gethsemanes, and come bravely forth prepared to represent our risen Redeemer, and with our adopted motto, "Through Christ which strengtheneth me," proclaim the glad tidings, "Messiah is King," and claim the heathen as a rightful inheritance to aid us in crowning him Lord of all.

FROM THE WORK.

REVIVAL NOTES FROM LINWOOD CIRCUIT.

We have just closed a very successful meeting at Hopewell Church. Rev. J. H. Foreman, pastor of Neshoba circuit, did most of the preaching. He is an earnest and faithful worker for God, and did our church and community much good. There were seven accessions on profession of faith, and four by certificate, also a number of conversions. The church is on an upward move. To God be the praise.

F. B. ORMOND, P. C.

Herbert, Miss., July 20.

Rev. C. F. Emery, P. C.: "Our third Quarterly Conference, which has just closed, shows everything in excellent condition for Purvis circuit. All the finances are well up to date, and all will be paid up in full at the end of the year. Recently we held a protracted meeting at Lumberton, assisted by Rev. G. D. Andors. This resulted in ten accessions to the church, and the work was greatly revived. We are about to begin the erection of a fine church at Lumberton. This is a delightful appointment, and the work of the Lord is prospering."

Rev. W. J. Porter, P. C.: "Our Louisiana Holiness Tent is pitched at Indian Bayou, with Rev. D. C. Rawls in the lead, assisted by Bro. A. E. Vail. Opposition is giving way. While some who live in sight refuse to attend, others come from ten to twenty-five miles. Interest good from the start. Tent crowded to overflowing. At least seven hundred present last night. Salvation is flowing. Sinners are being converted and believers sanctified. One came twenty-five miles by private conveyance seeking entire sanctification, and went home rejoicing in full salvation. Praise the Lord for his wondrous love!"

REPORT FROM SOUTH VICKSBURG.

During the hot weather the faithful few are true to the church and to Christ, and with their help we are pushing the battle against sin in South Vicksburg. A revival in the Spring, conducted by Bro. W. T. Griffin, of Wesson, was a great blessing to the church. Sinners were converted and believers sanctified. Many still remain true to their profession, while a few have gone back. The congregations at night were the largest in the history of the church.

It is very evident that God places a special seal on the preaching of the gospel when the doctrine of full salvation or entire sanctification is stressed. Eleven accessions was the visible result of the meeting. During the year we have received twenty-five into the church.

W. H. LEWIS.

July 22, 1895.

Rev. W. T. J. Sullivan: "We have had a great meeting in Tupelo, North Mississippi Conference. The Lord has blessed the town with the power of his Spirit and his truth. His people rejoice in his loving mercy. The faithful have been revived; backsliders have been reclaimed; sinners, young and old, have been brought into the fold of Christ; the sinews of power in the church have been strengthened; brotherly love abounds. We rejoice in the Lord. Sixty converts. The meeting began on July 2, and closed with the service of Monday morning, July 15. All classes gathered under the tent morning and night, and hung eager upon the word of truth and power as it came with earnestness and unction from the preacher's heart. The Rev. W. M. McIntosh, of Grenada, Miss., was the Lord's chief instrument in this great work. God has greatly honored our brother with remarkable effectiveness in winning souls to Christ. We expect all departments of church work to move forward apace."

Rev. J. M. Beard: "By request of Rev. W. D. Pickens, pastor of Shipbur Mine circuit, whom I recently assisted in a remarkable meeting at Neblett's Bluff, on the Sabine river, I write you a brief account. There has never been a church nor anything more than desultory gospel preaching in this neighborhood, though the people are prosperous and deserving in a remarkable degree, if we take into account this fact of spiritual destitution. The meeting was held under a large arbor which was nightly crowded with eager hearers, and where people were converted at almost every service. The meeting lasted nine or ten days, and, according to a very moderate estimate, there was an average of five conversions daily. There were many interesting incidents which space forbids us to mention, but the crowning triumph was the organization of a church on the skirts of the great Sabine wilderness, and fully five miles from any other preaching place, with several of the leading men of the neighborhood, and heads of families, converted during the meeting at the head of the register. It was Bro. Pickens' and the writer's pleasure to organize a similar church as the result of a like wilderness Pentecost last year at Prudhomme City, and it will be good news to some readers to be informed that they have since erected the church building provided for at that time, and without a cent of assistance from the Church Extension Board, at least so far. Bro. Pickens, in his first Conference year, is doing noble work and is greatly beloved by his people."

Rev. R. S. Gale, Meadville, Miss., July 19: "At the last session of the Mississippi Conference I was put on the superannuate list without my knowledge or consent. It was afterward arranged through the kindness of some of my friends, however, that I should serve the Meadville circuit. This work has, for years, been rated as one of the hard places of the Conference, so I came expecting to find 'a hard work.' After six months' labor among this people, I make this my report: I found a circuit of five churches, a membership of 267; a spirit of indifference, an abused and underrated people. Yet a more kindly people I never knew. They give daily evidence of their appreciation. We are in love with this people, many of whom have pledged to co-operate with their pastor. We are hopeful. Sunday-schools and prayer meetings are doing well; attendance good. Financially, all is well. Liberal assessments; a little behind on collections to date. Every dollar on every claim, is our aim, and we don't expect to miss it far. Our parsonage, damaged by the cyclone in December, has been repaired to some extent. We expect to have it comfortable by Winter. We are all 'poor folks,' and don't expect to cut a large figure in the world; yet we do intend, by the grace of God, to do what we can for the advancement of his kingdom. We are satisfied at the turn affairs have taken. What more could we wish? A good circuit, kind and willing people, a most excellent Christian gentleman and able preacher as presiding elder, and we feel that 'God is with us.' In a few days we begin our protracted meeting work. Later on expect a few notes from us."

Ripeness in Character.

One mark is beauty. Ripe fruit has its own perfect beauty. As the fruit ripens, the sun tints it with surpassing loveliness, and the colors deepen till the beauty of the fruit is equal to the beauty of the blossom, and in some respects superior. There is in ripe Christians the beauty of realized sanctification, which the Word of God knows by the name of "beauty of holiness."

Another mark of ripe fruit is tenderness. The young, green fruit is hard and stone-like; but the ripe fruit is soft, yields to the pressure, can almost be molded, retains the mark of the finger. So it is with the mature Christian; he is noted for tenderness of spirit.

Another mark of ripeness is sweetness. The unripe fruit is sour, and perhaps it ought to be, or else we should eat all the fruits while they are yet green. It may, therefore, be in the order of grace a fit thing that in the youthful Christian some sharpness should be formed which will ultimately be removed. As we grow in grace we are sure to grow in charity, sympathy, and love; we shall have greater and more intense affection for the person of him "whom having not seen, we shall have greater delight in the precious things of his gospel; the doctrines which perhaps we did not understand at first will become marrow and fatness to us as we advance in grace. We shall feel that there is honey dropping from the honeycomb in the deep things of our religion. We shall, as we ripen in grace, have greater sweetness toward our fellow-Christians. Bitter-spirited Christians may know a great deal, but they are immature. Those who are quick to censure may be very acute in judgment, but they are as yet immature in heart. I know we who are young beginners in grace think ourselves qualified to reform the whole Christian Church. We drag her before us, and condemn her straightway; but when our virtues become more mature, I trust we shall not be more tolerant of evil, but we shall be more tolerant of infirmity, more hopeful for the people of God, and certainly less arrogant in our criticisms.

Another and a very sure mark of ripeness is a loose hold of earth. Ripe fruit easily parts from the bough. You shake the tree, and the ripe apples fall. If you wish to eat fresh fruit, you put out your hand to pluck it, and if it comes off with difficulty you feel you had better leave it alone a little longer; but when it drops into your hand, quite ready to be withdrawn from the branch, you know it to be in good condition.—Charles H. Spurgeon.

The Optimism of Christianity.

Christianity is a gospel of light and hope as well as love. Its teachings clear the prospect and make very tolerable our residence in a world which has been cursed by sin and brought under control of the prince of darkness. The lands touched by the gospel make the illuminated side of our world. Heathenism means despair and defeat. The gospel is destined to move on, "scattering seeds of sunlight" and affording help to humanity until the reverse side of the globe shall be flooded with the light of divine truth. The herald of the glad tidings, though he "go forth with tears bearing precious seed," is destined to return with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him. The assurance of victory sustains us in the hardest fight. The enemies of God may be numerous and powerful; they are doomed to go down before our all-conquering Lord.

In the midst of the severest struggles the disciple of Jesus Christ has every reason to remain an optimist. His light afflictions endure but for a moment; the shadows soon flee before the ascending Sun of Righteousness. He has a religion which lights his countenance and his life.

One-Sided Men.

Never try to reason a man out of a belief he was never reasoned into, is, we think, one of Lord Bacon's aphorisms; and anyone who has undertaken a task of this character will readily concede the forcefulness of the expression. When the foundation of belief is mere prejudice, it is difficult to change the opinion; yet how many men have no better ground than this for what they erroneously term an opinion. They believe, or think they believe, certain things; but for the life of them they can give neither you nor themselves any satisfactory reason for believing as they do; and it is plain that the opinion they claim to possess is not the result of any process of ratiocination, or of a careful weighing of all the facts worthy to be taken into consideration before a conclusion is reached. Such people are always the most difficult to convert from the error of their ways, and the most likely to return to their first love.—Selected.

A Christian is one who knows the truth, loves it and lives it.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Pretentious piety is only another name for humbug.

Ignoble thoughts and purposes will never produce a noble life.

That a Christian can not live without sin is one of the devil's catches.

To taunt a brother with his past defections when he is honestly striving to lead a holy life, is the very essence of baseness.

Some people seem to be mortally afraid of doing more than their share of work. Fame and fortune are not on the hunt for such.

Taking a vacation should never mean rest from serving the Lord. The devil is glad when some church members start for an outing.

Some people have a habit of "speaking their mind" whenever it suits them, and then of taking refuge under the cloak of personal peculiarity.

The converted man who does not try to be as good as he knows how to be, is in great danger of backsliding, if he has not already lost the inward witness.

The man who claims to be regenerate, but who will not take communion because of ill-feeling cherished against a brother, needs to do his first works over again.

When church members spend the best hours of the holy Sabbath in poring over the Sunday newspaper, with its corrupting recital of murderous deeds, scandals and political events, interlarded with impure fiction, what wonder that sermons make no impression upon the heart?

The complaint reaches us that some pastors not a thousand miles away are exceedingly dilatory in the matter of sending church certificates when written to for them. The desire to hold on to members as long as possible, we suppose, is the cause of this. Surely such delays can't be attributable to negligence?

Said Chaplain McCabe in a sermon recently: "Every wrong in power is on its way to defeat and death; every right in the dungeon is on its way to enthronement and victory." True, every word. Hath not the Savior promised to be with us alway, even unto the end of the world? His kingdom is an everlasting kingdom. Yet some Christians think the world is going to the bad! Let each do his duty as he knows it, and God will take care of the result.

A Key-Word in Religion.

What a wonderful trinity the words faith, hope, and love, compose. Simple monosyllables they are; yet what a world of meaning they contain! Their relation, too, is an interesting study. They are the key-words of religion. Words like these are the ones that give the lexicographers the most trouble.

Faith, in the theological sense, is "belief upon evidence" — a firm conviction of the truth shared by both mind and heart. It lifts the veil which separates the visible from the invisible, and presents God and heaven and immortality as momentous realities. Hope, on the other hand, is the sweet, soul-cheering voice that tells us our longings shall be satisfied. Webster defines hope as "a desire of some good, accompanied with at least a slight expectation of obtaining it, or a belief that it is obtainable." The good, however, that men set their hearts upon may be real or fancied. No man hopes for what he can not obtain. Along with the desire for high and holy things which Christian hope includes there is always the expectation, as well as the possibility, of obtaining the blessings sought. Put it out of man's power to obtain the good he aspires after, and you at once destroy all incentive to right action.

Hope was in the world before the birth of Christianity, but it was sadly lacking in the element of loftiness. Man's life is profoundly influenced by the nature of the hope predominant within him. At Thermopylæ, at Bunker Hill—yea, upon many other battle-fields—the hope of liberty and of victory animated the soldiers on the weaker side to heroic, imperishable bravery. What but the hope of success could have induced Robert Fulton to carry out his steamboat project in the face of persistent opposition and ridicule?

Wealth, renown, power and pleasure are most commonly the objects of human aspiration. Accordingly, the men who set their hopes upon these earthly, transitory things are not the ones likely to display the spirit of benevolence and unselfishness. Intent upon the things of time and sense, eternal bliss seems but an idle tale—a thing little worth striving for. Every energy is bent in the direction of the things most hoped for. The greedy money-lover sacrifices health, honesty, and opportunities of grace, all in the pursuit —oftimes unsuccessful—of glittering gold. Behold a Richard III. thirsting for power, wading through blood to a seat upon the throne. Consider the life of a man like Aaron Burr, who consulted no principle but his own interest; who obeyed no god save his own passions. Here, indeed, was a man in whom base hopes prevailed.

So long as human eyes are fixed upon the temporal and the sensuous, just so long is life ignoble and selfish; but when our hopes are set upon things beyond the skies, then sympathizing love and noble righteousness shine forth in our lives. "If in this life only," says the Apostle Paul, "we have hope in God, we are of all men most miserable." Let men become convinced that death ends all, let the hope of salvation be removed, and at once a reign of terror would be inangurated.

Seneca but voiced the sentiment of his time when he said: "The aim of Philosophy is to despise life." Unsuccessful in the pursuit of happiness, and uncertain as to the future, the ancient heathen yielded themselves to all manner of excesses. All classes alike vied with one another in the practice of iniquity. Suicides were so common as hardly to excite notice. The same dark picture presents itself in heathen lands to-day. Yea, among the un-Christianized masses in our large cities the like distressing evils exist. The Japanese Buddhists have a proverb which runs thus: "The worst evil you can wish a man is for him to live again." Who would expect to find a lofty form of morality existing among those who thus believe? "Let us eat, drink, and be merry, for to-morrow we die," is the motto of all who have not Christ as an anchor for their hopes.

Says Uhlhorn, in his able work on the "Conflict of Christianity with Heathenism": "The more joyless this world became, the more everything faded which in the freshness of youth had shone so brightly; the State, Art, Science, offering no more satisfaction, public life affording no longer a field for activity, life itself becoming insecure; so much the more did men long for another world whose portals still stood closed before them. With what power then must have come the preaching of a risen Christ. Nothing led more believers to Christianity, even from cultivated circles, than the sure answer it gave to the question respecting another world, and the hope it offered of eternal life to those whose earthly expectations had been destroyed."

"O, what a blessed hope is ours,
While here on earth we stay;
We more than taste the heavenly powers,
And antedate that day!"

The Christian's hope is not an irrational thing—a baseless product of the imagination—but is the work of the Holy Spirit, which is the ground and support of all holy aspirations. Patience is the fruit and constant accompaniment of hope, which in turn is strengthened by the patient endurance of trials and difficulties. The spirit of meekness and resignation is not of man, but of God. "Tribulation," says the Apostle Paul, "worketh patience; and patience experience [or triedness]; and experience hope, and hope maketh not ashamed, because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, which is given unto us." Amid every circumstance the Christian's hope shines lustrous clear, for we have the assurance that "all things work together for good to them that love God." "For we, through the Spirit, wait for the hope of righteousness by faith." (Gal. v, 5.) Aptly does the poet sing:

"Auspicious Hope,—in thy sweet garden grow Wreaths for each toil, a charm for every woe."

Our conduct is the measure of the hold hope has upon us. Intense desire and expectation of spiritual good will lift us above the low plane of sordid meanness and worldly anxiety. "One scriptural mark," says Mr. Wesley, "of those who are born of God, is hope—a lively or living hope, saith the apostle [Peter], because there is also a dead hope as well as a dead faith —a hope which is not from God, but from the enemy of God and man, as evidently appears by its fruits, for as it is the offspring of pride, so it is the parent of every evil word and work; whereas, every man that hath in him the living hope is 'holy as he that calleth him is holy;' every man that can truly say to his brethren in Christ, 'Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and we shall see him as he is;' 'purifieth himself even as he is pure.'" Truly has it been said: "Faith is the root, love the fruit-bearing stem, and hope the heaven-reaching crown, of Christian life."

The unevangelized millions at home and abroad need, oh! so sadly, this blessed gospel of hope. Nor will God send us peace unless we cause others to be partakers of this hope.

The Christian Endeavor Convention, recently held in Boston, was the largest religious gathering in the world's history. Over 56 000 delegates were in attendance. The watchwords for the coming year are for an advanced interest in missions and for a better citizenship.

The First Mississippi Chautauqua.

At last Mississippi has fallen into line with her sister States in the organization of a State Chautauqua Assembly, the first session of which was held at the charming camp ground near the wide-awake town of Crystal Springs, beginning July 18, and lasting ten days. The meeting was a decided success. The gate receipts were sufficient to cover all expenses — a thing almost unprecedented in the history of first sessions. On several days over 2,000 people were in attendance.

A number of distinguished speakers and lecturers had been engaged, each of whom justified the wisdom of his selection. Much praise is due to Rev. R. W. Bailey, the indefatigable secretary of the assembly, for the great zeal and skill displayed in working up this educational enterprise.

The opening address was made by the Hon. J. S. Sexton, of Hazlehurst, who congratulated the citizens of Copiah county upon their having taken hold of the Chautauqua movement, whose great function is the intellectual development of those who have not access to our colleges and universities.

The first day was observed as Confederate Veterans' Day, an eloquent speech appropriate to the occasion being made by Col. C. E. Hooker.

On the second day of the assembly Rev. S. C. Caldwell, who has recently returned from a trip through the Orient, delivered a highly enjoyable lecture on "Jerusalem and Its Environs." The day following he gave another interesting lecture on Oriental travel, in which he graphically described a journey on horseback from Jerusalem to Damascus, over the same route traveled by the Apostle Paul. "Dollars and Sense" was the name of a delightful comedy presented the same day by Edward P. Elliott, the gifted impersonator. He made a great hit.

A striking address was delivered on Saturday by Rev. C. E. Cunningham, of Yazoo City, Miss., his subject being "Force," its various meanings being discussed.

Perhaps the most instructive lectures given during the session were those of Prof. Louis Favour on Electricity. The subject was made luminous as well as charming by means of experimental demonstrations.

"CHRIST IN THE CAMP."

On Sunday, the twenty-first instant, at 11 o'clock, Dr. J. William Jones, of Atlanta, delivered his famous address on "Christ in the Camp; or, Religion in Lee's Army." He said that it is a great mistake to suppose that only wickedness and vice ran riot throughout all the army. As war progressed more and more religious fervor was aroused.

He did not think there ever was assembled a large congregation in proportion to numbers than came together in Lee's army to hear even the humblest chaplain, and related incidents in proof.

W. C. T. U. DAY.

Monday was W. C. T. U. Day. At the morning session there was a symposium on "What the W. C. T. U. has done for me," led by Mrs. M. E. Erwin, of Columbus, at which a number of white ribboners made short talks. The meeting closed with a brief address by Mrs. Frances E. Beauchamp, of Louisville, Ky., the national organizer of the W. C. T. U. She spoke of the wonderful growth of the Union and of its children's association. Over 13,000,000 children, she said, are being taught the effects of alcohol and narcotics on the human system, all brought about by the W. C. T. U.

In the afternoon Mrs. Beauchamp lectured again to a large and appreciative audience on the evils of alcohol. She delivered also a third address the next day, taking as her starting point the question, "Does the liquor traffic pay?" Her addresses were able and convincing. One result of this meeting of the white ribboners has been the organization of a local W. C. T. U. at Crystal Springs.

Sam P. Jones, the inimitable humorist, delivered four of his characteristic lectures during the assembly. In the first one he confined himself to no particular subject, speaking as fancy dictated. The free silverites and calamity howlers come in for a share of his attention. His second lecture was on the "Home." In his third lecture on "Sham and Genuine," he punctured church, political, and other shams. The curse of the country, he remarked, is that every man has gone to office hunting. "Get There and Stay There," was the subject of his last lecture. Large and enthusiastic crowds greeted the great Georgia evangelist.

"Old and New Japan" was the subject of a very entertaining and instructive lecture delivered on Thursday afternoon by the Rev. H. G. Hawkins of Binnsville, Miss., recently of the National School, Matsuyama, Japan. A Japanese student, he said, always speaks of a custom that prevailed before the coming of Commodore Perry in 1853 as a custom of ancient time.

After Perry's time change after change came in quick succession, until we find a New Japan, with a parliament, an army of modern equipage, railroads, telegraphs, a fine mail system, a good public school system, newspapers, missionaries and a flood of new ideas. In government and public works they have now American and European furniture and ways, but in the home Old Japan lives. There they still use chopsticks and sit on the floor, still often pray to their household gods, still wear their own loose native costume.

His lecture was made doubly interesting by his display of maps, charts, household utensils and other curios. Mr. Hawkins also gave another lecture the day following on the "Early Religions of Japan."

On Thursday morning Rev. H. Walter Featherstun captivated his audience by a splendid address on "Christ in the World's Thought," in which he showed that religious history, philosophy, poetry, music, and art, all acknowledge the supremacy of the Great Teacher, and find in him their fullest expression. It was a masterful discourse.

The personage who excited the keenest attention was Miss Olof Krarer, a native Esquimau, who lectured Friday night, the twenty-sixth, on "Greenland; or, Life in the Frozen North." During the course of her lecture she donned her native costume, and sang an Icelandish song. She is thirty-five years old, is forty inches in height, and weighs one hundred pounds. Among the peculiarities of the Greenlanders, Miss Krarer mentioned their non-use of soap, and the custom of never performing ablutions. The speaker gave a brief, but exceedingly interesting sketch of her own life. The Esquimaux, she declared, are the most contented people on earth. No one has any money to worry over; their sole property is flints. In the theology of Greenland, heaven is a warm place, and hell is permanently frozen over.

Miss Krarer lectured again Saturday morning to a large and deeply interested audience.

Saturday afternoon and night were given up to Edward P. Elliott, whose second appearance only strengthened the good impressions made the week before. His rendering of "Hazel Kirke" was superb.

Sunday, the twenty-eighth, was the closing day. At 11 o'clock the editor of this ADVOCATE had the honor of preaching. Rev. M. L. Burton preached a vigorous and thoughtful sermon in the afternoon, in which he emphasized the necessity of physical, intellectual, and spiritual activity, concluding with a strong plea for the Chautauqua movement. At night the closing sermon was preached by Rev. H. Walter Featherstun. It was profound, scholarly, and eloquent, and made a fine impression.

During the assembly there took place an exciting contest for the Demorest gold medal.

The assembly is to be incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. One thousand of this amount is to be set aside as a permanent guarantee fund for the programme. The Chautauqua interest aroused at this meeting will result in the forming of a number of local circles here and there through the State.

RELIGION IN THE MEETING.

One of the most spiritually helpful features of the meeting was the series of addresses on "Methods of Christian Work," by Rev. Frank N. Parker, of New Orleans. Careful preparation and earnestness characterized each of these gospel talks, which were greatly enjoyed by all. Bro. Parker is a gifted and scholarly preacher.

MUSICAL FEATURE.

Prof. Rowland D. Williams, the brilliant musician, who so successfully conducted the singing at the International League Conference, was in charge of the music at the Mississippi Chautauqua. A number of talented musicians were present, and the concerts given from time to time were highly delightful.

NOTES

We note with pleasure the following item from the Wesleyan Advocate:

The temperance wave is rising all over the State. In many counties in upper Georgia enthusiastic meetings are being held to appoint delegates to the Rome Convention, on July 31st. There will be a great meeting for prohibition

***

According to a recent ruling of the Board of Managers of the House of Refuge in St. Louis, all denominations are to be allowed an equal opportunity for religious services if they choose to improve it. Heretofore the Catholic monks of a neighboring church have had a monopoly of the religious exercises.

***

In view of the financial difficulties of the Alabama Advocate, the editor, Dr. Armstrong, has very generously offered to remit his salary for the rest of the year. Rev. S. M. Hosmer, D. D., has assumed the business management of the paper, and we trust that ere long our confreres will have things on a sound financial basis.

***

What Rome will do when she has the opportunity is illustrated by the following incident:

The Roman Catholic archbishop of Peru used his high office to prevent the reception of a number of cases of Bibles passing the Callao custom-house, shipped by the American Bible Society, but, after long delay and litigation, was defeated.—Western Christian Advocate.

***

What the Leaguers did for Chattanooga, and the Endeavorers for Boston, the Baptist young people did for Baltimore—captivated it by their brightness and fervor. The members of these societies compose the very flower of Protestantism, and their united efforts against the whisky traffic mean its speedy and final overthrow.

***

The time limit is being much discussed in the Northern Methodist press. The itineracy, it appears, is a very different thing among them from what it used to be, as the following from the Western Christian Advocate will show:

It has definitely transpired that Dr. A. H. Lucas, who has so ably served High Street, Springfield, will be the next pastor of Butler Street, Pittsburg, succeeding Dr. Oldham, who takes the chair of missions in Ohio Wesleyan University.

***

President Cleveland has written Bishop Hendrix a warm personal letter and given him an autograph letter of introduction to the United States diplomatic and consular representatives in foreign lands. The letter will be of great service to the Bishop in his visit to Japan, Corea, and China, especially in the event of any further war troubles in those countries. Bishop Marvin received a similar letter from President Grant in 1876, just before he and his companion, now Bishop Hendrix, started on their trip around the world. The Bishop expects to set out July

PERSONALS.

Philip Phillips, the gifted singer, is dead. He was the author of the beautiful hymn, "The Home of the Soul," which was sung at his funeral.

We deeply sympathize with our brother, Rev. B. F. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference, and his noble wife in the recent loss of their little babe.

***

Rev. C. W. Crisler, of the Mississippi Conference, is spending the Summer at the Seashore Camp Ground, and holds services every Sabbath in the tabernacle.

***

The many friends of the Rev. W. E. Ballard, of the Mississippi Conference, will regret to learn that he remains a helpless invalid with but the faintest hope of recovery.

***

Rev. J. W. Honnoll, of Malone College, in a card written from Eudora, Miss., says: "I am here assisting Bro. James Porter in a meeting. Congregations are large and prospects good. Bro. Porter is in favor with his people, and is doing a good work."

***

H. R. Singleton, Jr., the promising son of a worthy, sire, has been recommended by the Hazlehurst (Miss.) Quarterly Conference for license to preach. He expects, in case license is granted by the District Conference, to ask for recommendation to the Annual Conference for admission on trial.

***

Rev. Thos. L. Lallance, for several years a member of the Louisiana Conference, but who for the past year has been stationed in Deming, New Mexico, has returned with his family to his old home in New Orleans in poor health. We are glad to learn that since his arrival he has steadily improved.

To the Preachers in Charge of the Various Circuits and Stations—

DEAR BRETHREN: Please send me a complete list of the local preachers, applicants for license to preach, and delegates who expect to attend the District Conference, Aug. 21-25. The I. C. R. R. will probably give reduced rates.

We hope for a full attendance. The district secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and the district secretary of the Woman's Parsonage and Home Mission Society are all invited and expected.

Mrs. Jas A Godfrey.

Mrs. Jas. A. Godfrey died Wednesday morning, July 17, at 8 o'clock A. M. She was buried by the side of her son, R. H. Godfrey, near Bradley, Miss. She suffered intensely for many months; but died triumphantly. She was surrounded by loved ones and friends, who ministered to all her wants. A more extended notice will be sent soon. Pray for us.

Notice.

At a meeting of the tent-holders of Cypress Bayou Camp Ground, held July 22, 1895, it was decided that, in view of the financial pressure of the times, and other unfavorable circumstances, the camp meeting would be suspended for the present year. Let all interested take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

Dr. W. H. Lyon.

Dr. W. H. Lyon, long an efficient local preacher in our church in this country, died at his home near Lexington, Miss., July 14, 1895, in the eighty-seventh year of his age. Few men have been a greater blessing to the church and community in which they have lived than Dr. Lyon. A suitable memoir will be furnished in due time.

Free Board at Centenary and Millsaps.

We will pay the board of any boy at Centenary or Millsaps for one session who will send us one hundred new subscribers to the ADVOCATE at the regular price—$2. We will also take six months' subscriptions at $1 each; and will count two six months' subscriptions equal to a yearly subscription. Here is a good chance for worthy young men to work their way through college. Perhaps some of our preachers who have sons to educate may find it to their interest to avail themselves of this offer. Let us hear from you, if you wish sample copies for canvassing purposes.

W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

P. S.—Should you fail to get the full quota of subscribers, you will get a good cash commission. W. C. B.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

Missionary.

Rev. T. J. Scott, D. D., missionary to India, recently wrote as follows to the Gospel in All Lands:

"Why don ot missionary societies take up the 'Reading Circle' idea more fully? There is a grand thing in it. Look at Chautauqua. Tens of thousands of persons are getting real culture from an easy, systematic course of reading. The 'National Home Reading Circle,' recently organized in England, is based on the same fertile idea. This is an age of reading circles and clubs. Let the idea be applied more definitely to missions. Foreign missions are not supported simply because the church does not know about the work in order to feel about it. Set the church to reading on missions, history, biography, peoples, religions, state and need of the work, duty, etc. All this can be done best by method. Form circles in the churches, organize something, give certificates or seals. With the reading will come light and interest and giving. The thought is perfectly practicable, and should be taken up at once."

Upon this idea the Cross-Bearers' Missionary Reading Circle was based, and to secure the ends of greater intelligence, greater zeal and liberality, and greater consecration, is it to be operated.

WITHERING OF THE FIG TREE.

(Matt. xxi, 18; Mark xi, 21.)

1. Rightly the Savior expected fruit on the fig tree. Having leaves indicates that it was the season of fruit-bearing.

(1) The church of God is not a flower garden, but an orchard. Are not church members for ornament. We must work, bear fruit.

(2) Christ yearns, hungers for fruit. Gave his life for our salvation. What would he rather than that the light which he came to kindle burned already!

(3) Our season for fruit-bearing is brief. Then make haste and show fruits unto holiness. So much to do.

2. Christ curses the fig tree because of its barrenness. Not from motives of angry disappointment, but for the purpose of teaching an important lesson.

(1) Having been made alive in Christ Jesus, it is our sacred duty to employ the proper means for our sustenance. Spiritual suicide disastrous.

(2) The circumstances of this curse illustrate the "unpardonable sin." Denying the influence of the Holy Spirit, which we formerly had experienced, reprobation inevitable.

(3) There are men—we hope not many—who have the name to live, but who are dead all the same. Like girdled trees on a newly opened farm. Are tall, and have branches like other trees, but are dead. Devoid of sap. Collapse impending.

3. Christ encourages the astonished disciples to have faith in God. That would prove a life-buoy, a sure spiritual life-preserver.

(1) Faith in God as our Father in Christ, who has forgiven us our sins and adopted us as his sons.

(2) Faith in God, who is our protector and benefactor. Daily we are the recipients of his bounty.

(3) Faith in God as our judge, who ultimately will give to everyone according to his works.

The Malone College,

FOR GIRLS ONLY,

Is situated in the city of Holly Springs, which is the highest point in the State; hence is free from malarial influences. Accessible from all points, as it is at the junction of the Illinois Central and Kansas City railways.

The boarding department is under the special control of the president and his wife, who, with the teachers, eat at the same table with the pupils—all faring alike.

While the property of the college does not belong to the church, which is the case with many of our Conference schools, it is under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and every teacher is a member of the M. E. Church, South; three of them Methodist preachers' daughters, and one a Methodist preacher's widow. The preachers of the North Mississippi Conference are charged only half price, including board.

Prices have been put down to correspond with the low prices of everything.

The fifth annual session will begin Sept. 17, 1895, and run nine months. No money spent or time lost for elaborate commencements.

Our work free to the inspection of the public at all times.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the sweeping reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain this price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to Aug., '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate $1.65.

HOME CIRCLE.

WORDS.

One day a harsh word rashly said,
Upon an evil journey sped,
And, like a sharp and cruel dart,
It pierced a fond and loving heart;
It turned a friend into a foe,
And everywhere brought pain and woe.

A kind word followed it one day,
Flew swiftly on its blessed way;
It healed the wound, it soothed the pain,
And friends of old were friends again;
It made the hate and anger cease,
And everywhere brought joy and peace.

But yet the harsh word left a trace
The kind word could not quite efface;
And though the heart its love retained,
It bore a scar that long remained;
Friends could forgive, but not forget,
Or lose the sense of keen regret.

Oh, if we could but learn to know
How swift and sure one word can go,
How would we weigh, with utmost care,
Each thought before it sought the air,
And only speak the words that move
Like white-winged messengers of love!

—Sunday-School Times.

The Great Opportunity.

During a season of awakening in Yale College two young men were awakened at the same time. They both agreed, one evening, that they would go and call upon one of the professors and ask his counsel. When they reached the professor's gate, one of them, an animated young man, leaned over the fence and said, "I believe that I won't go in." His companion, who had been somewhat wild, replied, "You can do as you please; but as for myself, I feel that I need all the counsel that a man of experience can give me; I am resolved to go in." They parted at the gate; and they parted for eternity! The same chance came to both; the one flung it away and the other grasped it. The student who went in and opened his heart to his kind teacher, decided for Christ, and, from being a frolicsome youth, became a faithful Christian, and afterward a successful minister. The other young man quenched the Holy Spirit, became hardened, fell off into vicious ways, went off in after years to the West Indies, and died a miserable inebriate! Human life has its pivot-hours, when decisions reach into eternity. Those two young men made their decision that evening, and Jesus took them at their word. It was the young ruler and beggar Bartimens all over again. The judgment day will unfold millions of just such decisions as that youth made when he went back to his room and locked Christ out of his heart.—Dr. Cuyler.

A Lesson in Politeness.

A little girl who was playing with her dog unintentionally hit him with her foot. She immediately said, "Please excuse me, Duke," with as much defference as if she had been making an apology to a person. "That is a lesson in politeness for us all," said a guest who was within hearing. Then he told this incident in the life of a high railroad official:

Erastus Corning many years ago was president of the Central railroad. He was a lame man and not very prepossessing in looks. He stood one day on the platform and was about to step on to the cars. A conductor who did not know him, shouted: "Come, hurry up, old man; don't be all day about it; the train can't wait."

The conductor went round to take up the tickets. A passenger said to him, "Do you know the gentleman you ordered on board?"

"No, and I don't want to know him."

"It may be worth while to make his acqnaintance," said the passenger. "He is your boss, the president of the road, and he'll take your head off."

The conductor gave a low whistle and looked bold. However, he at once sought the president and offered an apology.

"Personally I care nothing about it," said Mr. Corning. "If you had been so rude to anyone else, I would have discharged you on the spot." He continued: "You saw I was lame and that I moved with great difficulty. The fact that you did not know who I was does not alter the complexion of your act. I'll keep no one in my employ who is not civil to everyone."

"She Was a Stranger."

The following story which comes from the West brings with it a lesson for all, old and young:

A Sunday school missionary, while addressing a Sunday-school, noticed a little girl shabbily dressed and barefooted, shrinking in a corner, her little sun-burned face buried in her hands, and sobbing as if her heart would break. Soon, however, another little girl about eleven years of age, got up and went to her. Taking her by the hand she led her out to a brook, where she seated the little one on a log. Then kneeling beside her this good Samaritan took off the ragged sun-bonnet and dipping her hand in the water bathed the other's hot eyes and tear-stained face, and smoothed the tangled hair, talking cheerily all the while.

The little one brightened up, the tears vanished, and smiles came creeping around the rosy mouth. The missionary who had followed the two, stepped forward and asked, "Is this your sister, my dear?"

"No, sir," answered the child, with tender, earnest eyes. "I have no sister."

"Oh, one of the neighbor's children," replied the missionary—"a little schoolmate perhaps?"

"No, sir, she is a stranger. I do not know where she came from. I never saw her before."

"Then how came you to take her out and have such a care for her if you do not know her?"

"Because she was a stranger, sir, and seemed all alone, and needed somebody to be kind to her."

Nervous Children.

Never scold, or make fun of them. They suffer enough without your threats or sarcasm. Don't let them know you see their awkwardness when in company, nor their grimaces when alone. A case was reported by the Boston Globe of a boy ten years old, who, on being vexed, and often without any apparent provocation, will clench his hands and make the most frightful contortions of the muscles of his face and head, till his poor mother fears he is idiotic. By no means. He is the brightest boy in his class at school; fond of reading, and of natural history; but he is of a highly nervous temperament, and has not been taught to control the little wires, so to speak, on which he is strung.

This is no single case. There are thousands of children who give way to their nerves in a similar fashion. Never whip them, but talk to them about these curious little strings that should be made their servants, not their masters. A prominent physician in this city says that the man or woman who whips a nervous child should, for every blow given, receive five, and is on a level with brutes that have no reason. It is our duty to encourage and help them. Be patient with them. They are the making of our future successful men and women, for they will work hard at whatever they undertake. Brace up your own nerves first, and then be indulgent to the capers of your over-nervous children.—Exchange.

Johnnie was a naturally generous, unselfish boy, but had also been taught to share every bit of candy and cake with his little sisters and brothers, so that he did not enjoy going off by himself and eating things. Now, I suppose you would rather live with a boy like that, and go to school with him, and have him for your friend, than with boys or girls who think only of themselves.

Some children make me think of a chicken, which will seize a choice bit and run off to some safe place and gobble it up. You never saw a chicken or a pig share anything peaceably, did you? But, if you notice, it is the little boys and girls who love to share everything, who divide their apples and nuts and candy, who are the favorites, and whom everybody like, and not a few love dearly, and we all like to be loved.

A very old book says: "He that would have friends must show himself friendly."

Try it and see.—Selected.

A Sweet-Minded Woman.

So great is the influence of a sweet-minded woman on those around her that it is almost boundless. It is to her that friends come in seasons of sorrow and sickness for help and comfort; one soothing touch of her kindly hands works wonders in the feverish child; a few words let fall from her lips in the ear of a sorrow-stricken sister do much to raise the load of grief that is bowing its victim down to dust in anguish. The husband comes home worn out with the pressure of business and feeling irritable with the world in general, but when he enters the cozy sitting-room and sees the blaze of fire and meets his wife's smiling face, he succumbs in a moment to the soothing influences which act as the balm of Gilead to his wounded spirits that are wearied with the stern realities of life. The rough school boy flies into a rage from the taunts of his companions to find solace in his mother's smile; the little one, full of grief with her large trouble, finds a haven of rest on its mother's breast; and one might go on with instance after instance of the influence that a sweet-minded woman has in the social life with which she is connected. Beauty is an insignificant power when compared with hers.—Churchman.

Nothing should interfere with home duties. Even great service for humanity can not compensate for their neglect. Works of charity and business for the church are of great price, and should be attended to in their place and measure, but never at the sacrifice of loved ones entrusted to one's care and training. Home has the first and pre-eminent claim. Children are a God-given heritage. They must be rightly cultured and disciplined, as well as properly provided for. Father and mother must be able to say at the Great Day: "Here are we, and those whom thou hast given us." Platform oratory serves an excellent purpose, but it is a poor substitute for a home neglected in its gratification. Committee meetings and temperance and missionary work are valuable, but not at the sacrifice of family interests. Give your home the first attention; then devote what time, talent and effort you can to outside agencies.—Presbyterian.

This we find in the London Baptist: "A little girl had been rummaging in her mother's trunk. There she found a 'church letter' which her mother had neglected to present to the church into whose neighborhood she had moved. The little explorer rushed into her mother's presence, shouting: 'Oh, mama, I have found your religion in your trunk!' There is a needle-like point in that story for a great many people. With far too many the neglected church letter comes to be about the only part of the old church life remaining. But surely a trunk is a poor, dark, mothy place for one's religion."

One of the surest ways of getting a person to show out his best side, either in spirit or in work, is to expect it. The employee who has an impression that his employer thinks him good for nothing, the child who feels himself treated as though he had no right motives except those that are pounded into him, is not likely to show himself at his best in aspiration or energy. Many an unruly scholar can be easily tamed by showing faith in him, and everyone can be made better by drawing more surely than by driving.—H. Clay Trumbull.

It is a solemn thought that our children get their first ideas of God not from the catechism, but from our daily lives.

Drinking at Meals.

The reason why drinking should not accompany eating, but be indulged in before or afterward, is, in the first place, because liquids are foods as well as solids, and repasts must be kept as light as possible at all costs. But there is another reason. Dry repasts, if light, lead to a loss of flesh, whereas the same quantity of food, if it include liquids, is devoid of this effect. It is not easy to say why this should be so; but the most probable explanation is that when only solids are eaten the juices of the body are called into action to a larger extent than otherwise, in order to further the process of digestion, whence a sensation of thirst is usually experienced. The body has thus lost more than the ordinary quantity of water, and if this loss be not compensated by drinking, it will be replaced by the body itself, which will draw upon its superfluous fat for the purpose. The fat is decomposed into its elements, and combustion takes place. This process commences about an hour after eating, and if drinking be deferred until then, it may be indulged in afterward with profit, inasmuch as it promotes the very process which, half an hour earlier, it would have prevented. But in any case, and at all times, liquids should be taken with as much moderation as solids.—Exchange.

Don't Check Perspiration.

It is singular that although the fact that perspiring is the only safeguard provided by nature against sunstroke has appeared in print hundreds and thousands of times, people are still on the lookout for something to check perspiration, instead of increasing it, during intense heat. Not a day passes but we have calls for something to check perspiration, and the explanation that nothing can be safely used for this purpose is accepted with very poor grace by those to whom it is given. It is dangerous to even check perspiration of the feet unless it is very excessive, and even then the remedy is apt to be worse than the disease. Of course, this only refers to perspiring during hot weather; cold sweats are a never-failing indication of intense weakness, and ought to receive prompt medical attention.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Fat for the Nervous.

Nervous people should eat fat food. Every irritable and exhausted nerve should, if possible, be coated with fat. Fat is to a tender nerve what an air-cushion is to a tired invalid—it eases jolts wonderfully. With the fat should be combined grain-foods and vegetables for strength, and fruits to keep up a healthful consistency of the blood.—Christian World.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

PINEAPPLE SHERBET.—Put two cups of water and three cups of sugar on to boil. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then boil five minutes. Take one pint can of pineapple and press as much as possible, juice and all, through a colander. Add this to the sugar and water, with the juice of one lemon. Stand away to cool. When cool, strain into the freezer and freeze steadily until quite stiff. Remove the dasher, and add the white of one egg, whipped to a stiff froth, with one tablespoonful of powdered sugar. Beat well with a spoon, pack, and stand aside to ripen.—Table Talk.

ANGEL'S FOOD.—Sift one cup of flour five times with one teaspoonful of cream of tartar; sift one and a half cups of sugar twice; beat the whites of eleven eggs to a stiff, dry froth. Turn the sugar into a bowl and add the whites of the eggs. Sift in the flour, stirring gently from the bottom toward the top until it is well mixed; add one teaspoonful of vanilla. Turn into an angel-food tin and bake in a moderate oven for forty-five minutes.—Table Talk.

A GOOD SAUCE.—One cupful of sifted sugar, half a cupful of butter, stirred to a cream; then add one large cupful of boiling milk, and a dessert spoonful of ground cinnamon; stir briskly until smooth; pour into sauce-boat. May be eaten hot or cold.—Selected.

ARBUTHNOT—MARY ANN HUDGINS was born in South Carolina, on Pedee river, Sept. 4, 1808; emigrated with her father to Louisiana in 1820, and settled on Redwood Creek, in West Feliciana parish, where they remained until 1828. They then moved to St. Helena parish, where she resided until her death. She was married to the Rev. John S. Arbuthnot May 16, 1838. She joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1832, under the ministry of Rev. William Winans, at what was then known as Josie Branch Camp Ground, near Greensburg. She remained a faithful member until her death, which occurred Jan. 18, 1895 At the time of her death she was eighty-six years four months and ten days old.

It had never been our good privilege to become acquainted with Sister Arbuthnot, having become her pastor only a short while before her death; was sick and not able to attend her funeral, which was conducted by Rev. N. J. Roberts. But all that speak of her only speak to praise her excellent Christian character and many virtues, having been the wife of a local preacher—one of those sainted men of God that made his living by the sweat of his brow, yet found time to go from place to place pointing sinners to the Lamb of God that taketh away the sins of the world. This caused theirs to be rather a hard life, in several respects; but this has all ended. The husband preceded her to the grave several years. He has met his reward, received his crown, which was, doubtless, decked with many a star; and on the morning of the third month of January, while the silent watchers stood around her bedside, a convoy of holy angels came down, and, taking the sainted spirit of the wife on their golden pinions, as they did Lazarus of old, bore it away to Abraham's bosom, where they clasped hands to part no more forever. J. P. H.

DAY—HARRACE GORDON DAY, son of T. G. and ——— Day, was born Sept. 24, 1878, and died Jan. 3, 1895. Harrace was a promising boy of seventeen years, and the only son.

He was noted for honesty and industry, and possessed an extraordinary bright mind, but was not religious until a few hours before his death.

He was conscious from the first day of his sickness to the end. A few hours before the end came he was told that death was near. He confessed that he had neglected to make peace with God and prayed for forgiveness, asking all about him to pray. In a short time the Blood of heavenly light seemed to break on his soul, after which, until he closed his eyes in death, he rejoiced in Christ as his Savior, exhorting all to ask God in the forgiveness of sin. A little while before the end came, while he was yet able to speak, he said to his devoted parents and sisters, "Good-by," asking each to promise to meet him in heaven, where will be no more "good-by." We laid him to rest in the silent little city of the dead, at Day's Church, in St. Helena parish, La., in a few hundred yards of where he first saw the light.

The heart-broken parents and sisters have the sympathy of the entire community in this dark hour. Would that it were in our power to say something to alleviate their sorrow, to comfort their desolate hearts! But we know that nothing but time and the loving hand of our heavenly Father can heal such wounds as this. He who wept at the grave of Lazarus knoweth how dark is the hour. Trust him. May his grace comfort. Harrace is not dead, but sleepeth. N. J. R.

TABOR—Mr. JOHN TABOR, son of James and Myrina Tabor, was born in St. Helena parish, Feb. 5, 1810. His father and mother were both life-long and consistent members of our church. He was married to Miss Sallie Allen, 1870; died Jan. 21, 1895. He had three children. Two preceded him to the better land. He leaves one and his wife to mourn his loss.

He joined the church in his youth, but said he never enjoyed religion as he ought until he lost his children about twenty years ago. Since that time he has been a true, consecrated and faithful Christian.

It was the privilege of this writer to be his pastor the last year of his life. We had several religious talks, and as we stood over his open grave we were not troubled as to how to preach his funeral; but as we stood there, and looked upon the sad, broken-hearted widow and lonely daughter, and then at the two little graves of his other children, we thought it right for mother and daughter to stay here and let father go stay with those that had crossed the river.

While on his last bed of affliction he never murmured nor complained. When he saw the hand of death approaching he was perfectly resigned, and met it with that fortitude that none but they who have been with Jesus can have.

May he who has promised to be a father to the fatherless and a husband to the widow verify that promise, and may they be united again on the morning of the resurrection, where sickness, sorrow, pain and death are felt and feared no more! J. P. H.

SINGLETARY—Mrs. SUSIE E BARNES SINGLETARY was born in Sunflower county, Miss., Jan. 10, 1865 and died on July 3, 1895, at the residence of her brother-in-law, W. C. Pegram, Esq., Vicksburg, Miss. She was married to the Rev. Hwell L. Singletary, of the Louisiana Conference, on March 28, 1891. Her husband died just thirteen days before she did. He was a man of singular purity of character, and of great consecration to the ministry. They were well suited to each other, and were doing good in the Master's vineyard. "They were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in death they were not divided."

Mrs. Singletary removed with her parents to Delhi, La., when nine years of age. She joined the Methodist Church in her twelfth year. Ever since she has been a devoted friend of the church, rendering efficient service for the Master as organist, as a Sunday-school worker, and as a faithful upholder of the pastor's hands.

Her death, like her life, was peaceful and quiet. It was a benediction to see the sweet smile of submission even while disease was doing its deadly work and the precious life was slowly ebbing away. Her babe of a few days old was baptized while her sweet spirit was about taking its flight. The ministrations of her mother and only sister were very tender and unremitting. They are comforted in their deep bereavement by the assurance that their loved one is now among the blood washed. C. G. ANDREWS.

REAMES—Mrs. FANNIE REAMES, widow of J. M. Reames, departed this life on June 22, 1895, aged fifty-six years. Sister Reames joined the church in 1868 under the ministry of Dr. C. W. Carter, in Baton Rouge, and ever since she has been a faithful member of the church. For two years, or more, she nursed her husband in his long illness, and last Fall ministered to her adopted daughter during her last illness, taking charge of her children after her death. She had passed through these ordeals of sorrow, and thereby was being prepared for her own transition. She was a strong friend, a devoted wife, an earnest, loving mother to her adopted daughter. Candid, open, sincere in all her character, she ever declared where she stood without fear of consequences. There was no shadow of duplicity in her nature. She was transparent in character, always courageously advocating what she believed to be right. She was not quite fifty-six years old, living in Baton Rouge ever since her youth, walking before the church as an earnest follower of her Lord. Among her last requests was for her pastor to pray without her. In all her affliction and sorrow there was no murmur against Providence, but the true submission of a child of God. She has gone on before, meeting her devoted husband and daughter, who were waiting to welcome her into that blessed state of joy, happiness and rest. May the Lord be guardian of the grandchildren she has left! We shall always remember her sincere candor, her courageous espousal of the side of right, her true friendship, her faithfulness as a member of the church, and devotion as wife and mother.

HER PASTOR.

CHAPMAN—Mrs. ANNIE CHAPMAN, an excellent Christian woman, beloved by all who knew her, passed away from earth, after a brief illness, at Sardis, Miss., June 29, 1895. She had lived for several years at Clarksdale, Miss.; reared and married at Sardis.

Her life was not a failure. Thoughtful, considerate daughter; true, devoted wife; attentive, watchful mother; kind, warm-hearted friend—we all miss her and feel in her departure a personal affliction.

When she was called "to go hence" she testified to a peaceful readiness. While we show in our church register the date of her death, and sorrow in the loss of a "lively member," we are satisfied that she is answering "to the roll-call up yonder." God bless her truly bereaved husband, three children and parents! J. M. WYATT.

Clarksdale, Miss.

BRIGHT—DEMARIA ALBERTUS, infant son of J. W. and Sarah Bright, died July 5, aged sixteen months. He was a well-developed and promising child. He leaves a sad home behind him to find a happy home in heaven. God bless the bereaved parents! May they find infinite comfort in the precious words of our Lord, "Suffer little children to come unto me!" May their Christian walk be constantly cheered by the thought that there is an angel on the other shore awaiting them!

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., July, '96. A little later it will be August, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1 35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

DOMESTIC.

The Mount Vernon, Ill., schools are having trouble on the color line.

Rev. Dr. Hawthorne, of Atlanta, has started a crusade against the use of the bicycle by ladies.

The Alabama Supreme Court does not profess infallibility. Last Friday it rendered a decision and on Saturday reversed it.

The City Hall in San Francisco is to have the third largest dome in the world. It will rise 300 feet above the sidewalk.

Two gold camps will soon be in full swing in Northern Georgia and Alabama. Companies have just been organized to open valuable leads discovered in Cenloo, Ga., and Heflin, Ala.

A resolution introduced into the Illinois Legislature to investigate charges of bribery and corruption made against members was voted down. That Legislature considers itself superior to suspicion.

A sensation was enacted in the council chamber of Toledo, on July 29, by the arrest of six Democratic members, who refused to obey the mayor's call for a joint session of the council and aldermen.

It is announced from Washington that all the arrangements have now been virtually completed for the inauguration of the improvements in the postal service in this city, and beginning with Oct. 1 five new stations will be established in New Orleans, in addition to several sub-stations.

It is said New Jersey is going to move on Congress this Winter. The Direct Legislation League of that State will petition the Washington body to so amend the United States Constitution that State and National laws shall be submitted to a vote of the people before taking final effect.

The Chickamauga Park Commission has received notice of the contemplated attendance of twenty governors of States, with their staffs, at the dedication, Sept. 18, 19 and 20. Most of these will be accompanied besides by leading elective officers of the State government and representatives of the Legislatures. The State Commissions of twenty-six States are also expected.

It is reported that the Western Union Telegraph Company is making arrangements to take possession of the old, abandoned telegraph line extending through British Columbia, started thirty years ago to run to Europe via Behring Straits and Siberia. It is proposed to rebuild the old line and extend it north to Forty-mile Creek, on the Yukon, and run branch lines to Sitka and Juneau.

Elder Hiram Munger, one of the leading Second Adventists, in a sermon at a camp meeting in Massachusetts, prophesied the end of the world will come in 1897, according to the Scripture.

FOREIGN.

Russia is anxiously guarding its frontier against cholera.

Prince Bismarck, being advised to go to Egypt for his health, said that he had rather die at his own home than live in Egypt.

German veterans are going to celebrate the great victories of the Franco-Prussian War. The most memorable celebration will take place on Temple-hof field, on Aug. 19, when the battle of Gravelotte will be commemorated. Forty thousand veterans are expected to be present on that day.

A train bearing 400 Japanese soldiers, who landed at Hiroshima on their return from the war, while en route to Kobe, ran off the rails where the line is constructed along the sea wall. Plunging over the wall, the first section of the train was thrown into the sea. Many lives were lost.

A train crowded with pilgrims returning from the shrine of St. Dauray, France, was wrecked July 26 Twenty-four cars were thrown on top of each other, and six of them were completely wrecked. There was a terrible scene after the disaster. Twelve mutilated corpses have been extricated from the ruins and fifty persons were injured.

The grand canal drainage system in the valley of Mexico is nearly completed. This work, including the tunnel through the mountains, is an achievement in which Diaz will go down to fame as a practical administrator. The next thing on the programme is the reconstruction of the entire sewerage system of the City of Mexico.

During the past two weeks there have been serious disturbances on the Isthmus of Panama, along the line of the Panama railroad, growing out of strikes and labor troubles affecting the employees of the company. The authorities of the Republic of Columbia have endeavored to maintain order, but it appears that they have not been very successful in their efforts.

The parliamentary elections in Great Britain are now practically completed, only a few more divisions remaining to hear from. The actual returns show that of those elected, 340 are Conservatives, 70 Unionists, 173 Liberals, 68 McCarthyites, 12 Parnellites and 2 labor representatives. These figures give the government 410 votes and the combined opposition 255, a majority for the government of 155 votes.

Millsaps College,

Jackson, Miss.

For the Higher Education of Boys and Young Men

BEAUTIFUL LOCATION. Jackson, the capital of the State, is easily accessible by four lines of railway. The College occupies a commanding elevation, with perfect drainage and admirable health conditions.

The very finest educational advantages are offered. The members of the faculty are thoroughly competent and progressive in their several departments.

The students are constantly under superior moral and religious influences.

Expenses very moderate. Many of the students, by boarding themselves, reduce the cost of living below $6 per month.

Next Session Begins September 25, 1895.

A SONG FOR TO-DAY.

BY LOUISE MANNING HODGKINS.

Groweth the morning from gray to gold;
Up, my heart, and greet the sun!
Yesterday's cares are a tale that is told,
Yesterday's tasks are a work that is done;
Yesterday's failures are all forgot,
Buried beneath the billows of sleep;
Yesterday's burdens are as they were not—
Lay them low in the soundless deep.

Share thy crust and ask no dole,
Offer the cup thou wouldst never drain;
Only he who saveth his soul
Loseth all that he lain would gain.
Smile with him who has gained his day;
Smile the gladder, if at thy cost
It was his to win and thine to aspire,
It is his to-day who loved the most.

Pluck the flower that blooms at thy door;
Cherish the love that the day may send;
Cometh an hour when all thy store
Vainly were offered for flower or friend.
Gratefully take what life offereth,
Looking to heaven, nor seeking reward.
So shalt thou find, come life, come death,
Earth and the sky are in sweet accord.

"Church Finances."

BY O. N. HART, PINE BLUFF, ARK.

(Extracts from an address delivered at the International League Conference.)

I am a plain business man, and stand for business principles in church affairs.

The question of "finance" is before us, and it is one of the very greatest importance. To-day it is disturbing the political world, dividing the ranks of the old parties, arraigning neighbor against neighbor. In many ways money has its faults, but when properly used it is one of our greatest blessings, and an absolute necessity.

The financial policy and plans of our church may be entirely up to date, and sufficient to meet the necessities of the case, were they carried out to the letter, but what we need is an awakening to the importance of carrying these things into effect. Members of the church violate their obligations to support her, and are passed over without any notice whatever.

I do not advocate a money standard for church membership, because that would contradict the Savior's teaching, and oppose the consoling passage in Revelations, where it says, "Whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

We must be charitable and help the needy, but we must not encourage hypocrisy. The widow's mite can be given by almost every church member.

Ten cents a week amounts to $5.20 a year. Then take the average church of, say, 300 members. There are about 100 that pay and two-thirds that virtually do nothing; whereas, if they would pay ten cents a week, it would amount to $1,020 in the year. Apply this to the thousands of Methodist Churches, and you see what a power it could wield towards evangelizing the world. The church does wrong in submitting to indifference. Indolence must be discountenanced, and the church must be brave enough to point kindly, but positively, to members who are neglecting a solemn duty, with no reasonable excuse.

It is almost as bad to encourage negligence as it is to be negligent. It is one of the faults of humanity not to point out the shortcomings of fellowmen in the proper Christian spirit.

The man of wealth who raises a family without impressing self-reliance and personal responsibility graduates from his home boys who are drunkards, gamblers, and debauchers, and girls who are unfit to be the mothers of the coming nation.

Money to the church is a necessity, and the individual who has energy and brains to make it deserves the praise. We can't afford to encourage drones. Work, receive, and give, is a part of the divine plan.

When Martin Luther realized man's justification by faith he said, "It is as natural for good works to follow regeneration as fruit to grow on the living tree." Then let us strive for a regeneration, and we will meet the obligations for necessary money cheerfully and religiously, and not do as the rich young ruler did: turn our back on Christ for money, after complying with all other requirements. Let us be willing to make a complete surrender of all, and heaven is ours.

Sweet charity is a sublime thing, but it does not consist in doing for others what they can do for themselves.

The church is the only organization that allows the violation of money obligation to such an extent. A member in good standing in fraternal secret orders is reckoned by his payment of dues, and if that is neglected, his privilege to fraternize is cut off.

How many people would pay their taxes if Uncle Sam did not force them? We need more pressure in church affairs.

The delinquency of so many church members, who could do better if they would, keeps out many true and loyal men who would join the church and do more for Christianity. A deep-thinking and far-seeing friend of our church, who is not a member, but who contributes to my stewards' list $6 a month, said to me the other day: "I have recently withdrawn my subscription to one religious body because it harbors a lot of drones, who depend on other people to do for them what they can do for themselves, and I think it a sin to encourage indolence, but one of the grandest blessings to be able to help the needy." I took his hint as well said, and every man on my collecting list has received the results of the warning.

Mind, soul and body constitute an all-round man. Intelligence, spirituality and generosity make a good Christian. Reading and praying alone will not save us, if we have no conception of duty.

If the young get the correct money ides, they will grow up to be cheerful givers, and these are the ones the Lord loves. Some of our people have not been educated on these lines in youth, and conditions of after years force them to give; but it is not freely and cheerfully done. I know an old churchman who loves money for itself alone, so well that he instructs his bookkeeper to pay his assessments in his absence, and never speak to him about it. He wants to help, but he can't stand to see it go out.

Another, not so old, but naturally affected with a disease they call stingy. He is well fixed in this world's goods, and a single man. When approached on the money question he says, "No, not this time; I gave once before, and I don't want the church to think me not liberal, for I am." I know you would demand more proof than this to convince you that he is all right.

"If happiness on wealth were built,
Hypocrites might comfort find in guilt;
As grows the miser's hoarded store,
His fears, his wants increase the more."

One of our noble ministers began life on the plan of giving one-tenth to the Lord. He was poor, but so prospered that he increased to two-tenths, and then to three-tenths, and to-day he is prosperous as never before. He has raised a family of eight children, and all girls; some of them are beginning to blossom into useful womanhood, while he is financial agent for a splendid male college, the property of our church, that is turning out useful men. On his soliciting a subscription from a brother, this brother said, "No, mine are all girls, and I must help the female colleges." He replied, "Mine are all girls, too, and I have eight; but I am interested in turning out good sons-in-law from our male colleges." That settled it, and $2,500 changed hands. (I am in a position to verify this fact.)

An Arkansas widow has supported and brought up a large family, giving a tenth of her earnings to the great cause, and to-day her grown girls give dollars to where many rich men give dimes. They are educating the youth of our land in patriotism, virtue, honesty and religion. The Lord is prospering them financially. He is with them, and the earthquakes of sin can not disturb them.

Man brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that he can carry nothing out. Then why not use the blessings God gives us, for his name's honor and glory?

As surely as we have life we will meet these issues at the judgment. A just God knows whether or not we have done our duty.

It is mandatory that we work and receive, and use our opportunities. This order reaches everyone. The Savior did not raise Lazarus from the dead until after he commanded the stone to be rolled away. He did not feed the hungry and weary fishermen until demanding an effort on their part to catch the fish; and so it is all along; and this teaches us that each and every one must work.

It is absolutely necessary to receive, and equally necessary to give.

The plant receives from the husbandman and from mother earth, but returns it with usury.

All nature points to these facts. Common sense, reasoning and justice substantiate them. Then let us use all diligence, and acquire a station where we can be of the best service.

Money is both a curse and a blessing. The poet expresses it by saying:

Thus when the villain crams his chest,
Gold is the canker of his breast,
'Tis avarice, insolence and pride,
And every shocking vice beside.
But when to virtuous hands 'tis given,
It blesses like the dews of heaven;
Like heaven it hears the orphan's cry,
And wipes the tears from the widow's eye.

Important about Our Missionary Work in China.

BY BISHOP E. R. HENDRIX.

With the revival of business the Board of Missions feels the great necessity of making at an early date an important advance movement in China. More new missionaries are under appointment, and will report for duty at the China Mission Conference at Shanghai on October 10, than our church had in all the heathen world twenty years ago. Of the three who sail in a few weeks for China, one is supported by one church in Shreveport, La., in addition to its regular contribution to foreign missions, and one is supported by the Epworth Leagues of Texas. By the aid of these extraordinary contributions we are able to re-enforce the China Mission Conference at a most important period in its history when the new demands upon our force in the field can not be responded to without such help.

To save the lives of some of our missionaries whose health has become enfeebled from climatic causes the Board of Missions (who alone have authority to open new missions) have authorized me to open a mission in Northern China, if, after a personal inspection of the field, I deem it best, and to transfer some of our force to that healthier part of the empire. The frequent requests from Corea, and of our missionaries in Japan and China, to establish work in Corea have led to the conclusion to look into the situation and needs there before taking final action in the matter of opening work in Northern China. Should the requisite sanitary conditions be found in Corea, together with such openings as to justify enterprising our new work there rather than in Northern China, the matter will be referred to the Board of Missions for final action in authorizing the new mission. In the meantime it is very important that contributions for the new work and for our missionary work in Japan and China be made without any restrictions. The greatest care will be taken to reach wise conclusions; and should it become necessary to act promptly in transferring some of our missionaries to Northern China, it is very important that the special funds for our new work be available without any limitation as to the field to be occupied, on any conditions whatever.

The strong re-enforcement which brings hope to our missionaries both in Japan and China will require vigorous effort on the part of our pastors to secure the most liberal missionary collections that our work be both advanced and sustained. I revisit the field after an absence of nearly twenty years, and will seek to give the church the benefit of my observations as to the progress of the work. I leave home on July 29, and sail from Vancouver on the "Empress of India" on August 5. It is my expectation to return by way of San Francisco, touching at Honolulu, and reach home in time to hold the Mississippi and Louisiana Conferences in December.—Nashville Advocate.

Bishop Haygood, in the Christian Advocate, Nashville, reads our Northern brethren a lecture on the color line thus:

"When Northern Methodists scourge with bitter tongues the South for its notions and practices in social relations with the colored people, they are absolutely blind to the fact that they have set their negro members off into separate Conferences. They did it; the negroes did not. This matter we understand.

"They are, in their brazen and monstrous inconsistency, like poor Adam and Eve when sin had blinded them 'naked and not ashamed.'"

Meeting of the Board of Education.

The Board of Education met at Monteagle, Tenn., July 25-27. Present Bishop C. B. Galloway, Drs. J. H. McClean, R. J. Bigham, A. C. Smith, J. S. Kennedy, J. D. Hammond, Chancellor J. H. Kirkland, President W. W. Smith, Prof. R. E. Crockett, and Maj. R. W. Millsaps. Two sessions were held on each day, and the interests committed to the Board received a very thorough discussion. The vacancy in the secretaryship created by the resignation of Dr. W. W. Smith was filled by the election of Dr. R. J. Bigham. Dr. J. D. Hammond delivered before the Monteagle Assembly, on the evening of the twenty-sixth ultimo, an able address on State and Church Colleges. On the twenty-seventh Bishop Galloway lectured on the Orient. He also preached on Sunday morning to a great audience. On Sunday evening that charmer, Dr. Coke Smith, occupied the pulpit.—Nashville Advocate.

Sowing the Seed.

In a recent letter Rev. C. F. Reid makes mention of the important work in which Dr. Y. J. Allen is employed:

"He is now engaged in what I regard as the best work of his life. He is translating a series of biographies of men who have had bright religious experiences. He calls it his 'Witness Series.' It is a line of thought that has never before been attempted for the Chinese, and I am sure it will be of peculiar value. They give the Chinese a concrete expression of Christianity—a form of presentation specially fitted to the intense practical mind of this people. Dr. Allen is certainly to be congratulated on the selection of work he has made, and the clear, simple style of his translations."—Review of Missions.

Alexandria District Conference.

This body of ministers and laymen met in the Methodist Church in the town of Melville, La., on Wednesday, July 24, at 2:30 P. M. Our beloved presiding elder, Rev. S. J. Davies, graced the chair of the Conference from the beginning, and presided with becoming dignity and satisfaction to the brethren. Owing to the financial stringency of the times, quite a number of the delegates and preachers were absent. The reports, however, sent in by letter, and those made on the Conference floor, showed that there can be found nowhere in the bounds of Southern Methodism a more loyal, self-denying, consecrated and heroic company of itinerants than the men occupying the field in the Alexandria district. This district, as is well known by the Louisiana Conference, is largely missionary, and one feature was developed from the various reports which deserves special mention. While there are only sixteen preachers occupying the vast territory of this district, there are now eighty appointments, or five to each preacher. I make this note that our Mission Board may more fully appreciate the needs of this district when making their appropriations.

While, financially, the brethren, in most instances, have been undergoing many hardships and privations, we were glad to note a considerable increase in membership, though but few revival services have been held. It is encouraging to know that the seed sown in tears are already ripening into a glorious harvest. The brethren, generally, were hopeful, and though the collections ordered by the Conference are in arrears, they compare favorably with previous years. The prospects are that they will come up in full by Conference.

The various Committees on Sunday-schools, Missions, Education and Literature, after careful investigation, made their respective reports, and, after adoption, the Conference ordered them published in the NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE.

On Friday evening Rev. A. D. McVoy, president of Mansfield Female College, was present, and in his usual energetic style pressed the claims of this worthy institution upon the hearts and consciences of both Conference and people.

Rev. C. C. Weir, formerly agent for Centenary College, at Jackson, La., spoke encouragingly upon the future of that college, recommending it to those who have sons to educate as the best school in the South to give a boy a thorough Christian and business education.

On Friday night a missionary mass meeting was held, and Rev. Jas. A. Parker, D. D., secretary Louisiana Conference Board of Missions, gave a stirring address on the subject of missions, foreign and domestic. The Doctor's address was both instructive and entertaining, and was listened to with appreciation and delight by his large audience. He is, undoubtedly, the right man in the right place. At the conclusion of the address a collection was taken, which amounted to $73.90 in cash and subscription.

C. C. Weir and James Andrew Callihram were granted license to preach, and we gladly welcomed them among us. The first mentioned was also recommended to the Louisiana Conference for admission into the traveling connection. We bespeak a bright future for Bro. Weir, and feel assured that few men who have come among us will be more useful in the itinerancy.

On Saturday evening quite an interesting discussion arose when some resolutions were offered touching the evangelist question.

The following-named brethren were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: P. Payton, S. P. Ward, M. D.; J. B. Pickles, Noel Norwood.

The following resolution was adopted by a rising vote:

Resolved, That we, the members and visitors of the Alexandria District Conference, do hereby tender our heartfelt thanks to the people of Melville for the kind welcome extended us, and for the unselfish entertainment at their respective homes; and we pray God's richest blessings upon them.

W. T. WOODWARD,
F. N. SWEENEY.

The next District Conference will be held at Alexandria.

J. ENGLÉ DENSON, Sec.

REPORT ON EDUCATION.

We, your committee, beg leave to report that we have, from our best means of information, found that Mansfield Female College, at Mansfield, La., has a very sincere and honest band of teachers that are doing all in their power to promote the interests of the young ladies placed under their care; that its alumnæ compose some of the brightest and most useful women in Louisiana; and that Centenary College, Jackson, La., has under its present administration done satisfactory work, and is considered in a better condition than it has been for years. In point of honest, sincere work and good attendance, it is considered not only by our own denomination, but to a great extent by the people at large, to be the safest and best place to give a boy a practical Christian education. It has students and graduates all over the South that are filling dignified and honorable positions with credit and distinction. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That we do all in our power as a church to advance the interests of our colleges in point of patronage and finances.

Resolved, That we urge the students and graduates of those institutions to uphold their respective alma mater.

C. C. WEIR,
(REV.) J. R. ROY,
J. A. HUMPHREYS.

REPORT ON MISSIONS.

From information gleaned from the reports of the preachers in charge of the various circuits of the Alexandria district, we are convinced that there is large territory in the bounds of said district which is purely, or in part, missionary ground. There is but one station in the bounds of the district. The other appointments, numbering fifteen, are circuits, with from two to twelve appointments. These circuits cover vast stretches of territory, which can be best inadequately worked. The times of preaching are so long between that the permanent good resulting is meager indeed. The policy of large circuits and monthly appointments has been tried in the territory now embraced in the Alexandria district for more than half a century, with this result: that in a great many places we are where we were fifty years ago. The only places where any marked permanent improvement has been made are those places where the circuits have been narrowed down and preaching has been more frequent. Your committee firmly believe that the only remedy, the only salvation, is in smaller circuits and more men to man them. On account of a sad lack of education and information on the subject, we find in the bounds of the Alexandria district a deplorable anti-missionary sentiment. This can only be remedied by a more faithful, persistent and frequent presentation of the claims of the gospel upon these people from the pulpit, and by the dissemination of missionary literature among them. In the lower part of the district, mainly in Avoyelles and part of St. Landry parish, there is some purely missionary ground, where Roman Catholicism is intrenched; where the people are priest-ridden and ignorant of the pure, sweet, saving gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. It is quite easy for us to portray our destitution; and measure, in part, the extent of our missionary territory; but how to suggest a practical way of entering this territory is a more difficult question. The blessed Master's missionary words, uttered in the long, long ago, are still true, 'The harvest truly is plentiful, but the laborers are few." And his subjoined command ought to ring in our ears: "Pray ye, therefore, the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest." Have we done this?

Resolved, That we redouble our efforts to raise money for our foreign and home fields.

Resolved, That our Annual Conference be respectfully memorialized to increase its appropriations for domestic missions.

In the Living Present.

The time for sending in manuscript for the New York Herald's prize novel has expired. The offer of $10,000 has brought out eleven hundred literary products. It will take two months to examine the manuscripts. One of our country's chief curses is novel reading and novel writing.

In an excellent paper presented to the Academie des Inscriptions, in Paris, by M. Dieniafoy, the erudite author expresses the opinion that David had been as good a strategist as Frederick the Great and Napoleon Bonaparte. In the rout of the Philistines in the Valley of Rephaim, the shepherd-king had observed the same tactics which the mentioned military chieftains usually employed. It was the flank movement which led to victory.

Caricaturists usually portray Prince Bismarck with three bristling hairs prominent on his bald cranium. An American admirer, ignorant of his baldness, wrote to the Iron Chancellor for a lock of his hair. He and his family would highly appreciate the favor. Recently the writer received the laconic reply, "Entirely impossible." Signed, "Otto von Bismarck."

In Frankfort-on-the-Main, where the printing press was invented by Faust and Gutenburg, superstition is rampant. In renumbering the residences, the number thirteen has been entirely omitted. The City Council ordered the omission because of numerous requests of landlords.

The valleys of the Tigris and the Euphrates are visited by a disastrous plague among the camels. Thousands of the useful "ships of the desert" have already fallen a victim to the disease. The malady seems to be a species of cholera. The camel ranches in Arizona (our country) are proving remunerative.

Platinum and papier mache will be the building material of the future. It is well, for our pine forests are rapidly disappearing. Of the latter material they manufacture horse shoes, sewer pipe, locomotive wheels, etc. In Japan entire residences are constructed of papier mache.

The Kansas Equal Suffrage Association resolved: "That it is the duty of every self-respecting woman in the State of Kansas to fold her hands and refuse to help any moral, religious, charitable or political association until the men of the State shall strike the adjective 'male' from the suffrage clause of the Constitution." A boycott indeed. That will close the churches which are dependent on the oyster suppers and ice cream parties of the ladies. Not sorry.

In Portugal, Roman Catholicism has undisputed sway. But of the five million inhabitants, there are four million analphabetes. Thus it appears that the Romish Church thrives best in the darkness of ignorance. ICH DIEN.

LITTLE GIFTS, BUT SWEET AND PRECIOUS.

Only a drop in the bucket,
But every drop will tell;
The bucket would soon be empty
Without the drops in the well.

Only a poor little penny—
It was all I had to give;
But, as pennies make the shillings,
It may help some cause to live.

A few little bits of ribbon,
And some toys, they were not new,
But they made the sick child happy,
Which has made me happy, too.

Only some outgrown garments—
They were all I had to spare;
But they'll help to clothe the needy,
And the poor are everywhere.

A word, now and then, of comfort,
That cost me nothing to say;
But the poor old man died happy,
And it helped him on the way.

God loveth the cheerful giver,
Though the gift be poor and small;
What doth he think of his children
When they never give at all?

A Chapter from Theology of Fatherhood (Revised).

BY REV. J. H. KENNEBREW, COLUMBUS, MISS.

CHRISTIAN BAPTISM.

(Concluded.)

The most remarkable type of Christian baptism is that of the ark, referred to in I. Peter iii, 19-21: "By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison, which sometime were disobedient; when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah; while the Ark was a preparing; wherein few, that is, eight souls, were saved by water. The like figure whereunto baptism doth also now save us (not the putting away of the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God) by the resurrection of Jesus Christ." The great facts here specially noted by Peter are typical of Christian baptism. The ark represents Christ, or the church, which is his body, in which are eight souls, all of one family, saved by the cleansing of water from the corruptions of the old world; and, being in the ark, are safely brought into the new world. Even so those who have been baptized into Christ are cleansed from the corruptions of the flesh by the baptism of the Spirit, and, being in Christ, are brought safely through into heaven. I do not refer to that outward ceremonial cleansing of water, but to that inward "washing of regeneration" —that baptism of the Spirit by which "our hearts are sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our "sins are washed away," which secures a good conscience, not a guilty, condemning one, but a conscience void of offense toward God and men—all of which comes by the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

That was a test question of Paul to the disciples at Ephesus, who had been baptized by Apollos, "knowing only the baptism of John," namely: "Into (eis) what then were ye baptized?' They answered, "Into John's baptism," which was doubtless a baptism into water, symbolizing death, burial, and resurrection, inasmuch as it was the baptism of repentance unto remission. John baptized into water for remission. Christian baptism is into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ for remission, while sprinkling with clean water is to symbolize the inward cleansing of the Spirit, for Christ has already died and risen. The blood for remission had already been shed, and he is ready to cleanse at once; hence Paul baptized them "into the name of the Lord Jesus." Luke does not say "rebaptize," but "baptize them," as if they had not been baptized at all. Yet, strange as it may seem, we doubt not that John's baptism soon supplanted Christian baptism in the post-apostolic church. There were, doubtless, many in the apostolic age who, after the death of Paul, contended that Rom. vi, 3-6, and Col. ii, 11-12, was apostolic recognition of John's baptism as Christian baptism, because it symbolized death to sin, and resurrection to newness of life, by baptism into water. John's baptism was very popular, and it was dangerous (because considered blasphemous) for one to say that his baptism was "of men"—that is, not from heaven; hence we can easily account for its overlapping Christian baptism in some sections for years after the beginning of the Christian dispensation, and with such seeming support in the epistles of the great apostle to the Gentiles, at a time when there were but few manuscripts, and communication difficult and slow. Under such circumstances we need not be surprised that this traditional ceremonial, so impressive in form, like much of the ritual of that dispensation, and instinct with the vitality of a seeming resurrection, should have spread so rapidly, and displaced a baptism which had less to attract the eye, even if it had more to subdue the heart and sanctify the life. Hence we should not be surprised if after 1800 years have elapsed there should be some to contend that baptism in water to the name of the Trinity is Christian baptism, and that nothing else is. Notwithstanding, we have not a single instance of baptism into water under the Christian dispensation, but it is always into the name of Jesus Christ; and the only instructions that we have as to how water is to be used, in connection with this baptism, is from the prophets of the Old Testament. If that is by immersion in water, then those prophecies which indicate that the water is to be sprinkled or poured have never been fulfilled.

This history of Christian baptism but furnishes another instance of our proneness to hold in perpetual remembrance the shadow ceremonials, to the neglect of the great substantial, spiritual verities which they represent. Had the apostolic church but held on to the great underlying truth that baptism unites with Christ, and that the water sprinkled is not baptism or any part of it, but an outward sign of that spiritual cleansing by which we are fitted to become a member in the Lord's body, it could not so soon have drifted away from its moorings; but, having done so, it was but natural to exalt baptism in water to unwarranted prominence and importance, and even to make it essential to salvation, as some extremists have done. We see this principle illustrated in the history of circumcision. It was a token of the covenant in the flesh, by which the bearer was constituted an heir to the earthly Canaan; but if he believed God, and followed in the steps of Abraham's faith, he received that "circumcision of the heart" which made him an heir to that inheritance of which Canaan was but the type, and of this circumcision, the circumcision in the flesh, was but the sign. It was the shadow, while the circumcision of the heart was the great substance, infinite verity; and yet they drifted so far away from the great spiritual truth underlying circumcision, seeking that which is tangible and visible, preferring to walk by sight instead of by faith, that they thought that circumcision in the flesh made them the children of Abraham and the heirs of the promises, thus losing sight of that circumcision of heart without which they had no part or lot in the inheritance for which Abraham lived and died. They had the shadow, but missed the substance. Such a practice, seemingly scriptural, introduced at this early period into the Christian Church, would soon become entrenched behind such an array of traditions as would make its position almost unassailable, especially while the church appealed to traditions for apostolic precedent, instead of the Word of God alone as the all-sufficient and only guide in matters of faith and practice.

John said to the thousands that waited upon his ministry and were baptized by him in the Jordan, "I baptize you with water, but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost." John's baptism was with water, Christ's with the Holy Ghost; John's was of the earth, Christ's from heaven. Christ's baptism is as far superior to John's as Christ is superior to John, as heaven is higher than earth. This reminds us again of those significant words of Paul, "That is not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual." Christian baptism is the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and came according to divine appointment after the baptism of John. It is not a compromise between John and Christ—that is, a baptism into water, or with water, for remission—but into the name of Jesus Christ for remission; and the clean water that is sprinkled is not the baptism, but the sign of that inward cleansing which results from the Spirit's baptism. In the Christian dispensation there is but "one baptism." When the believing penitent is baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus, he is baptized of the Spirit into Christ, and unified with him, and so is baptized with his baptism of death and suffering, which is the "one baptism." Concerning this, Christ said himself, "Ye shall, indeed, be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with;" and if we fail to have the cleansing of this baptism, it will be to no purpose that we have "washed away the filth of the flesh."

Correspondence.

The Winona District Conference.

[The following report was condensed from a clipping kindly sent us by Bro. Reed Bingham, of Carrollton, who failed, however, to mention the date at which the Conference was held.—EDITOR.]

All told, there were between fifty-five and sixty persons in attendance—about twenty less than homes had been provided for.

The Woman's Missionary Society, Wednesday morning, was presided over by Mrs. Ben. Jones, of Sunnyside; and the Parsonage and Home Mission Society, in the afternoon, by Mrs. Ellen Kittrell Shivers, of Black Hawk. These ladies presided with ease, grace, and dignity, and dispatched business rapidly. Several very excellent papers were read by the ladies. All agreed, without any disparagement to any of the papers, that the one by Mrs. Shivers was entitled to special mention as a model of elegance in diction, and beauty and strength of thought.

Several excellent recitations were given by the juvenile delegates. The reports from both the woman's and the juvenile societies show a high degree of prosperity, and the good being accomplished can not be computed. The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. J. F. Evans; the response by Mrs. J. [illegible] each of these addresses was made up of pure, high thoughts, clothed in choice words. After passing resolutions of thanks to the town for hospitality extended, the meeting adjourned.

On Thursday the Sunday-school Conference met, and was presided over by Rev. J. B. Stone, and later by Mr. J. B. Streater. Topics of interest to Sunday-school workers were treated in an able manner in papers prepared by preachers and laymen, and the different subjects were freely discussed by the members. All the papers were good, but we judge Mr. J. B. Streater, of Black Hawk, carried off the palm, as the Conference unanimously requested that he furnish his on "The Qualifications of a Sunday-school Worker and Teacher" for publication.

Friday morning Rev. J. B. Stone took the chair. The day was taken up with reports from pastoral charges and other routine business. These reports indicated a healthy, growing condition of the church.

Bishop Galloway arrived on Saturday morning, and presided during the day. The morning was taken up in considering the reports made by the different committees appointed on Friday. In the afternoon session, besides other business, Mr. W. F. Rozell was licensed to preach, and recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial into the traveling connection. Rev. R. E. Doke, who has been a local preacher, was also recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. Four laymen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference, viz.: J. B. Streater, J. R. Bingham, H. H. Estes, and O. J. Moore.

There was preaching each morning and evening of the Conference, and all of a high order. Revs. K. A. Jones, C. A. Spraggins, John Ritchey, R. I. Allen and J. W. Malone greatly delighted their congregations.

For days interest had been centering in Bishop Galloway's missionary address, to be delivered Saturday night. Rain had been falling all the afternoon, and continued to the hour of service. Notwithstanding this, a great congregation filled all the available space in the church and vestibule. Rev. R. A. Meek, in a most eloquent manner, presented the Bishop to the congregation, saying, "Bishop Galloway needs no introduction to a Southern audience." The Bishop began with a brief, though vivid, description of the leading facts of Japanese history, and giving personal incidents of his journey through Japan, China, Egypt, the Holy Land, Italy, Greece, and other countries. He then went at once to the heart of his subject, "Missions." For one hour and a half, in words of burning eloquence and thrilling interest, he held the almost breathless attention of the audience, notwithstanding the extreme heat of the weather and the crowded condition of the church. There were ripples of laughter as the Bishop humorously told of some laborious incident seen during his travels, and fervent amens in response to his powerful appeals. At the close of this splendid address Rev. Mr. Stone led in prayer, and the congregation stood and sang, "All hail the power of Jesus' name!"

Mr. Porter then arose and asked that the baskets be passed for a free-will offering for missions. Whereupon the Bishop said, "If a collection is to be taken, let's make it worthy of the occasion and this large audience." The collectors, after going through the congregation, reported in cash and subscriptions $448. The Bishop said, "Let's make it $500," which was done more quickly than we can write this sentence.

We pronounce it the finest address, the most successful meeting, the most spontaneous and liberal offering which ever came under our observation. All went home well pleased, many declaring they thought the address was not over thirty minutes long.

At 9:30, Sunday, a love-feast was held, at which many thrilling experiences were related, fervent prayers offered, and beautiful hymns sung. It was a most precious service. The Bishop preached a sermon of wonderful power and rare beauty to a larger congregation, if possible, than that of Saturday night. In the afternoon a mass meeting of Sunday-school children was addressed by Mr. L. P. Brown, of Meridian, and Rev. R. G. Porter ("Gilderoy"). The last service was Sunday night, at which Rev. R. A. Meek preached. Mr. Meek fully sustained the reputation that he made here during a pastorate of two years as a minister of strong mind and brilliant intellect. After the sermon Rev. Mr. Porter administered the sacrament of the Lord's Supper to a large number of communicants. Thus closed a most delightful meeting, and our people will all be glad when the Conference shall again come to Carrollton.—Carrollton (Miss.) Conservative.

From North Louisiana.

MR. EDITOR: I send you a few "pointers" as to what is going on in North Louisiana, hoping that they may be of interest to the ADVOCATE readers.

In the first place, Methodism in Monroe is coming to the front, and will soon have the handsomest parsonage in the State—thanks to the push of our pastor, Rev. E. N. Evans. The parsonage will be a two-story frame structure, sheeted on the outside, and furnished with a veneering of pressed brick. It will be thoroughly modern in its finish and equipment, being furnished with hot and cold water and electric lights. Work on the building is progressing finely. This parsonage and its early completion was made necessary by the sale of the old parsonage in the trade to get an eligible site on which to build the new church.

Our little preacher across the river, Bro. W. G. Evans, is fighting against heavy odds just now, as his wife has been down for the past two weeks with typhoid fever. The last report from her were very encouraging, and it is to be hoped she will soon be well again. Bro. Evans (W. G.) is counting on a rousing Fall campaign against sin and Satan, and seems confident of success. He will be assisted by Rev. R. A. Davis and Rev. Eli E Riggs.

Rev. Jas. A. Godfrey and wife, of Floyd, passed through Monroe a short time ago on their way to visit their children in Caldwell parish. They both looked quite well, notwithstanding the fact that they have had so much sickness this year. Bro. Godfrey begins a meeting at Floyd soon, in which he will be assisted by Rev. Jno. F. Foster.

Our presiding elder seems to have gotten back much of the vigor of his young manhood. He is constantly on the go, and often blesses us with his presence. He has not forgotten how to be a pastor; and if what we have heard is true, he is giving his young preachers some valuable lessons along this line. He seems to be in perfect health.

We had the pleasure the other day of shaking the hand of one of the most popular preachers in the Louisiana Conference, viz.: Rev. I. T. Reames, of Rayville. He has graced our city several times lately, coming here to buy material and furniture for the new church he has been building at Charleville, on Bœuff river. The church is said to be quite a handsome structure. Bro. Reames' last visit was for the purpose of selecting and carrying home a bicycle, a present from the congregation at Union Church, Charleville. He got a beauty, and seemed as proud of it as could be. We know he deserved it, as he is one of the most indefatigable workers we have ever seen. This is his last year where he is, and the people will regret very much to give him up.

Bro. R. A. Davis, at Oak Ridge, is in favor with his people, and is doing a good work. He has been handicapped considerably by sickness lately—nothing serious, however.

Rev. Jno. F. Foster has passed through here several times lately on his way to and from the Ruston Chautauqua, where he was booked for a lecture, a sermon, and several other things. On account of his popularity, the management has made frequent use of him. We heard his sermon before the Chautauqua very highly spoken of.

Bro. J. R. Roy, of Columbia, is doing a fine work. He has remodeled the parsonage, and will build two churches this Fall. He has held one meeting at Columbia, with good results, and he will soon begin a meeting at Masters' Chapel, in which he will be assisted by Bro. Reames.

I hear good reports from Bro. Barr's meeting at Downsville, in which he was assisted by a Cumberland Presbyterian, Bro. Morphis.

Yours, etc., W. M. OUACHITA.

Millsaps' Day.

I have just noticed a suggestion of Dr. Cooper's, which I write to second. The thing Millsaps College needs now is patronage. A cultured Christian young man is the best advertisement to be had. Turn out such all over the State, and the future of the college is fixed. I know of no better way of bringing the subject before the minds of the people than the plan of having a Millsaps' Day. Let a day be appointed, and then let all the pastors preach on Christian education, with a peroration on the fitness of our colleges, male and female, for giving the best advantages to be had anywhere. This will call the attention of parents throughout the State to our institution, and this ought to procure them all the patronage desirable.

Let all the preachers and laymen who favor this suggestion say, Aye.

True Repentance.

There was a young man in Ohio engaged by an express company. Twenty thousand dollars were missing. He was suspected, tried, but acquitted. Owing to suspicion, he left the place and moved West; but he found no rest. He came to Chicago; heard Mr. Moody. After two or three nights he remained to speak to Mr. Moody and several gentlemen who were with him. He told them that he must confess to them that he had committed the crime for which he had been tried, and then he asked them what he must do. "Restore the money," they replied at once. He told them that it was hidden under a plank in the office. Then he said, "What now shall I do?" They prayed about it. At last he rose and said: "Gentlemen, pray for me. I know what I shall do." He went back to the town where he had worked; came to the court. The judge who had tried him was on the bench. "Judge," he said, "you remember me?" "Yes." "I committed that crime." "Well, you ought to suffer for it." "I know I should," was the humble reply. "But I can't try you again," the judge argued. "Can't you try me for perjury?" "Yes, we might." He was tried and convicted, and sentenced to three years in the State prison. When he went behind the stone walls of the prison, for the first time in years he was a free man. Before his term expired he was pardoned. He went out in time to stand by the bedside of his dying father, and by his words his father was led to Christ, and died in triumph. He also led his brother to Christ.—Rev. B. Fay Mills.

Indifference.

If there is a disease in our modern theology and our modern philosophy more conspicuous than another, it is indifference. We call it anything but sin. We form our schemes of social improvement and material progress without any conviction of this deep plague spot of our nature. We hide it from ourselves until it breaks out in some scandalous form, and startles us with its intensity. We will drill men into morality; we will repress crime by education; we will empty our gaols by philanthropic legislation; but the sin dwelleth in us too strong for human remedies—too rampant for the social reformer's pruning-hook.—Dean of Peterborough.

[True as the gospel.—EDITOR.]

"There is a man," said his neighbor, speaking of a village carpenter, "who has done more good, I really believe, in this community, than any man who ever lived in it. He can not talk very well in prayer meeting, and he doesn't often try it. He isn't worth two thousand dollars, and it's very little he can put down on subscription papers for any other object. But a new family never comes into the village that he does not find them out to give them a neighborly welcome, and offer any little service he can render. He is usually on the lookout to give strangers a seat in his pew in church. He is always ready to watch with a sick neighbor, and look after his affairs for him; and I've sometimes thought he and his wife kept house-plants in Winter just for the sake of being able to send little bouquets to invalids. He finds time for a pleasant word for every child he meets, and you'll always see them climbing into his one-horse wagon when he has no other load. He really seems to have a genius for helping folks in all sorts of common ways, and it does me good every day just to meet him on the streets."—Christian Observer.

An unanchored ship may be lying on waters as smooth as glass, and yet, before the master is aware, his keel is on a rock. The invisible tide bore him away so softly and so silently that he did not observe the motion. So are thousands of people—yes, and some professed Christians, too—carried on the rocks every week, not by gales of adversity, but by under-currents of strong temptation. . . . Here is a church member who insensibly drifts into neglect of his Bible, neglect of prayer, and laxity of Sabbath observance. Another gets in an under-current of utter worldliness; it swings him along slowly and surely until he has lost sight of his lighthouse; he is aroused by no sudden shock, but when we look for him where he used to be, and where he ought to be, he is not there. The world got hold of him, and his anchor had no hold on Christ.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

The man who is inquisitive into the secrets of your affairs with which he has no concern should be an object of your caution. Men no more desire another's secrets to conceal them than they would another's purse, for the pleasure only of carrying it.—Fielding.

The reason some men of strength never accomplish anything in life is because they spread themselves over too large an area. Distribute a hundred pounds of steam over an acre, and it will not have force enough to stir a feather.—Exchange.

Mississippi Conference W. P. and H. M. Society.

This body convened in Wesson, July 28-30. In the absence of the invited preacher, the annual sermon was preached by the Wesson pastor, the text being Isa. liv, 2. The services Sunday night were conducted by Mrs. I. N. Chatfield, president, of Meridian. Her annual address was appropriate and suggestive, and was admirably read. A paper on "Our Cuban Work," prepared by Mrs. Matilda J. Holloman, was read by Mrs. Eleanor P. Mellen. The facts stated were eloquent of themselves, but were made doubly so by the clear and graceful manner in which they were stated. The report of the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clara Harmon Cope, of Paulding, Miss., was well read by Miss Lelia Cope, who represented both the adult and the juvenile auxiliaries of Paulding. The report had been well prepared. Sister Chatfield supplemented her written address by brief, but forceful, extemporaneous remarks, which produced a fine impression.

Twenty-one of our godly women agreed to organize a Parsonage and Home Mission Society, most of whom are members of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society and of our local Wesleyan Aid Society. The next day the number was increased to twenty-nine, and by unanimous vote the Wesleyan Aid Society was merged into the new organization.

Monday morning, at 9:15 o'clock, Mrs. President Chatfield called the Conference Society to order, and, after impressive devotional exercises, proceeded with the work. Miss Agnes G. Chrisman was made secretary. Reports were read from various auxiliaries, and also informal applications for aid for parsonages at Leakesville, Greene county; Terry, Hinds county, and Rose Hill, Jasper county. These applications were referred to the Executive Committee, who were granted power to act whenever formal application shall have been made. We are specially gratified by the statements made concerning the parsonage at Leakesville, now nearing completion under the faithful labors of Bro. J. O. Ellis. We would have been glad to have welcomed our preacher from Terry, or a delegate from their Parsonage and Home Mission Society, less than thirty-five miles distant on the railroad.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Charles B. Galloway, Jackson; first vice-president, Mrs. R. J. Turner, Bay St. Louis; second vice-president, Mrs. Janie Klein, Vicksburg; recording secretary, Mrs. Mary F. Lewis, Woodville; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Clara Harmon Cope, Paulding; treasurer, Mrs. Matilda J. Holloman, Meridian; auditor, Mrs. E. M. Huntoutt, Meridian; editor of column in NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE, Miss Pauline Stafford, Vossburg.

A part of the afternoon session was held in connection with the Wesson Auxiliary. The remainder of the session was devoted to the reading of the treasurer's report, and reports from auxiliaries. A paper on "Our Homes" (the organ of the Parsonage and Home Mission Society) was read by Mrs. Eleanor P. Mellen, evoking cordial commendations.

Paulding was selected as the place for the next annual meeting, the time being agreed on to embrace the second Sunday in July, 1896.

After prayer and benediction, the society adjourned.

W. P. and H. M. S.

By request of Mrs. Lyons, president of the Conference W. P. and H. M. S., I attended the Arcadia District Conference, which convened at Minden, July 3. I was kindly given an opportunity by the presiding elder, Bro. Harper, to represent the work. The ladies met after the services were over, and I reorganized their society with a membership of fifteen. The officers are as follows: Mrs. J. B. Cassity, president; Mrs. Moreland, vice-president; Mrs. R. B. Miller, recording secretary; Mrs. J. J. Holmes, treasurer; Mrs. Noble Harper, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Mildred Webb, agent for "Our Homes." These ladies promise faithful work for the future.

I secured six subscribers to "Our Homes," and hope my visit was not in vain.

The presiding elder, the preacher in charge, Bros. Miller, Upton, and others, expressed their sympathy and endorsement, and urged all the brethren to extend to the work their support and hearty co-operation.

Mormonism in Mississippi.

Permit me to give a sketch of Mormonism as I have seen in part and heard in part.

I have been watching, with interest and solicitude, the movements and teachings of the "foot pads" who call themselves "The Latter-day Saints." At first, they were mild and pleasant in manners and speech, desired to preach and teach the gospel of Christ as they understood it; following the original command, going two and two together. They had large sympathy for the South during "carpet bag rule" over her, as they, too, had suffered the indignities and misrepresentations under Federal rulers in Utah. Having abandoned polygamy, as ministers and citizens of the United States, they certainly could be no reasonable objection raised to their preaching the gospel the same as other denominations.

Let the tree be known by its fruits. During the year they have tramped from house to house over this and adjoining counties. Among the Christian and intelligent people a cool reception has generally been accorded them, and an absolute refusal to permit them to occupy the churches and school-houses to preach in. But finally they gained a foothold by preaching in private houses of the ignorant and vicious near the line of Jefferson and Franklin counties. They have continued to grow among this class until they number forty or fifty members. They built a house to preach in, which, fortunately or unfortunately, was burned.

On last Saturday and Sunday they held a two-days' meeting, and the three succeeding days a Mormon Conference with about twenty-five elders present, including their president for Mississippi. On the Sabbath, their great head leader delivered a very objectionable discourse; among other things he informed them he was an illegitimate child and was not ashamed thereof.

On Monday sixty men went in a body to within half a mile of the rendezvous, where the secret conference was being held, where they were met by the Mormon pickets, who requested the citizens to halt until they could bring their president to confer with them. This was agreed to, and the citizens appointed a Baptist minister to confer with his saintship. At last he arrived, a man of fine physique, ruddy countenance, glaring tiger-eyes, stentorian voice, and when he spoke the veins in his neck and forehead swelled to unusual proportions. However, the brave old minister and spokesman of the citizens, though somewhat awed at his lion-like appearance, finally got in a few queries as to his sermon of the previous day. The Mormon denied some things attributed to him, but unhesitatingly acknowledged he was a bastard and proud of his origin. To a request from the citizens that they would disperse and leave the country, his highness replied: "I will consult Gov. Stone. If he says we are bound to obey the command of sixty men, we will go. In the meantime we will go on with the work of our Conference." They were given until Friday to leave, and on that day not a Mormon elder was to be found. Farewell to the saints. LOOKER ON.

FROM THE WORK.

HINESTON, LA.

Have held already two protracted meetings on my charge, Spring Creek circuit, and, in spite of inclement weather, we were quite successful in both meetings. Bro. Hoffpauir, from the Boyce work, assisted me at Hempstead, and did some capital preaching. During this meeting we had only one accession on profession of faith; but splendid work was done among the membership, which was greatly revived.

At the old Spring Creek Camp Ground I was assisted by Bros. R. M. Blooker and William Pilley. Bro. William Monroe, a minister of the Congregational Church, was also present, and worked with us. Here we had a splendid meeting in spite of the rain, which came down in torrents, except Saturday and Sunday. We had three accessions on profession of faith, and several bright conversions among the members. May the Lord bless the faithful brethren who rendered me much-needed assistance!

My work is in many respects a good one, but, financially, it is hard. The Minutes of last year show that it paid the preacher last year less than any work in the Conference served by an itinerant preacher; and, besides this, the presiding elder this year cut off the best appointment to form the Glenmora mission. From the Minutes one might judge Spring Creek circuit to be a big work. Instead, however, of 360 members reported in the Minutes, I took charge of a work of about 200 members, very few of whom were workers. The reason for this discrepancy was that many of the members were added to the Glenmora mission, and there were about 20 on the roll of Spring Creek Church who were either given letters, and no record made of same, or were lost sight of for several years. Instead of four churches, valued at $2,200, I found two worth about $800. Instead of a parsonage valued at $200, I find a hut that we could not get $50 for to-day. The other church properly, valued at $250, I have not found yet. I do not make these statements through a spirit of complaint, but in order to show what was the real condition of things. I want the prayers of my brethren. I may, through Christ, lead Spring Creek circuit back to its early glory.

CHILDREN'S DAY AT PLEASANT VALLEY.

Children's Day was observed at Pleasant Valley on July 26. Between two and three hundred children and grown persons were present. Miss Hannah Millsaps skillfully presided at the organ, and in the absence of the pastor, Bro. Baskins, who was called away by a funeral service, the exercises were opened with prayer by Bro. Wm. Mullins. Then came a number of essays and recitations, sparkling with good thoughts, wise suggestions, and blessed truth, a collection being taken at the close. After a sumptuous dinner on the grounds served in true picnic style, the crowd again repaired to the church, where another interesting program was gone through with. Bros. Jesse Thompson and Wm. Mullins concluded with short, but pointed speeches. J. C. AINSWORTH.

Rev. D. W. Babb, Hebron circuit, North Mississippi Conference, July 25: "Our Children's Day service is just over. It was a most satisfactory one. Our good sisters spent much time and labor in preparing the children, none of whom failed. To the ladies is the credit due for the success of the program. Our collection on that day was larger than ever before. Our charge is in a growing condition. Rev. J. W. Honnoll, of Holly Springs, Miss., preached for us a week lately, notwithstanding the fact that it rained almost every day. Our people were very much strengthened in the faith of the gospel. Our work is ripening for a better harvest than ever before. More family altars, better Sunday-schools, better prayer meetings; more serious religions thought than ever before. The ADVOCATE is in good favor with our people. Doctor, you have our sympathy. We know you are many times in a strait as to what shall come to light through your paper. There is so much quibbling over words that mean about the same thing, and experiences common to all Christians under different manifestations, but the same result in the end. As Methodists, 'if we be brethren,' we ought to stop our disputing about what John Wesley said; but now let us think of Christ's life, and live as near like him as we can, and then life's precious moments will not be frittered away in criticising our chief pastors, bishops and elders. God knows their responsibilities are great, and their environment complex. Let us have more charity and common sense. God bless you, Dr. Black."

Rev. W. J. Porter, P.C., Indian Bayou, La., July 26: "Our meeting at Indian Bayou closed on the twenty-third instant at 11 P. M. It was the greatest victory for the Lord I ever witnessed. I arranged with Rev. D. C. Rawls to bring the Louisiana Holiness tent, and conduct a revival meeting, to begin July 12. The opposition to sanctification was very great at this place. We had a glorious meeting here last year, when many were converted and some sanctified; yet the opposition to holiness continued to increase. Our meeting began at the time appointed. The preaching was with power and in demonstration of the Spirit. The following are some of the visible results: Many got mad, but most of these returned and repented when their sins were uncovered. Sinners were convicted, mourners converted, and believers sanctified. Among the latter was a sister of a brother preacher who opposed the meeting. The tent was so crowded that we had to arrange seats on the outside for at least two hundred people. We had a general confession by wrong-doers. Raised in cash for the meeting $74, and $279 was pledged to meet the expenses of a meeting here next year, and twenty promised to tent on the ground with their families. The Lord be praised. We had an efficient lay worker in the person of Bro. A. E. Vail, a sanctified saloon keeper of New Orleans. Bro. Rawls did all the preaching, except one sermon by Rev. R. M. Walker (who is in the evangelistic work), and one sermon by the preacher in charge. If any of the brethren need help, I heartily recommend both of these brethren. Address Bro. D. C. Rawls, Y. M. C. A., New Orleans, La., and Bro. R. M. Walker, Rayne, La. God bless the ADVOCATE."

Rev. C. H. Ellis, Fuller, Miss., July 31: "I began with Rev. A. C. Burt, July 13, at Bethel, where we remained seven days. The Lord blessed the Word. Some found the Lord in consolous pardon, and others sought and obtained the more perfect experience of entire sanctification according to 1. Thes. v, 23, and John xvii, 17. The same may be said of the meeting at Oak Bowery, where a great many turned to the Lord, and thirty-one were received into our church. Arrangements were made here to build a much-needed house of worship. We held the meeting in a small school-house and under the ample shades of the forest trees. Though it rained excessively, the people came and risked being unsheltered to hear the Word. No wonder the Lord blessed them. We came to Hebron, July 27, and up to date the interest has grown. Many are seeking a clean heart; some have entered into this precious experience, and many more have been reclaimed from a backslidden condition, or have been converted. At least twenty-five or thirty went forward for prayer last night, and shouts of joy and sobs of penitence rang out and ascended to the God of our salvation. Bro. Burt is in feeble health, but untiring in efforts to bring the gospel of full salvation to his people. He is arranging for other meetings, and insists on my continuing with him through the entire campaign. 'The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our refuge.'"

Rev. W. D. Bass, Johnson, Ind. Ter., July 22: "I wish to say to the readers of the ADVOCATE that we closed another glorious meeting for J. H. Bass last night at Johnson, I. T., with about 100 conversions in and out of the church, and 51 additions, with others who will join the Baptist. We baptized 12 infants, and administered the Lord's Supper. All told, within the last few weeks we have had near 200 conversions, and 106 added to Methodism and baptized 16 infants. This is in the Chickasaw Nation. I begin with Bro. Burt at Rienzie, Miss., next Sunday. Send us a few sample copies of ADVOCATE (6 copies) to Rienzie, Miss., and I will see what I can do for you."

Scrofula in the Neck

Willie Tillbrook.

"My little boy Willie, now 6 years old, two years ago had a bunch under one ear which the doctor said was Scrofula. He finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving Willie Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until the sore healed up. Last winter it broke out again, followed by Erysipelas. We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with excellent results and he has had no more trouble. His cure is due to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger."

HOOD'S PILLS do not purge, pain or gripe, but act promptly, easily and efficiently. 25c.

Editorial Paragraphs.

Self-denial is a word that the world hates.

No man is any better than he intends to be.

Personal piety that will not stand the test in the home is little worth.

He prays most sincerely who endeavors as far as he can to answer his own prayers.

Don't get angry with your neighbor for not looking through your glasses. Maybe his are better.

It is mockery to pray, "Lead us not into temptation," unless we earnestly try to keep away from where it is.

What a blessed thought that the most insignificant act of kindness prompted by love is not forgotten by our Savior.

A form of religion that does not mean a pure heart and a holy life is clearly not up to the New Testament standard.

Fellow church member, did you gladden your pastor's heart by your presence at the last weekly prayer meeting? If not, why not?

The man who always does his best is the one who is never troubled with vain regrets.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these—'It might have been!'"

The Christian who devotes hours to the secular papers and to the reading of fiction, but who spends only a few moments in prayer and the study of the Sacred Scriptures, puts his spiritual life in jeopardy.

An empty purse is not a valid excuse for not giving to the Lord's cause, if its emptiness is due to luxurious living. The money Christian people spend for foolishness would support thousands of missionaries.

How comforting the reflection that God does not expect of us more than we are able to perform. "For he knoweth our frame; he remembereth that we are dust." Through the riches of grace which Christ supplies we can overcome all spiritual difficulties.

It is a misnomer to call any man converted who has not sought the Lord with his whole heart. Unconditional surrender is the one great condition of discipleship. "Whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not all that he hath," declares the Savior, "he can not be my disciple." (Luke xiv, 33.)

Unceasing Vigilance.

In the first glow of a great spiritual blessing Christians are apt to imagine that temptations have forever lost their power, and great is their elation over the supposed discovery. Sin appears to be so far away, and grace so richly abounds that the victory over Satan seems but an easy task. The heavenly race seems but a delightsome journey beset with but trivial difficulties. But gradually the rapturous feeling passes away, for we can not live perpetually upon the Mount of Transfiguration. Former evil habits and desires one by one, or all at once, assert themselves, and presently the Christian wakes up to the fact that the devil had taken his departure only for a season. Temptation is found to be no insignificant thing, after all, and the follower of Christ begins to realize that to overcome his spiritual foes his utmost strength must be put forth.

There never comes a time in Christian experience when temptation may be regarded with unconcern. So long as we are in the flesh we shall have to guard the citadel of the heart against the enticements of sin. If the Son of man escaped not being tempted of the devil, how can we hope to avoid his wiles? God nowhere promises to perform a work of grace in our hearts that will relieve us from the necessity of watchfulness. Whatever may be our spiritual attainments, none of us can afford to slight the injunction of the Savior: "Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak."

The salvation Christ offers is not an assured salvation, except in so far as we comply with the conditions of repentance, and continued faith and obedience. A wrought-out salvation, one that requires no effort, or anxiety, or watchfulness on the part of the individual, is the kind that the world wants, and that some, even with the light of God's Word before them, insist upon having. Methodist theology, however, teaches most emphatically that man can not be saved unless he co-operates with God. Man does something; God does something.

If God in creating us had placed us beyond the reach of temptation, where would be the freedom of the will? Necessitated goodness would have no virtue in it. Nor is man's weakness in the face of temptation entirely chargeable to original sin, or natural depravity. How came it about that some of the angels sinned, and were cast down to the bottomless pit? Was it inherited depravity that caused them to lose their glorious estate? Adam and Eve before the fall had no original sin to contend with; but Satan, nevertheless, beguiled them. Let not the converted man who listens to the seductive voice of the tempter, lay all, or even the greater portion of the blame, upon inherited depravity. Though man is a fallen being, grace to cover all our need is supplied through the atonement made by Christ.

No man ever led a purer, more consecrated life than did the Apostle Paul. But even with this grand old gospel hero the possibility of apostasy was an ever-present reality. Hear him speak: "But I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." How essential then that the ordinary Christian should guard well his every footstep!

What military commander would dare to encamp with his army without posting sentries? Often has ignominious defeat resulted through over-confidence and the consequent failure to keep a close watch upon the enemy. Nor is it enough that one part of the line should be guarded. A single weak point may cause a rout. In times of flood, what avails the strength of miles of levee if one or two weak places be neglected? Likewise, in building Christian character, one evil habit, the neglect of one simple duty, may result disastrously.

Our vigilance must be unceasing as well as thorough. We know not what hour the tempter may assail us. In cases of sickness a few hours' inattention may cause the death of the patient. Always the building-up process is slow; the work of destruction very quick. A few hours' dissipation, a brief relaxing of the spiritual energies, may undo what months and years of prayer and self-denial have accomplished.

Where we seem to be strongest we are often weakest. A recent editorial in the Quiver Magazine contained these significant words: "It is often said of bad men that they are capable of any wickedness; but this is true of all of us. We hear of a professing Christian or an energetic philanthropist or a refined scholar committing a disgraceful and loathsome crime, and we say in astonishment, 'That's the last man in the world I would have expected to do such a thing.' That is just why he did it. Thinking that he never could commit so base an act, he did not guard against it, and so was overtaken in the fault. We are safe only when we continually realize the awful capacity for vice there is in us, and that without the grace of God we may any day commit crimes at which we now shudder."

How worthy of constant remembrance are those expressive lines of the poet Heath:

"O watch and fight and pray;
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore.

"Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor lay thine armor down:
The work of faith will not be done,
Till thou obtain the crown."

Help Your Pastor Now.

When a preacher's purse and larder are both empty, it is hardly to be wondered at if mediocrity should characterize his sermons. Anxiety about the necessaries of life is not conducive to the best sermonic results. Some church members, however, are unreasonable enough to suppose that a preacher can get along, whether he is paid anything or not; and so he can, after a fashion. But, if meanwhile the pastor goes into debt, how ready some of these same folks are to abuse him. Or, if in order to make both ends meet, he teaches school, or sells books, or farms a little, at once the cry is raised that he is becoming secularized.

In not a few instances pastors are in great straits all along during the year because little or no effort is made to raise their salaries until just before Conference. We are well aware in the cotton-growing States the conditions are peculiar, and that in the country districts there is very little money in circulation until after the fleecy staple has been marketed. But in many country, as well as city, charges there could be great improvement in the matter of early collections if only proper effort were made. The negligence of some charges which are able to pay their pastor in weekly or monthly installments, is positively shameful.

Not many members, we are afraid, are as considerate as the good brother in a certain city who, before leaving town for a month's outing, handed his pastor ten dollars to cover his dues during his absence. We have known of instances where members have contributed liberally toward making up a princely sum for an evangelist, but gave almost nothing for the support of the home pastor. What should be said of such? A loyal Methodist will never allow personal dislike for the preacher in charge to cause him to withhold his contribution for ministerial support. In following Christ, we can't afford to be governed always by our likes and dislikes. Is it not ordained that they who preach the gospel should live of the gospel? "If we have sown unto you spiritual things," says Paul, "is it a great thing if we should reap your carnal things?" The prevailing financial stringency, we fear, is ofttimes made an excuse for illiberality and indefensible neglect of ministerial support.

Let every true Christian bestir himself, and see to it that the temporal wants of the faithful pastor and his family are well supplied. If some church members would only open their eyes, they would be startled at the financial straits to which preachers are often unintentionally put. Pastors, as well as people, "can stand a great deal of good treatment." Brethren, suppose you try this plan with your pastor, and see if the happiest results do not follow. The average pastor has enough things to trouble him without the additional worry of looking after his own salary. "A word to the wise is sufficient."

Millsaps College.

Please allow me to say through the ADVOCATE that we are now well supplied with glass cases for preserving geological and other rare and curious specimens. All contributions to our cabinets and library will be highly appreciated and duly acknowledged.

I am now on the look-out for generous friends to help us in adequately equipping our Science Department. Liberal contributions have been made by Mr. J. R. Bingham, of Carrollton, Miss., and Mr. Peter James, of Yazoo City, Miss. I hope before long to be able to acknowledge gifts from others. Maj. Millsaps will duplicate every dollar given for this purpose. Friends who will help us may make contributions directly to me or to Bishop Galloway.

The indications encourage us to expect a large attendance of students next session. Dr. Cooper is traveling extensively and sends cheering reports from all places he has visited. I have recently been in several sections of Mississippi, and find a great many boys who want to go to college. Alas! many of the most aspiring can not come because they haven't the means. We hear a great deal about developing the material resources of our country. Isn't it about time for us to give more attention to the development of our resources in young men? If we will, I am willing for other States to have the gold and silver and coal and iron mines. In the long run we will outstrip them in the race.

W. B. MURRAH.

An Important Concession.

The Rev. Mr. Loomis, agent of the American Bible Society in Japan, has written to the headquarters in New York announcing that the officials of Tokio have consented to permit the distribution of Bibles among the police force and the prison guards. This distribution, it is said, has already begun. The police force of Tokio numbers about 4,000. The Picayune, of this city, commenting on the above announcement, says:

If the police of New York had been reading their Bibles instead of blackmailing their victims, there would have been no Lexow Committee to shame them.

The officers and guardians of the peace in some other cities we know of might profit greatly by such reading.

Luther Benson, the famous temperance lecturer, was in this city last week, and made several speeches to large audiences.

Bishop Galloway at the Mississippi Chautauqua.

The following paragraph in regard to Bishop Galloway's lecture at the Mississippi Chautauqua should have appeared in our last issue, but was omitted through no fault of the editor:

On Monday evening, July 22, the Chautauquans were treated to a magnificent address by Bishop Galloway, which is said to have been the best thing on the programme. Taking as his theme "Observations in the Orient," he spoke of existing conditions in the light of the late struggle between China and Japan, and expressed the conviction that an era of missionary development is dawning, unprecedented in the history of Christianity. In a vivid description, the Bishop carried his hearers with him on a tour around the world, through Japan, China, India, Palestine, and on home. The large audience present listened with the profoundest attention to the very close.

BOOKS.

A SCHOOL HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES By Susan Pendleton Lee. With questions and summaries for reviews and essays, by Louise Manly. 1895. 612 pages. Price, $1.50. Introduction price, $1.25. B. F. Johnson Publishing Co., Richmond, Va.

In our judgment this is one of the best school histories, from the Southern point of view, that we have ever seen. It is beautifully printed and bound, the type being large and clear. The book is handsomely and profusely illustrated. The author has written in a most pleasing style, and, so far as we are able to judge, her statement of facts is fair and entirely reliable. Mrs. Lee is a daughter of Gen. W. N. Pendleton, of the Army of Northern Virginia, and she is well and favorably known as the author of a charmingly written history of his life.

The History Committee of the United Confederate Veterans, of which Gen. Stephen D. Lee, of Mississippi, is chairman, in its annual report at the Houston, Texas, meeting heartily recommended Mrs. Lee's history. The author has long been a successful teacher, and this work is born of her experience in the school-room. Teachers, as well as pupils, will be charmed with the book. It has a list of authorities and questions for class use at the end of each chapter.

FIFTY YEARS IN CHINA; or, China in Transition. By Rev. R. H. Graves, D. D. R. H. Woodward Co, Baltimore, Md.

We are in receipt of the advance sheets of the above-mentioned volume, which will be published in about four weeks' time. The book will contain 314 12 mo. pages, and 32 handsome full-page illustrations. The author, who has been a missionary in China since 1856, remarks in the preface that almost all the changes which have taken place in China have occurred within little more than thirty years. This promises to be an interesting, as well as instructive, volume, and we think its circulation will do much good. The book will be sold by subscription, and part of the proceeds will be given to foreign missions.

We have been complimented with a copy of a neat and readable little pamphlet, entitled "The Theologians of Methodism," containing twelve well-prepared theses by members of the senior class in the Biblical Department of Vanderbilt University. The pamphlet, printed at our Publishing House, is intended for private distribution only. From these theses may be gotten in condensed form a clear view of the contribution made by each theologian to our system of doctrine.

Bro. J. R. Bingham, in a card just received, states that the Winona District Conference, an account of which will be found on our second page, was held at Carrollton (Miss.), July 19-21. The W. M. Society met the Wednesday preceding.

NOTES.

We stop the press in order to publish the following telegram from Rev. T. W. Lewis, Grenada, Miss.: "Grenada county went dry two to one."

"Speak the truth in love," was the favorite motto of the late Prof. Blackie. He would often pen it with his own hand in Greek characters on the left-hand corner of the envelopes which he sent out. Of it he would say: "Adopt it, and it will turn earth into heaven; it will revolutionize society in the twinkling of an eye."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Ph.D. is taken on examination; yet some inferior institutions, whose faculties do not contain one person competent to examine a person who is to receive the degree of Ph.D., are turning them out rapidly. It will be necessary for the genuine Ph.D. soon to announce the name of the institution with the degree or initial letter, such as this: John Smith, Ph.D. (H.)—standing for Harvard, or W. for Wesleyan.—New York Advocate.

***

The stockholders of the Louisiana Chautauqua, at Ruston, at their final meeting, Aug. 3, authorized the expenditure out of their treasury of funds for the establishment of a system of waterworks, the purchase of some needed additional ground, and the erection of fifteen or twenty new cottage-rooms. These are gratifying improvements. We rejoice to learn that the season just over has been a brilliant and prosperous one.

***

The advantages of a good reputation are manifold. At Chattanooga a young man who wore an Epworth League badge was seen entering a saloon. The police quickly arrested him, knowing that he must be a crook who was taking advantage of the crowds and his badge to ply his evil trade. The police well knew that no genuine Epworthian would frequent a bar room. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches."—Pittsburg Christian Advocate.

Grace Church, Atlanta, has just completed a very handsome addition to its building. The re-opening last Sunday was an interesting occasion. A large congregation listened to a short but most appropriate and profitable sermon by Bishop Haygood. After the sermon, Col. W. S. Thompson and Dr. Kendall raised six hundred dollars to complete the payment on the building. The collection was the easiest and most quiet we ever saw. The church is to be congratulated on the tasty and comfortable improvements they have made.—Wesleyan Advocate.

***

From the daily press of last Monday we glean news of the horrible massacre of ten missionaries at Wha Sang, in the province of Fokein, Northern China. Eight ladies, one man and a child were killed by the mob, while several others barely escaped with their lives. The persons butchered were all British subjects. No Americans suffered violence. A sect known as "Vegetarians" are the perpetrators of the outrages, in which it is believed that a number of Chinese officials are implicated. It is high time that England and the United States demand of China in unmistakable terms that their missionaries shall be protected.

Question 1—To whom is a Bishop amenable for his conduct? (Paragraph 259.) Answer—To the General Conference, which has power to try him for improper conduct; and acquit, suspend or expel him. (Discipline Methodist Episcopal Church, South, page 112.) That is really the way it reads. We can not help thinking that there are those who imagine that it ought to be read this way: (Paragraph 259.) Answer. To the disaffected editors of third-rate newspapers and sore-headed preachers who have power to put him in the pillory, hang, draw and quarter him, for daring to discharge the functions of his office without consulting them.—Baltimore Christian Advocate.

An organization has been formed in Little Rock composed of the official members of all the Protestant Churches in the city. The object is to concentrate forces and unify effort in such matters as charity, the execution of law, the protection of the weak and punishment of the lawless. The officers are Geo. Thornburgh, president; C. B. Mills, vice-president; R. W. Irwin, secretary; J. S. Majors, treasurer. Committees on finance, charity and law and order have been raised and work will soon begin. We understand that the saloon men have become alarmed at the formation of the association and threaten to negative its influence by special effort among business men by indirect boycott, etc. If a war of that sort is necessary, let it come once.—Arkansas Methodist.

Free Board for Girls.

The same offer which is made to boys we make to girls. Any girl who will send us one hundred subscribers at the regular price—$2—will receive free board for one session at any college she may select out of the following list: Whitworth Female College, East Mississippi Female College, Port Gibson Female College, Edward McGehee Female College, Grenada Collegiate Institute, Mansfield Female College. This includes board only. Tuition will have to be arranged for with the president of the college. Here is a chance for fifty young ladies to get an education. Remember, you are not confined to one locality to secure subscriptions. You can get them anywhere. You are, of course, at liberty to secure as many assistants as you like in canvassing—fathers, brothers, cousins, preachers, or anybody else. What is done should be done quickly. "The early bird catches the worm." We also make this proposition: We will give five months' board for fifty subscribers at $2 each. Write for sample copies and begin work at once.

We will give free board at Malone College for one session to any young lady who will send us eighty-five subscribers. We will give five months' board for forty-three subscribers.

W. C. BLACK,
512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

P. S.—Should you fail to get the full quota of subscribers, you will get a good cash commission. W. C. B.

Notice.

Preachers and others coming to Topisaw Camp Meeting, on arriving at McComb City, will report to Rev. J. M. Morse, who will give all necessary information about conveyance to camp ground. If preachers who expect to spend a night in McComb City, on their way to camp ground, will notify Bro. Morse in time, he will provide lodging for them. Preachers will be conveyed to and from camp meeting at the expense of camp meeting association. H. P. LEWIS.

Rock Arbor Meeting at Long Beach, Miss.

The rock arbor meeting at Long Beach, Miss., will open Aug. 20 Sister M. M. Snell will be with us. Homes will be provided for workers who come to help in the service. Rev. F. M. Keen will conduct the song service. N. B. HARMON, P. C.

Teacher Wanted.

A teacher with first-class qualifications desires a school. He can teach Latin, higher mathematics; good English scholar; aptitude to teach; moral qualifications good. Any school desiring such a teacher will please to communicate with me at once at Meridian, Miss. My mail will be forwarded. I. W. COOPER.

Lectures by Rev. H. G. Hawkins.

Rev. Henry G. Hawkins expects to deliver several lectures throughout the State during the next ninety days. Bro. Hawkins has $300 worth of curios, which he uses in illustrating his lectures. These lectures are calculated to create missionary intelligence and enthusiasm. I will give any missionary society or community dates. I. W. COOPER.

Item for Ladies.

Ladies, have your system always right, and you will know and enjoy the luxury of perfect health. CREOLE FEMALE TONIC is the Ladies' Remedy, par excellence, and, as such, is in high repute, professionally and popularly, for diseases "peculiar to the sex."

PERSONALS.

Bishop Galloway's book, that is soon to be issued from the press, is to be entitled, "A Circuit of the Globe."

Bishop Hendrix, who is a ready and pleasing writer, is to contribute a series of articles to the Nashville Advocate during his travels in the East.

Rev. J. O. Bennett, of Zachary, La., was in the city last week, and gave us a pleasant call. He reports Zachary charge as in a flourishing condition.

A card from Bro. Mellen, giving the names of the district secretaries elected at the Wesson Conference of the W. P. and H. M. S., reached us too late for publication. The item will be published next week.

The Greenshoro, Ala., correspondent of the Advertiser reports Dr. Keener as making a vigorous canvass for the Southern University, with prospects for a much larger enrollment of students than the school had last year.

Dr. Homer Bush, says the Wesleyan Advocate, has been elected president of Andrew Female College, and has accepted the position. He is a graduate of Gordon Institute and of Emory College, and is a teacher of experience and high repute.

We regret to learn that Dr. John W. Boswell, the efficient assistant editor of the Nashville Advocate, has for some days past been too unwell to leave his room. His sickness, however, is not regarded as serious, and we hope that he will soon be himself again.

Dr. R. J. Bigham, pastor of Trinity Church, Atlanta, Ga., has been elected Educational Secretary in place of Dr. W. W. Smith, who resigned recently. Dr. Bigham is about forty years of age, a graduate of Emory College, and is a man of considerable ability and popularity.

It is an open secret that Dr. Warren A. Candler was very anxious at the late commencement of Emory College to resign his presidency and return to the pastorate, but was prevailed upon to hold on. He has developed great gifts as a college president.—Nashville Christian Advocate.

Miss Sallie Smylie, of Meridian, Miss., has announced herself as a candidate for the office of State librarian. Without disparaging in the least the qualifications of the present worthy incumbent, or of the other candidates, we are of the opinion that, if elected to the said office, she would give perfect satisfaction.

Judge L. H. Estes, of Memphis, Tenn., is a very effective lay evangelist. While enjoying a brief vacation from his judicial labors, he is putting in the time holding protracted meetings in country churches. His services are much appreciated, and bear good fruit in every place.—Nashville Advocate.

Says the Review of Missions: "A series of invaluable biographies has been undertaken by Dr. Y. J. Allen. It will comprise an account of the conversion and the Christian experience of living men who were former believers in Shintoism, Confucianism, Taoism, Buddhism, Hinduism, Mohammedanism, Judaism, etc.

Miss Rosa Wiss, a talented Methodist young woman of Meridian, Miss., has recently completed a three years' course at a leading medical school in the East, and has hung out her shingle in that city. Such is her energy and perseverance that she is sure to forge her way to the front at once. We wish her unbounded success.

Rev. L. S. Jones, presiding elder of the Natchez district, was married at Canton, Miss., on the evening of the thirtieth ultimo, to Mrs. Hattie Coleman, of that city. We congratulate Bro. Jones upon having won so charming a prize. May their wedded life prove "a grand, sweet song." The happy couple will reside at Gloster, Miss.

Dr. Henry A. Scomp, formerly professor of Greek in Emory College, Georgia, has accepted a professorship in the American Temperance University at Harriman, Tenn. He is a profound scholar, a zealous Methodist, and a man of great force of character. The university at Harriman is to be congratulated upon having secured so valuable a teacher.

Rev. Dr. S. A. Steel, general secretary of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church, South, has been visiting Chicago, as the guest of Secretary Sohell. His lecture at Berwyn, on "Social life in Dixie during the war," is described as one of the most charming bits of platform eloquence ever heard in this neighborhood.—Northwestern Christian Advocate.

Bishop Hendrix intends to sail for Japan, August 5, from Vancouver, accompanied by Dr. J. C. C. Newton, who returns to his field. Rev. T. H. Haden, of Crozet, Va., and Miss Ida M. Worth, of St. Louis, Mo., go out with the same party; the former for work in the Kwansei Gakuin, or Kobe College for boys, the latter to assist Mrs. M. I. Lambuth in the Kobe Industrial School for Women.—Memphis Advocate.

Mrs. Ann Maria Godfrey.

Mrs. Ann Maria Godfrey, widow of the late Rev. James A. Godfrey, of the Mississippi Conference, was born May 8, 1822, and died near Bradly, Miss., July 17, 1895, aged seventy-three years two months and nine days. She and Bro. Godfrey were converted and joined the church in August, 1842, in Itawamba county, Miss., in a meeting conducted by the Rev. H. H. Montgomery. She was united in holy wedlock with Bro. Godfrey by Rev. H. H. Montgomery some time after their conversion. Bro. Godfrey was admitted on trial in the Mississippi Conference, Dec. 11, 1844, and with him our dear departed sister shared the fortunes of the itinerant's life till June 11, 1890, when he passed into the glory beyond. Thus for over forty-five years was she actively and usefully associated with one of the most active, industrious and useful preachers of his day. She was truly a preacher's wife in every sense. Self-sacrificing, earnest, deeply pious, cheerful, of a gentle, sweet spirit, she was universally beloved. She was a helpmeet indeed. Whether on circuits, or in stations or districts, she always suited her place.

Bro. Godfrey, for many years presiding elder, was much away from home, and hence she was much alone, but she was never heard to murmur; and during many years of the latter part of his life he was in poor health, and here in affliction's crucible she shone brightest. No man ever owed more of his success as a Methodist preacher to his wife than did James A. Godfrey. He could truly say, "The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her." "She openeth her mouth with wisdom; and her tongue is the law of kindness." "Her children rise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her."

Five children were born to them, only one of whom remains—Mrs. A. Lou Edgar, wife of Rev. E. F. Edgar, of the Mississippi Conference.

For many years she has been in feeble health, and, after a long and painful struggle with disease, she passed triumphantly away to be forever with the Lord. Doubtless, she is reunited with the life-long companion of her toils and joys.

A Glorious Revival at Sessoms.

MR. EDITOR: We have just closed one of the most wonderful religious awakenings ever known in this community. Rev. W. M. McIntosh came to us at the beginning of the second week with his tent, and Bro. Smith to lead the singing, and stayed fourteen days. It was a hard fight. The trouble was in the churches. They were at ease in Zion. They thought they would see what the evangelist was going to do; but he soon gave them to understand that only those who did something should see anything. He turned loose the gospel of personal effort and co-operation upon them, and made it so hot that it was, "go to work" or "get out." Many of them got out, but were glad to come back again, and do something for Christ. Soon there were more than a hundred men and women ready to help. All denominations joined us in the work, and such interest has never been seen here before. There are more consecrated men and women and more family altars here now than ever were known before. There have been to date over one hundred conversions, as many reclamations, and eighty-seven accessions to the various churches. Some old men up in the sixties were saved. A large majority of the converts were adults. Glory be to God for hearing and answering prayer! God bless Bro. McIntosh! He will be long remembered in this town and community. W. S. LAGRONE.

PUBLISHER'S NOTICES.

The Holman Bible for $1.65.

We are now offering the Holman Self-Pronouncing Bible for $1.65 to subscribers who pay a full year in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '96. This Bible has all the Helps of the Oxford Bible, and, in addition to this, it gives the pronunciation of every proper name, not in an appendix, but in the book itself wherever the name occurs. This makes it by far the best Bible on the market. Everybody, whether educated or uneducated, needs help in the pronunciation of proper names, especially Bible names. Read carefully our offer on the seventh page.

Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two full years in advance, i. e., up to Aug., '97, can get this Bible at $1.35.

There is a demand for Bibles with larger type than is used in the Bible we have been handling. We have made arrangements to meet that demand. We have an edition of the Holman Bible printed in bourgeois type—the largest type used in Oxford Bibles. This Bible is bound exactly in the same style as our other Holman Bibles. Those who want this Bible must meet the requirements of our offer as to subscription, and then send $2.45 instead of $1.65. This is the best bargain ever offered in a bourgeois type Bible.

We sell our large-type Holman Bible to persons who are not subscribers for $5—publisher's price. Our subscribers get it on conditions specified in our offer for $2.45. The ADVOCATE and the Bible both cost only $4.45, while the Bible alone costs $5. See the point?

We are now prepared to fill orders for Bibles (both kinds) promptly.

For twenty cents we will have your name engraved in gilt letters on the outside of the book.

N. B.—Be sure to notice the sweeping reduction in the price of our sewing machine. If we can serve you in that line, call on us without delay, as we may not be able to maintain this price longer than until the first of September.

PREMIUMS TO AGENTS.

(1) We will give one of our $50 sewing machines—a High-Arm Singer—as a premium to any person who will send twenty new subscribers at the regular rate.

(2) Any person who is himself a subscriber, and whose subscription is paid one full year in advance, i. e., to Aug., '96, can secure a copy of "Christian Womanhood"—price, $1—free of charge by sending us one new subscription at the regular rate. Of course, all new subscribers will be entitled to our Holman Bible at the premium rate $1.65.

A MODEL CHILD.

Her temper's always sunny, her hair is ever neat;
She doesn't care for candy—she says it is too sweet!
She loves to study lessons—her sums are always right;
And she gladly goes to bed at eight every single night!

Her apron's never tumbled, her hands are always clean!
With buttons missing from her shoe she never has been seen.
She remembers to say, "Thank you," and "Yes, ma'am, if you please;"
And she never cries, nor frets, nor whines; she's ne'er been known to tease.

Each night upon the closet shelf she puts away her toys;
She never slams the parlor door, nor makes the slightest noise;
But she loves to run on errands and to play with little brother,
And she's never in her life been known to disobey her mother.

I long to grasp her hand!"
She's the daughter of Mr. Nobody,
And she lives in Nowhereland!

A Letter to Boys from Japan.

BY BISHOP C. B. GALLOWAY.

A promise to write occasionally a special letter to my own little boy about things seen and heard in Japan, has raised the question, Why not tell all the boys? For are they not alike interested in certain sights and scenes? In response thereto, I send this letter. Many times since leaving home, I have had at least one little pair of black eyes in mind as I looked upon some curious or funny thing, and wished they could enjoy it. Some of these I must tell about.

Well, the first thing that would make a boy laugh and his eyes dance would be the way people travel here in Japan. There are few carriages and horses—little ugly ponies—and the cows they work to carts are too slow. So they ride in a sort of a baby carriage, with two wheels and shafts in front, drawn by a man. It is called the "jinriksha"—a pull-man-car. I can imagine an American boy stepping into a jinriksha the first time, and see the broad grin on his face while the little yellow-skinned man for a horse starts off at a brisk trot. He never felt so funny in all his life before, and never rode behind such a horse. The idea of a pony telling you of the different places as you pass along—that is, if you understand Japanese, or if he has learned a little "pigeon English." He tucks the lap-robe around you, brushes the dust off your clothes and shoes when you get out, takes your satchel into the hotel or station, and, if necessary, will get your money changed and bring you the exact amount. Now, what do you think of such a horse as that?

And does he go fast? Well, he trots off at the rate of from six to eight miles an hour, and can keep it up nearly all day. A lady told me yesterday that she rode behind one for thirty miles last Winter, and he hardly broke his trot the entire trip. You ought to see his muscles, especially the calves of his legs. They are large and hard, and make him able to run a long time and pull heavy loads. Sometimes he will strike for higher wages, even after he has made a firm bargain. At least he does this with a fresh foreigner. But the poor fellow gets little pay. The rates are fixed in some cities—usually about eight cents an hour. You can't travel that cheap in America.

You ought to see the shoes worn by cows and oxen. They are made of straw, and are tied securely around the upper part of the foot. I have seen some horses, also, wearing straw shoes. So cows, oxen, horses and boys all wear shoes made of straw.

What a funny way they have in Japan of counting the ages of people! They count the year a child is born as one year, and the next year as two. So if a little boy is born on December 31, he is one year old that day, and the next day, January 1, he will be two years old. Such a young gentleman in America would be only two days old. So much for living in Japan.

Another curious thing is this—all the boys in Japan have the same birthday. The birthday of the boys is the fifth day of the fifth month; of the girls, the third day of the third month. What a jolly time the children must have, all celebrating the same birthday!

You would be amazed to see how the Japanese write the names of persons. The given name always follows the surname, and the title follows that. For instance, the youngest member of my family would not write his name Mr. Ethelbert Galloway, but Galloway Ethelbert Mr. And if a letter should be addressed to him at home, it would be written backwards, in this way:

America,
United States,
Mississippi,
Jackson,
Galloway,
Ethelbert
Mr.

But these people do nearly everything just the opposite from us. They write from right to left; they turn to the left on a road or street; they pull a plane, and push a drawing-knife; they count cattle by the tails, and not heads; they say so many tails of cattle; they put a horse's head to the opening of the stall; and many other things too numerous to mention.

How American boys would enjoy seeing these Japanese fish! They have peculiar little boats with one square sail, and go far out to sea on fishing expeditions. One way they have of fishing I especially wanted to see in order to tell you about it. It is on a certain river, and at night. They have a number of large birds called cormorants, around whose bodies they tie strings, and put them into the water near their boats. These cormorants dive into the water after fish, and when they have caught several, the men pull them in, squeeze their bodies, and force out the fish. You would rather see the fishing than eat the fish, wouldn't you! Stewed fish you would like, but spewed fish I don't think you would especially desire. But for aught I know, they have been on hotel tables, and eaten by me and other foreigners with a relish.

This is said to be "the land of tailless cats, and odorless flowers, and songless birds." Well, nearly all the cats are without tails, and the flowers are beautiful, but not fragrant. The birds, however, do sing, and the crow—the old black crow, "Jim Crow"—makes the same noise here that he does at home. I rather like the old fellow, for he makes me feel as though I was in America. Animals of all sorts are very kindly treated in Japan. One reason for this is that many Japanese think that they will turn into animals when they die. They are never cruel to them. What a sad superstition! They know nothing of our Christian religion and the hopes of heaven. But we might learn something from their kindness to all animals.—Epworth Era.

Boys' Leisure Hours.

A boy was employed in a lawyer's office, and he had the daily paper to amuse himself with. He began to study French, and at the little desk became a fluent reader and writer of the French language. He accomplished this by laying aside the newspaper, and taking up something not so amusing, but far more profitable.

A coachman was often obliged to wait long hours while his mistress made calls. He determined to improve the time. He found a small volume containing the Eclogues of Virgil, but could not read it, so he purchased a Latin grammar. Day by day he studied this, and finally mastered its intricacies. His mistress came behind him one day as he stood by the horses waiting for her, and asked him what he was so intently reading. "Only a bit of 'Virgil,' my lady." "What! do you read Latin?" "A little, my lady." She mentioned this to her husband, who insisted that David should have a teacher to instruct him. In a few years David became a learned man, and was for many years a useful and beloved minister of Scotland.

A boy was told to open and shut gates to let the teams out of an iron mine. He sat on a log all day by the side of the gate. Sometimes an hour would pass before the teams came, and this he employed so well that there was scarcely any fact in history that escaped his attention. He began with a little book on English history that he found on the road. Having learned that thoroughly, he borrowed of a minister "Goldsmith's History of Greece." This good man became greatly interested in him, and lent him books, and was often seen sitting on the log, conversing with him about the people of ancient times. Boys, it will pay to use your leisure hours well.—Northwestern Advocate.

Dr. Parkhurst's Advice.

MAKE THE CHILD A MORAL VERTEBRATE: DEVELOP AN OSSEOUS SHAFT.

The first and fundamental thing that the home has to do for the child in the way of education is, then, to help make of him a little moral vertebrate, writes the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., in a vigorous article on "The Training of a Child," in the August Ladies' Home Journal. There needs to be developed an osseous shaft running up and down him that shall form the axis around which his growing personality shall gather itself in compactness and fixity. That will make the boy mean something, and make him mean more and more till the end of time, and clear on into eternity. It is the only thing that will make him worth calling a personal integer.

To learn to obey is the hardest even as it is the most valuable lesson a child can ever acquire. It is not only valuable for what it is in itself, it is also valuable for what it serves as the basis of. One of the first things told us of Jesus has to do with this same matter. It is related to us that he was subject to his parents; and the narrative immediately goes on to remark that he grew in wisdom and in favor with God and men. The close juxtaposition of the two seems calculated to teach that obedience was the seed kernel out of which his intelligence and holiness waxed.

Good Manners Win.

Good manners are a winning force in life. "Manners make the man," and a man's manners are often the making of him. They determine his reception among his fellows. No policy pays like politeness. Unmannerly actions are among the most expensive luxuries of life.

Keep your engagements. If a man's word can not be depended on when he makes an engagement, he will be mistrusted.

Never disregard appearances. The apparel often proclaims the man. Dress affects a man's manners and morals. A general negligence of dress very often proclaims a corresponding negligence of address.

"Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not expressed in fancy—rich, not gaudy."

—Gospel Banner.

Your Outing.

When you go on your outing, be careful that it does not mean an outing from duty and religious principle. A little boy who had gone with his parents to make a visit in a neighboring city, was asked by his mother if he had said his prayers. "Why, no; I didn't know that God had come here, too." My dear fellow pilgrim, just remember on your Summer jaunt, when you are tempted to do things you certainly wouldn't do at home, that God is there, too.—The Outlook.

Young wife: "Why, dear, you were the stroke oar at college, weren't you?" Young husband: "Yes, love." "And a prominent member of the gymnastic class?" "I was the leader." "And quite a hand at all athletic exercises?" "Quite a hand? My gracious! I was champion walker, the best runner, the head man at lifting heavy weights, and as for carrying—why, I could shoulder a barrel of flour and—" "Well, love, just please carry the baby for a couple of hours. I'm tired."—Christian Work.

Some Summer Health Rules.

Pin these little rules by Benjamin F. Bailey in a prominent place and live up to them, and we will almost guarantee freedom from Summer complaints: First—Eat lightly of meat and more freely of vegetables and fruits, and never rise from the table overloaded. Second—Don't use milk as an article of diet too freely, as it tends, if used in excess, to favor derangements of the liver. Third—Avoid excess of pastry, but don't be so foolish as to avoid all the good things of life and feel obliged to live on corn cake and graham, which articles are to many as injurious if used in excess in hot weather as are pastries. Fourth—Never eat heartily when over-heated, and never take a brisk walk in the sun immediately after eating. Take a little quiet rest after meals. Fifth—In satisfying thirst stick to one thing at a time. If it be water let it be water, and if it be lemonade, let it be lemonade; but don't be mixing all kinds of concoctions. Don't be afraid of water cooled by being placed near the ice, but drink it slowly and in moderate quantities. Moderate draughts of water favor perspiration and thus a reduction of temperature. Sixth—Be steadfast in taking regular exercise out of doors every day, preferably in the early morning or cool of the evening. Seventh—Bathe regularly. Eighth—If you lead a busy life, keep steadily at work, but so time your life and plans as never to be in a hurry or fret; plan to drive business and not let business drive you.

Health Notes.

A drop of honey and sweet oil upon a bit of cotton is the best remedy known for painful earache.

Thorough and frequent bathing of the entire body is the healthiest and best means of keeping the complexion pure and clean.

Bathe the lips occasionally with a little alum water, followed by a little camphor ice or glycerine. The process will make the lips red and firm.

Probably no class of people suffer more with rheumatism than farmers, and yet the remedy for this dreadful disease is or should be right at hand. If celery were eaten freely, sufferers from rheumatism would be comparatively few. It is a mistaken idea that cold and damp produce the disease; they simply develop it. Acid blood is the primary and sustaining cause. If celery is eaten largely, an alkaline blood is the result, and where this exists there can be neither rheumatism nor gout. It should be eaten cooked. Cut into bits, and boil till soft in as little water as possible. Add to this half as much milk as there is water in the celery, thicken with flour and season with butter, pepper and salt.—Southern Cultivator.

How to Keep Good Looking.

Those who wish to keep good looking should keep good natured; most of us are anything but anxious to help on the ravages Time brings along with him, and bad nature makes people grow old very fast. It is the minor miseries, vexations, disappointments and jealousies that sour the temper; scarcely, if ever, the real big troubles of life. Good nature comes in part from good health, but it can be cultivated like any other virtue, and it is a duty to cultivate it the same as we cultivate order, love of beauty, or love of truthfulness, or good habits of any kind.—Journal of Hygiene.

THE CUISINE.

CONDUCTED BY L. A. B.

LAYER CAKE.—Cream half a cup of butter, add one and a half cups of sugar gradually, beating all the while until creamed. Add three-fourths of a cup of milk and two cups of flour; beat until smooth. Beat the whites of four eggs to a stiff dry froth; add to the batter with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Turn into greased layer tins and bake in a quick oven for twenty minutes.

LETTUCE SALAD.—Take the yolks of three hard-boiled eggs, add salt and mustard to taste; mash it fine; make a paste by adding a dessertspoonful of olive oil or melted butter (use butter always when it is difficult to get fresh oil); mix thoroughly and then dilute by adding gradually a teacup of vinegar, and pour over the lettuce.—Interior.

Literary Notes.

The story of an exiled lottery, which, after having been driven out from the United States, is now existing precariously in a Central American republic (Honduras), is told by Richard Harding Davis in Harper's Weekly for Aug.

Godey's Magazine, for August, is an issue of beauty and interest in every way. Among the dozen illustrated articles and stories are The Princess Ilka, by Dr. S. M. Miller; Virginia Families, adorned with portraits of some of the most famous of the beautiful women of the Old Dominion; Harold's Ways in Many Climes, A Cruise on a House-boat, and the true and laughable story of the Cardiff Giant Hoax, by Albert L. Parkes, the manager of this gigantic fraud. The fiction, poetry and fashions all go to make up a very attractive number of this popular ten-cent magazine. Published by the Godey Company, 52-54 Lafayette Place, New York.

For seven years Scribner's Magazine has had the habit of publishing a mid-summer Fiction Number, in which have appeared some of the most notable short stories that have been written by American authors. The present (August) issue is no exception to this remarkably successful record. The array of contributors includes Anthony Hope, H. C. Bunner, Hopkinson Smith, Richard Harding Davis, Octave Thanet, Noah Brooks, George Meredith, George I. Putnam, and Theodore Roosevelt. The number contains seven short stories, six of them illustrated by artists of the first rank; also a short article on the rage for bicycle riding in Paris, showing recent costumes and scenes in the parks there; a brief account of Leveille, the eminent French engraver; an installment of Meredith's newest serial, The Amazing Marriage, and poems, with the Point of View.

Frank R. Stockton, the author of The Lady, or the Tiger? contributes, under the title of Love Before Breakfast, one of the most delightful love stories to the August Ladies' Home Journal. Dr. Parkhurst writes wisely and well of The Training of a Child, giving advice which can not fail to be of value to parents everywhere. In the fourth paper of the series of The Woman Who Most Influenced Me, Edgar Wilson Nye ("Bill Nye") writes of the two women who most influenced him. Miss Parloa writes from abroad of Methods of French Cooking. This midsummer number goes out to its hundreds of thousands of readers in a cover presenting Albert Lynch's famous panel of Spring, which won for him the Salon prize in 1893. Published by the Curtis Publishing Company, of Philadelphia, for ten cents per number and one dollar per year.

The August number of St. Nicholas comes to the little ones in vacation season, and most appropriately it bears with it the breath of the woods and the fields. The frontispiece shows a pretty little Dutch girl with a cat in her arms. Cromwell Gaipin tells of The Bronco's Last Race. Prof. Brander Matthews contributes a sketch of Oliver Wendell Holmes. In Mr. Brooks' serial, A Boy of the First Empire, Napoleon is forced to abdicate by the Allies after the battle of Paris. A very fantastic fairy story is, What Gustus Gerlach Was Afraid Of, by Elizabeth Cumings. James Otis continues his recital of the friendship of Teddy and Carrots. Theodore Roosevelt continues his Hero Tales from American History, with an account of The Cruise of the Wasp. Howard Pyle is drawing to a conclusion his serial, Jack Ballister's Fortunes. Mrs. Clara Erskine Clement describes The Voyage of a Chinese Child Cat. There is the usual variety of poems and pictures in the number.

The August number of Harper's Magazine deals with the lighter phases of human experience appropriate to the season, and with life in the open. Mr. Abbey's illustrations for Midsummer-Night's Dream, nine in number, are accompanied by Mr. Andrew Lang's comment on Shakespeare's comedy. Mr. Julian Ralph, in the article entitled Every-day Scenes in China treats of the common folk, their life and characteristics, in city and country. In Roundabout to Boston, Mr. W. D. Howells relates some interesting passages in his life as a wartime consul at Venice. Mr. Frederic Remington, in Cracker Cowboys of Florida, has discovered a new border type. This number contains the romance entitled, Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc. Besides its serial fiction, Harper's, for August, contains four complete short stories. This varied and entertaining number is completed by the Editor's Study of current themes and the Editor's Drawer, filled with humorous anecdotes, verses, and illustrations.

The high-lights of the Midsummer Holiday Century are three beautiful wood engravings by Cole; a fully illustrated description by Philo N. McGiffin of the battle of the Yalu river, between the Japanese and Chinese fleets, in which the writer commanded the Chinese ironclad Chen Yuen; a paper by Nordau, author of Degeneration, on the criticism of that book; a biographical sketch in the Notable Women series of Sonya Kovalevsky, the Russian mathematician, whose recollections and biography have just been published; an engaging illustrated installment of Sloane's Life of Napoleon; a continuation of Ossa Braccio, Marion Crawford's tragic novel, with an illustration by Castaigne; The Princess Sonia, by Julia Magruder, with an illustration by Gibson; a charming story of a little Chinese boy, entitled The Cat and the Cherub, by Chester Bailey Fernald; also four very short stories by George Wharton Edwards, entitled The Rivalries of Long and Short Codiac. In addition, there are several articles relating more or less intimately to the holiday season. Among the poems of the number is The Green Grass av Owld Ireland, by James Whitcomb Riley. The editorials are entitled, The Season of Timidity in Presidential Candidates, The Need of a City Party, The Degenerate Stage, and The "Heart Line" in Fiction.

EVANS—Died July 11, 1895, near Union, Miss., Bro. J. B. Evans. He was born in Warren county, Ga., Jan. 12, 1814; professed religion and joined the Baptist Church in 1830. In 1877 he joined the Presbyterian Church, in which he was a very efficient officer. He settled in Neshoba county, Miss., some time prior to 1877. Joined the M. E. Church, South, in 1890, at Union, Newton county, Miss. He has ever been a faithful member of whatever branch of the Christian Church he belonged to.

He had been afflicted for several years, and was not able to attend public services very often. It was a feast to him and his consecrated Christian wife and daughter for his pastor to visit them. Oh, how his eyes would fill with tears and his voice tremble with emotion as we talked of Jesus and his love and prayed and sang together! It was really refreshing to the pastor to visit at his home. He and family always considered it a privilege to give to God's ministers and his cause This pastor has never been there but what they gave him some token of their appreciation of his visit Sometimes we would say: "Oh, no; you can't afford to give that much." But they would always say: "We will be so thankful if you will accept this." So, rather than deprive them of the joys of giving, we accepted.

He leaves a wife and two children—one son, the Rev. R. M. Evans, P. C., at Coffeeville, Miss., North Mississippi Conference; a widowed daughter, Mrs. Mollie Guttenberg, who has lived with her father for years. Bro. Evans was married to Miss Sarah Montgomery, February, 1840, with whom he lived happily. He said to his wife just before he died: "We have lived together fifty-five years, but I must leave you now; but it won't be long before we'll meet over yonder." He delighted in reading his Bible.

W. M. WILLIAMS, P. C.

Decatur, Miss.

IRWIN—Sister Lucy Askew Irwin was born of H. and Lucy Harrison, in Summerville, Miss., Dec. 26, 1839, and died at her home near Starkville, June 11, 1895.

Sister Irwin was raised and educated in Columbus, Miss., where she professed religion quite early in life and joined the M. E. Church, South, of which she continued a faithful member until death. She was married to her late husband, Joseph Irwin, on Oct. 11, 1865. Three children blessed this union—two sons and one daughter.

For more than a year Sister Irwin was a great sufferer. An incurable disease progressed slowly, but surely, until the end. But from first to last no complaint, no murmuring passed her lips. A more patient sufferer I have never known. Frequent conversations and religious privileges revealed the secret of her patience—she had faith in Christ.

She was a true wife, a devoted mother and a consistent, considerate Christian. In all the positions of life her pure Christian conduct was beautiful and refreshing to her friends and relatives. Her husband and three children survive to mourn her loss. May God's mercies deal gently with them!

"Well,"

said the bright woman who had asked for Pearline, to the grocer who wanted to sell her some imitation of it, "whether you do sell more of these other things or not, there must be something in Pearline which makes the flies avoid it. I notice that all the Pearline packages are clean and fresh. All the others are fly-specked!" This is a true story. Everything is true that we print about Pearline. The thing in Pearline that keeps flies off is its popularity. It doesn't stay on the shelves long enough to become soiled. When women want washing made easy, without any risk of harm, they must have Pearline.

Send it Back

Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers will tell you "this is as good as" or "the same as Pearline." IT'S FALSE—Pearline is never peddled, and if your grocer sends you something in place of Pearline, be honest—send it back. 427 JAMES PYLE, N. Y.

The Holman Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.

Minion, 8vo. Divinity Circuit, Round Corners, etc.

CONTAINS THE FOLLOWING HELPS TO THE STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Concordance, with Contexts, over 40,000 References; Index to Persons, Places and Subjects, 16,000 References; Scripture Atlas, with Index; Glossary of Bible Words; Bible Calendar; Summary and Analyses of the Old and New Testaments.

A Self-Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names and Foreign Words contained in the Bible, comprising about 3,500 words, giving the pronunciation, the meaning, and the location of the text where the word occurs for the first time.

Exhaustive Articles on Biblical History, Geography, Topography, Natural History, Ethnology, Botany, Chronology, Music and Poetry; a Complete Harmony of the Gospels, Tables of Parables, Miracles, Prophecies, Prayers, Money, Weights and Measures, Jewish Sects and Orders, etc.

TWELVE FULL-PAGE MAPS IN COLORS.

Every proper name in the text is syllabified and accented, and has the vowels marked according to the most authoritative modern standards of pronunciation. The text is in exact conformity with that of the world-famous Oxford S. S. Teacher's Bible. All the valuable "Helps to the Study of the Bible" contained in the Oxford Bible are retained.

The only Teacher's Bible with a self-pronouncing text. No similar Bible was ever obtainable heretofore; in fact, no publishers ever attempted its publication.

"The essence of fifty expensive volumes, by men of sacred learning, is condensed in these 'Helps.'"

REV. THEODORE L. CUYLER, D.D., Brooklyn, New York, in the "New York Evangelist:" "Of all Bibles yet issued in our country, the most superb in execution and completeness of contents is the 'Self-Pronouncing S. S. Teacher's Bible.' Sabbath-school teachers will find this elegant volume a little library of information in itself."

REV. ALVAH HOVEY, D. D., President of, and Professor in, the Baptist Theological Seminary, Newton Centre, Mass.: "It pleases me very greatly. I regard the help which it affords to a correct pronunciation of Scripture proper names as doubling the value of the edition. I trust the book will be received as it deserves to be."

We will send this Bible for $1.65 to all subscribers who will pay their subscription for one year in advance, provided they have not had the benefit of other premium offers. In that case they must write us for special terms. When we say a year in advance we mean one year from this date, i. e., August, '96. A little later it will be September, '96.

N. B.—Any subscriber who will pay his subscription for two years in advance can get this Bible for $1.35; and this, too, regardless of whether they have had the benefit of other premium offers.

The "Civic Federation," of Chicago, a citizens' organization for the enforcement of the law, is making things excessively warm for the mayor and the street commissioners, who are now threatening to break up the Federation.

The meeting of the Catholic Total Abstinence Association of America, a society which has more than 60 000 members, will be held in New York on Wednesday next, and is expected to indorse the Sunday closing of the saloons.

The validity of the Chinese exclusion act has been called into question by the arrest of four Chinamen at Detroit, and it is probable that Judge Grosscup, of the United States Court, will be called upon to render a decision upon which the fate of the law may depend.

The cruiser Columbia, which started from Southampton, England, a week ago, under orders from the Navy Department to make the trip across the Atlantic at full speed, arrived early Friday morning, having made the run in six days, 23 hours and 49 minutes. The average speed per hour was 18.41 knots.

The "Location," a patch of some hundred-odd company houses, near Spring Valley, Ill., inhabited almost exclusively by negroes, was on Aug. 4 visited by the vengeance of 500 miners from the city and given a taste of mob violence. The negroes were run ont of town at the point of guns, owing to outrages they had committed.

The Salvation Army is trying to save Nebraska City, Neb., under great difficulties. A few nights ago their open-air performance was interrupted by the police, who arrested the whole army and put them in jail. Shortly afterward, however, it was discovered that they had committed no offense known to the law, and they were set at liberty.

FOREIGN.

In the high schools of Japan the study of English is compulsory.

In Germany they have been quietly taking down the tablets and other memorials erected in honor of Prof. Koch, and his valueless consumption cure.

The German exports for the past six months show an increase of 160,000,000 marks, compared with the same period of 1894. The increase in sugar alone is 45,300,000 marks.

Prince Bismarck is in excellent health just now. He takes daily walks and drives, but Dr. Schweninger insists upon a plain diet, and orders him to avoid excitement and visitors.

Captain-General Campos, in charge of the Spanish troops in Cuba, has issued an edict denying to the press the right to publish anything but "official" news about the revolution in Cuba.

Some scientists have been measuring Bismarck's head, and calculating its contents. They find it very big, and figure that his brain weighs 1,867 grammes, about one-third more than the average.

It is reported that the cholera is raging terribly in parts of Japan. One thousand one hundred and eighty-three deaths are reported in Yokohama. The disease was brought to Japan by the forces returning from the war in China and Corea.

Although it is three years since the monarchical form of government was overthrown in Hawaii and a republic proclaimed, the future of the island has been by no means settled. The perpetuation of the present form of government is in no sense assured, as it is supported and backed by but a very small proportion of the total population.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

BY REV. HENRY H. ARRENS.

Theme for Prayer Meeting.

THE HEALING OF THE NOBLEMAN'S SON.

(John iv, 46-54.)

1. The nobleman of Capernaum hearing of the Master's presence at Galilee, came to him for assistance.

(1) The miracle of Cana had its desired effect. He was spoken of and sought for. The conversion of a soul in the church will have a similar effect.

(2) The nobleman was wiser than Naaman, who first came to the king of Samaria instead of applying directly to the prophet Elijah.

2. We admire the nobleman's solicitude for his afflicted son. Our children are our wards. Their well-being matter of greatest concern.

(1) See to it that our children develop in body healthily. Sturdy, strong, robust.

(2) Their intellect should acquire all possible cultivation. To the credit of the Jews it must be said that, as an average, they spend more for education than Christians.

(3) Their spiritual necessities require diligent attention. They must be converted, become children of God.

3. Christ granted the nobleman's request, though in a different manner than was expected. Should come with the petitioner to heal his son; instead of that, he cured him miraculously at once.

(1) Our conversion usually takes place differently from what we have preconceived.

(2) The nobleman besought Christ to come to the assistance of his boy. Intercessory prayer effectual.

(3) Urged Christ to immediate action. "Ere my child die."

(4) Believed Christ's statement as to the cure of his son. Belief. It is laying hold on God's promises.

4. The nobleman left us a noble example in making sure that Christ hath power miraculously to help and relieve.

(1) Inquired as to the exact time of the cure of his son. Found that it had been at the very moment when Christ had assured him, "Thy son liveth."

(2) Blessed assurance! So the Bereans subsequently searched in the Scriptures daily whether those things were so.

(3) Blessed assurance! "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." (John vii, 17.)

First Louisiana State Epworth League Conference.

The first State Conference of Louisiana Epworthians is fixed for Oct. 3, 4 and 5, and the Louisiana Avenue Church, in New Orleans, La., has been selected as the place for holding it. There are probably not more than twenty-five or thirty Leagues in the bounds of the Louisiana Conference, but others are being organized, and we confidently expect that our whole State will become alive on this subject after the October Conference has met and its influence gone forth over our territory. We trust that our pastors will take active measures to organize Leagues where there are none, and see that delegates are sent from each League. Texas, Mississippi and Alabama have all had very successful State gatherings. It is Louisiana's turn now, and the members of the New Orleans Union Epworth League, under whose auspices the Louisiana State Conference has been enterprised, are looking for a grand gathering of our young Methodists at Louisiana Avenue Church in October. Let them not be disappointed. Bishop Galloway, Dr. Sam A. Steele, and other eminent men of our Southern Methodism, will be asked to address the Conference.

JOHN T. SAWYER.

Typho-Malaria Fever.

"Last Fall my little boy, aged ten years, had a severe attack of typho-malaria fever. His life was despaired of by the physician, and we called in a consulting physician. He recovered in a measure, but the disease seemed to leave the system in a very depleted condition. This Spring he complained of pains in the back and head, and I began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla, and he had taken it only a short time before he ceased to complain. My father, who is seventy-seven years old, has taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, and seems to be better and stronger than he has been for a long time."—Mrs. Lucy H. Moreland, Mt. Lebanon, La.

Continuous rains have ruined the rice crops in many parts of Japan, and a famine is feared. Many lives have already been lost and the damage done is enormous.

Advices at the Agricultural Department announces that a manufacturer at Anniston, Ala., has secured the contract for equipping the city of Tokio, Japan, with water pipes. Manufacturers in England, Germany, Belgium and other European countries competed in the bidding, but the Alabama contractor secured the job. The water pipes are to be shipped to Tokio via Liverpool.

To Get the Best Teachers

School Boards, Colleges or Families can obtain the names of efficient teachers FREE OF CHARGE by writing THE SCHOOL AGENCY, BIRMINGHAM, ALA., stating the kind of teacher wanted, the position to be filled, salary and other particulars. This Agency is endorsed and patronized by the leading Educators and Institutions of the South and Southwest.

FIRST GRADE successful teachers desiring enrollment should write for circulars.

The Malone College,

FOR GIRLS ONLY,

Is situated in the city of Holly Springs, which is the highest point in the State; hence is free from malarial influences. Accessible from all points, as it is at the junction of the Illinois Central and Kansas City railways.

The boarding department is under the special control of the president and his wife, who, with the teachers, eat at the same table with the pupils—all faring alike.

While the property of the college does not belong to the church, which is the case with many of our Conference schools, it is under the auspices of the North Mississippi Conference, and every teacher is a member of the M. E. Church, South; three of them Methodist preachers' daughters, and one a Methodist preacher's widow. The preachers of the North Mississippi Conference are charged only half price, including board.

Prices have been put down to correspond with the low prices of everything.

The fifth annual session will begin Sept. 17, 1895, and run nine months. No money spent or time lost for elaborate commencements.

Our work free to the inspection of the public at all times.

Expenses per month:

Board, fuel, lights and laundry	$10
Tuition in Collegiate Department	3
Tuition in Academic Department	2

Buy Gold Mine Stock?

No!!!

Why not?

Because some bad mines have been put on the market. Would you refuse to take a good $5 bill to day because you got a counterfeit yesterday? Only good things are counterfeited. Millions have been made in gold mines. Millions will be. Watch the fortunes made in the next two years, and verify this prophecy. Investigate us thoroughly—the more the better. You will find that we have the intrinsic value—an ideal investment, because safe principal is combined with high rate of interest. We can prove the principal safe, because of natural conditions. No bond or mortgage on the property. Estimated annual dividends from ore in sight, on capital stock, 16⅔ per cent, but to those who come in now on special offer, there is an opportunity to get 66 per cent. You can invest from $10 upwards. Write for prospectus, map, list of directors, etc., and if as a careful investor, you are not convinced—

Keep your money—We don't want it.

DESTINY.

BY ERNEST W. SHURTLEFF.

Live thou to-day thy best, and fill
Thy noblest sphere, through good or ill.
He need not fear the future's way
Who lives a noble life to-day.

Fulfill thy fair ideals now;
Let men to-day see on thy brow
That crown beyond all earthly cost
That some have left to time, and lost;

For many be the minds that say,
"We will be great some future day!"
And, like the mirage on the sea,
Their dreams but mock reality.

O, think not future years can give
A grace that doth not in thee live,
That hath not of thy toil and care
Been wrought to make thy spirit fair.

Read from the tablets of thy heart
Thy destiny in what thou art,
And know the promise of the goal
Is in the attitude of soul.

Awake then! seize the present time,
And mark it by some deed sublime!
Smite down thy sin, bid sloth away,
And in thyself be great to-day!

So live, and lo! the humblest things
Shall lift thee as on eagles' wings,
And thou thy guerdon sure shalt see,
For as thou livest thou shalt be.
